ETON v. HARROW.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 13, 14.—The Schools' match of 1888 resulted in a victory by Harrow by 156 runs, and on the cricket shown at Lord's there can be no question whatever that the better side proved successful. We believe, however, that the most faithful supporters of Harrow cricket were surprised at the nature of the victory, and we shall probably not be far outside the truth in suggesting that, while the Harrow boys played above their form, the Etonians fell below what might reasonably have been expected of them. Up to a certain point it was a very even and interesting game, but before the drawing of stumps on the first day Harrow had gained such an advantage that little doubt could be felt as to the ultimate result. Before going into any details of the play it may be well to say that Eton had only three "old choices" available—Bromley-Davenport, the captain, Tollemache and Bathurst; while in the Harrow team there were five members of the side which had been beaten in 1887—the two MacLarens, Watson, Ramsay, and Jackson.

Harrow's first innings commenced at five minutes past eleven on the Friday, the wicket being very slow and difficult from the effects of recent rains, and was all over by one o'clock for the paltry total of 80. Five wickets fell for 17 runs, and only some plucky play by Jackson, Gilroy, and Roffey averted a complete collapse. There was every excuse for failure, but the total was certainly discouraging. H. W. Studd—one of the youngest members of the famous family—bowled with great success. Bowling medium pace, with rather a slinging action, he seemed to have considerable command over the ball. Pechell, a very slow left-handed bowler, was on most of the time with him, and we may take this opportunity of saying that Eton was sadly handicapped by the fact that Bromley-Davenport had almost entirely lost the bowling of which so much was thought in the two previous seasons. There was nothing to account for his decline, but his arm was lower, and he had become quite ineffective. Eton went in at twenty minutes past one, and started so badly that three good wickets were lost for 9 runs. At lunch time the score was 22, and afterwards the team did sufficiently well to pass Harrow's total with six wickets down, Yate-Lee hitting in capital style for 37—so far the best innings in the match. However, when the last wicket fell the total was only 106, or 26 runs to the good. Jackson (right-hand fast) bowled admirably.

When Harrow's second innings commenced at ten minutes to five the wicket had improved wonderfully, and the last two hours' cricket practically decided the match. Two wickets fell for 4 runs, and then the batting gained the upper hand. Hoare and Watson carried the score to 74—an invaluable stand—and then Hoare and Jackson punished the bowling so severely that when seven o'clock came the total had been raised to 167, Hoare being not out 80, and Jackson not out 50. Both boys played admirably, and in the last three-quarters of an hour scored 67 runs, the fielding, as was not unnatural after such a long day, becoming rather loose towards the close. On the Saturday morning the innings was finished off in rather less than an hour and a half for a total of 234. Hoare and Jackson were parted at 188, having put on 114 for the fourth wicket. Hoare had the great distinction of scoring over 100, following among Harrow batsmen the late A. W. T. Daniel, A. K. Watson, and Eustace Crawley, and except that he was badly missed at point when he had scored 73, and gave a chance low down at mid-off with his total at 76, his innings, in respect both of hitting and defence, was a very fine one. He was at the wicket three hours and a quarter, and his 108 comprised ten 4's, nine 3's, ten 2's, and 21 singles. Jackson's capital 59 included seven 4's, a 3, and seven 2's.

Eton had 209 to get to win—a formidable task for a school eleven—and all doubts as to the result were soon at an end. In a bad light the batsmen seemed to lose all their nerve in playing Jackson's bowling, and so complete was the failure that four wickets fell for nine runs and eight for 17. Goad and Hodgson afterwards made something of a stand, but for a total of 52 the innings was all over, Harrow winning by 156 runs. Jackson and Hoare had an enormous share in gaining the victory, the former scoring 21 and 59, and taking eleven wickets for 68 runs, and Hoare, in addition to his innings of 108, taking five wickets for 58 runs. The only Etonian who could look back upon the match with any great amount of personal satisfaction was H. W. Studd, who worked very hard for his side, and took in all fourteen wickets. Jackson's performance for Harrow was all the more remarkable, as he had been ill a little time before the match.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN 1888.

THE batting and bowling averages of the principal public schools will be found in the pages which follow, and so also will the scores of some few of the most interesting games between the best-known elevens. By the courtesy and kind assistance of Mr. O. R. Borradaile we are enabled to make some remarks upon the form shown at the different schools, and to draw attention to the most conspicuous of the boys who have played. In his communication to the editor, Mr. Borradaile, who has seen a great deal of this class of cricket for some years past, says that, while there has been some very promising play, there has been little that was sensational. The batting averages have naturally, on the slow wickets, come out below the figures of recent years, but there have been two remarkable exceptions—M. R. Jardine, of Fettes School, averaging over 77 runs per innings, with an aggregate of 623 runs, and H. B. Champain, of Cheltenham College, with an aggregate of 419, averaging just over 45. These boys should certainly be heard of in first-class cricket. Jardine is going to Cambridge, where his career will be watched with interest, but Champain has already entered Sandhurst, and therefore will probably have but little time for important play.

With regard to the bowlers E. C. Streatfeild, of Charterhouse, comes out far above everyone else. Our correspondent considers it not too much to say that he is the best school bowler who has come out for years. His analysis shows seventy-two wickets, at an average of 5.67 per wicket. As Streatfeild is also a good bat he must probably be considered the best all-round school boy of the year. H. W. Studd, of Eton, did well on occasions, and especially against Harrow at Lord's. C. B. Combes, of Bedford Grammar School, was very successful, securing sixty-six wickets for less than 8 runs each. F. R. Harvey-Bathurst, of Eton, did well for a lob bowler. F. S. Jackson, for Harrow, took thirty-two wickets for less than 11 runs each; but, save for these few, boy bowlers did not do so well as they should have done considering the advantage the condition of the ground often gave them. As to fielding there is the same old story of neglect to tell. Boys want to be great either as batsmen or bowlers, and school authorities and the professionals engaged do not sufficiently insist upon the importance of good fielding. There is too much net practice, and captains of school teams, with few exceptions, do not insist upon the team learning to field methodically and regularly. The value of net practice, properly understood, is to give the professional his best chance of coaching individual batsmen whom he wants to bring on or to cure defects in style or method. When a boy is not being coached, ten minutes at the nets is quite enough, and the rest of the time he should be in the field. There is another matter that should be mentioned, and that is that every school now tries to do away with the long-stop, just because in first-class cricket the great wicket-keepers of the day are able to dispense with that highly important fieldsman. It takes years of practice to become a Sherwin or a Pilling, and many school matches have been lost lately owing to the extras being needlessly heavy. There are very few wicket-keepers equal to the task of taking all sorts of bowling, and a boy of moderate ability is handicapped by the knowledge that if the ball passes him it will go to the boundary. Mr. Borradaile is quite right when he says that not in one case in a hundred is the school captain wise in doing away with the long-stop, except of course to very slow bowling. A run saved is a run earned, and the equally old saying is equally true that it is easier to save runs than to make them at the pinch of the game. The remarks on the schools which follow must be read in conjunction with the averages:—

BEDFORD GRAMMAR SCHOOL were fortunate in possessing a very good all-round man in their captain, H. S. Briggs, who had an average of 31 for twenty-two innings; his batting is very patient, and he made an excellent captain. A. D. Piper is a most consistent cricketer, and has a better average than his captain, but is not quite such a good bat. W. F. Surtees started the season well, but fell off towards the end. C. B. Combes is by far the best bowler in the school, and is also an excellent field. R. F. G. Chaldecott is a useful bat with plenty of pluck, can bowl very well at times, but must be careful not to over-bowl himself. The fielding of the team is above the average.—BEDFORD MODERN SCHOOL had A. O. Jones as their captain, who was a useful man, having a batting average of 20, and securing thirty-nine wickets for 12 runs each. L. G. Brown had a fine average, is an excellent bat, and ought to be very useful to the school next year; he stands well up and hits hard, his driving being very effective; is also a good wicket-keeper. G. E. Smythies is a good medium pace bowler. H. P. Buchan has improved as a bat, and is a fair fast bowler. R. C. Cheyne is a careful bat, but does not hit sufficiently. The team should pay more attention to their fielding, which is very unequal.—CHARTERHOUSE SCHOOL possessed in E. C. Streatfeild the finest school bowler of the year; an excellent bat, and a successful captain. H. Price is a good bat and has an excellent average. R. Gatehouse, a useful cricketer, fell off at the end of the season.—CHELTENHAM COLLEGE were unfortunate in having seven of their thirteen matches unfinished. H. B. Champain, one of the best public school bats of the year, has sound defence and splendid driving powers. He can also keep wicket fairly well, and he made a most successful captain. C. V. Davey, a good left-hand bat and bowler, has been of great service to the eleven. L. G. Mayers is a free scorer, though apt to hit too much, and is a useful fielder.

hame was the best all-round man, a free bat, an excellent field, and a fair change bowler. J. B. Wood, who must get over his anxiety to score too quickly, is a good bat when set. A. J. L. Hill is the best bowler in the team. L. G. A. Collins has good defence, but is too slow.—RADLEY COLLEGE showed a decided improvement, winning six matches as against two in 1887. According to accounts they are very slow between the wickets, especially over the COLLEGE, with another half-hour, would probably have beaten Eton. V. F. Leese is an excellent bat. A. H. C. Barker was successful, and was well supported by C. W. Little. In bowling A. J. Boger does not seem to have been tried enough.—FETTES SCHOOL claim, in M. R. Jardine, one of the best public-school bats of the year, and it is not only in batting that he excels, for he took twenty-four wickets at an average cost of 6 runs. G. T. Campbell, who comes next, is a good bat, but he is too fond of wasting his time at the nets in vigorous hitting. T. E. Bayley is the only other batsman having a double-figure average.—LORETTO SCHOOL have always had good men. This year they had a capital all-round man in F. E. Woodhead, who has been in the team since 1884. D. L. Evans is a plucky and a lucky bat, a most useful man to have on your side. R. H. Dunn is an excellent lob-bowler.—MERCHISTON SCHOOL had a fairly successful year. They owe this almost entirely to their good bowling, the batting being very moderate. Like their opponents, Fettes and Loretto, this school had a long tail.

Mr. Borradaile, after thanking his correspondents at the various schools for sending him information, makes the following suggestion, which seems to us to be a good one—that a match should be arranged every year, about the first week in August, at Lord's, between a fairly strong M.C.C. and Ground team and an eleven chosen from the public schools who never play at Lord's. This team should be under the captaincy of some player of great experience like I. D. Walker or A. J. Webbe, or at least someone who has seen a good deal of boy cricket, and knows its weak points as well as its strength. During the first week in August all the schools are in vacation, and the proposed match would give many young fellows an opportunity of playing under more public conditions than they otherwise enjoy. Several schools would, of course, be excluded from this match, but a very good team could have been made up last year of, say, V. F. Leese, Winchester; M. R. Jardine, Fettes; R. H. Dun, Loretto; C. J. Richards, Lancing; L. L. Reid, Tonbridge; E. C. Streatfeild, Charterhouse; H. S. Briggs and C. B. Combes, Bedford Grammar School; C. R. H. Gresson, Lancing; C. J. Kortright, Tonbridge; and H. H. Gray, Merchiston.
