ETON v. HARROW.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 12, 13.—As in the previous year the schools' match resulted in a victory for Harrow, but the Eton eleven played up with far more resolution than in 1888, and, in the all-important matter of the wicket, had everything against them. Harrow had only three old choices left, but those three—Jackson, Hoare, and A. C. M'Laren—had, twelve months before, been the best cricketers at the school, and it was very fortunate they stayed on. Eton, on the other hand, had five of their old eleven, viz., Bromley-Davenport (the captain), Studd, Jones, Tollemache, and Hon. R. A. Ward.

The opening day was anything but a favourable one for cricket. Rain, after threatening for a long time, came down for half an hour in such torrents that before six o'clock it was determined to draw stumps. Curiously enough, as soon as the decision had been arrived at, the weather improved, the hour between six and seven being the pleasantest of the whole day. The day's cricket, so long as it lasted, was entirely occupied by the first innings of Harrow, which commenced just after eleven o'clock, and ended at five minutes to four for a total of 272, the last wicket having only just fallen when the rain came down and put an end to the play. Though not fast the wicket was always easy, and the Harrow batsmen made the most of their advantage in winning the toss. When two wickets had fallen for 19, it seemed unlikely that anything exceptional would be done, but after the time of M'Laren's dismissal the batting got the upper hand. Wills and Hoare were the first pair to master Eton's bowling, and both played extremely well. Hoare, who made 108 in the previous year, batted in capital style, and seemed thoroughly well set when at 81 he played a ball on to his wicket. Wills left at 121 for an admirable 50, and then Jackson and Napier hit the score up to 206 during their partnership. Jackson, the Harrow captain—no doubt the best cricketer in the two elevens—played with great vigour for his 68, making them in an hour and a half, but his innings was by no means a faultless one, inasmuch as he was missed at cover point when he had scored 15, and again at square leg when his total was 32. Among his hits were five 4's, six 3's, and ten 2's. The Eton bowling did not give the impression of being particularly good, H. W. Studd in particular failing to maintain the promise he had shown in the previous year. On the other hand, Bromley-Davenport, who had quite lost his bowling in 1888, showed something like a return to form.

So far as the weather was concerned the second day afforded ample compensation for the disappointment on the first, for, after a somewhat threatening morning, the clouds blew over and the afternoon proved bright and fine. There was an extremely long day's cricket, play being resumed at five minutes past eleven, and the winning hit being made for Harrow at rather more than a quarter-past seven in the evening. Such a tremendous outing as this put the stamina of the young players to a very severe test, and, as was inevitable, some of them showed signs of fatigue before the game was concluded. With the wicket damaged by rain, and in face of a total of 272, Eton had nothing to hope for but a draw, and the struggle they made was eminently creditable. There is no need to follow the cricket in close detail, and it will be sufficient to draw attention to a few of the more prominent features. Eton's first innings began at five minutes past eleven, and ended at a quarter-past three for a total of 169, while their second innings opened at twenty minutes to four, and ended at twenty-five past six. Under the circumstances, totals of 169 and 152 were quite as good as anyone could have expected. Bromley-Davenport set a capital example to his team, his two scores of 81 and 42 being the result of very plucky and determined cricket. Tollemache also played very well in both innings, and Crum's first score of 33 was a capital display of careful cricket on a slow ground. Perhaps the most remarkable innings of all, however, was the 35 of G. B. Gosling. This young cricketer—the most juvenile member of the eleven we believe—played with an amount of judgment and patience that would have done credit to a seasoned professional. His physical power was very limited, but he never attempted more than he could safely accomplish, and no one could have made a better effort to save his side from being beaten. Going in first, he stayed while 142 runs were obtained, and was the eighth man out. He was forty minutes at the wicket before he made a run, and at the end of an hour his score was only 5. Under some circumstances such cricket as his would have been very tiresome to look at, but everybody knew that he was doing the best thing possible—trying to save the game—and when at last he was got rid of he was rewarded by some of the heartiest cheers heard during the match. Harrow had fifty runs to get to win, and fifty minutes left for play, the task being by no means an easy one after their long day in the field. However, they set to work with a will, and always being well in front of the clock won the match by nine wickets with a quarter of an hour to spare. It was unlucky for Eton that Studd, after bowling one over, put his knee out, and had to give up the ball, but, inasmuch as 29 runs had been made when the accident happened, we do not think for a moment the result of the game was affected. We certainly believe the better side won, but by getting first innings and scoring 272 before the rain affected the wicket Harrow gained an immense advantage. It should be stated, in conclusion, that 5,542 people paid for admission on the first day, and 6,375 on the second.

Sixty-four matches have been played, of which Eton have won twenty-seven, Harrow twenty-seven, and ten have been drawn. This is the generally published record, but Harrow men object very strongly to the game in 1805 being treated as a regular match between the two schools, contending that it is no more correct to count that than the fixture in 1857 for boys under twenty which has been rejected. R. B. Hoare's 108 in 1838 was the ninth three-figure innings in the matches between the schools, the previous great scorers having been E. Bayley 152 in 1841; A. K. Watson 135 in 1835; A. W. Ridley 117 in 1871; C. P. Foley 114 in 1886; W. F. Forbe; 113 in 1876; A. W. T. Daniel 112 not out in 1860; C. J. Ottaway 108 in 1869 and E. Crawley 100 in 1885.

RUGBY V. MARLBOROUGH.

Played at Lord's, Wednesday, Thursday, July 31, August 1.—A capital match, but despite all their efforts the Rugby boys could never make up for their inglorious first innings. The wicket was a trifle slow at the start, but they had no excuse whatever for getting out for 66. Marlborough won by six wickets, and it was the general opinion that they had the better side. Mr. Collins batted particularly well.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN 1889.

In the following pages will be found the full scores of some of the most interesting school games during the season, together with the batting and bowling averages of the chief teams, while for the introductory remarks on the various players we are again indebted to Mr. O. R. Borrodaile, who desires publicly to thank the various captains and secretaries for the information furnished him with regard to good individual performances. Mr. Borrodaile says that the season of 1889 did not produce anything out of the common, so far as batting was concerned, no one man standing out above the others as a star, but that as some compensation for the lack of special talent there was a very good average of merit, some of the elevens being able to boast of as many as seven or eight double figure averages. As brilliant individual batsmen, however, Mr. Borrodaile might, perhaps, have made exceptions in favour of F. S. Jackson and J. Douglas. In bowling he thinks there was no one to compare with E. C. Streatfield, who did such great things for Charterhouse in 1888, but that, nevertheless, there were many achievements of more than ordinary merit. For instance, A. W. Dixon, of Rugby, took forty-one wickets at an average cost of about $9\frac{1}{2}$ runs each; R. H. Dunn, of Loretto, forty-five at a cost of just under 10 runs each; W. P. Donaldson, of the same school, forty-nine wickets for less than 8 runs each; G. F. H. Berkeley, of Wellington, forty-seven wickets for a shade over 8 runs apiece; W. H. F. Read, of Oundle School, fifty-six wickets for $8\frac{1}{2}$ each; and W. Baker, of Cheltenham, forty-seven for 12.20. Other good records were those of the two Winchester bowlers, Hill and Boger, who took forty-two wickets each at a cost respectively of 12.40 and 13.39. Mr. Borrodaile says he has received very general complaints as to the fielding, a department of the game in which he very properly observes that school teams should never be defective, missed catches and slovenly work of any kind being quite without excuse among cricketers who have so many opportunities of playing together. He suggests that less time should be given up to batting practice at the nets, and that, say twice a week, catching should be systematically practised by itself. Mr. Borrodaile thinks that sometimes this could be done with advantage by the boys simply throwing the ball from one to another, but for ourselves we should always prefer the school elevens to field out and have catches hit to them, as in that case the catches are the same sort as those given in an actual match.

The HARROW team did not come under our correspondent's personal observation, but we know that various cricketers keenly interested in the matter considered the eleven one of the best the school had had for years, and certainly the display given against Eton at Lord's went very far to confirm this highly favourable estimate. F. S. Jackson, the captain, is undoubtedly a cricketer of whom a great deal may be expected, and, unless he should, like others before him, lose his form, we may take it for granted that he will get his blue at Cambridge. He is a fine free bat, with great punishing powers, and a very good fast bowler. As regards the actual value of his bowling, however, we must wait until he has been tried against first rate elevens, many public school bowlers of late years having quite failed after their school days to sustain their early reputations. Harrow's bowling, apart from Jackson, was not strong, but the team was rich in run-getters, the best after the captain being Napier, Wills and R. B. Hoare, the last-named of whom, it will be remembered, scored 108 against Eton in 1888.

Inasmuch as ETON were beaten by both Winchester and Harrow they cannot be said to have had a successful season, but with all the worst of the wicket, they batted with far greater resolution at Lord's than they displayed in the previous year, and in their match with Winchester they were beaten by a team which, according to Thoms, the umpire, and other good judges who were present, showed the finest fielding of the season. Without possessing any exceptional talent, Eton had a number of fairly good cricketers. H. R. Bromley-Davenport, the captain, batted with considerable success, but, though now and then he bowled better than in the previous year, he never got back to anything like his high standard of 1886-7. The Hon. J. H. Ward was the most successful bowler at the school, taking thirty four wickets at a cost of a little over 12 runs apiece. The Hon. M. G. Tollemache batted in a style to give good hope of his future, and H. W. Studd, without sustaining his bowling promise of 1888, batted well, and was a useful man. G. B. Gosling, the youngest member of the team, we believe, earned the gratitude of all Etonians by his patient defence against Harrow at Lord's, and though he did not quite succeed in saving the match his efforts could not be too highly praised.

WINCHESTER had a decidedly successful season, and, even if they had done nothing beyond their wonderful win against Eton, they would still have been entitled to most honourable mention. Reference has already been made to their two bowlers, Hill and Boger, but it should be added that T. B. Case proved an excellent captain and a sound bat. This gentleman, it will be interesting to cricketers to know, is a son of Mr. T. Case, who was in Mr. R. A. H. Mitchell's famous Oxford elevens in 1864-5, and during recent years the permanent treasurer of the Oxford University

Cricket Club—a position, however, which he has recently given up. B. L. Richmond, whose steady batting resulted in his obtaining the very fine average of 37, will be a more valuable cricketer when he has improved his fielding.

Inasmuch as they beat Rugby at Lord's—always the height of their ambition—and also defeated Cheltenham, the MARLBOROUGH eleven certainly had a most successful season. From what was seen in London, and from the batting and bowling tables, the team would seem to have been much above the average, and Collins and Hill especially showed themselves very good batsmen.

RUGBY only managed to win three matches out of eleven, and A. W. Dixon, the captain, was so far from maintaining his batting form of the previous year that his average declined from 27 to 13. He, however, played a capital innings against Marlborough at Lord's, and as a bowler he made a very marked improvement. Rutter and F. J. Nicholls also declined in batting, but the latter bowled well, taking thirty-five wickets at something over 13 runs each. It is rather a rare thing to say of a school nowadays that the bowling is stronger than the batting, but such seems to have been the case with Rugby in 1889, and, had the team been a little better off for run-getters, a better record would assuredly have been obtained.

CHELTENHAM COLLEGE seemed to be rather weak at the beginning of the season, but came on well towards the close. They did not succeed in winning against either Marlborough or Clifton, but in the latter match they had very much the best of a draw. W. Hodges is described as being a really good steady bat. W. Baker, a medium pace left-handed bowler, is said to have the happy knack of making the ball “curl in the air.” That he is something above the ordinary run is proved by his average. J. Campbell was thought to be one of the most promising bats of the eleven.

CHARTERHOUSE sadly missed the services of their captain and crack bowler in 1888, E. C. Stratfield, and were only able to win one match, but it is only fair to say that in two or three engagements they experienced very bad luck. Neither in batting nor bowling does there seem to have been any special talent in the team, but G. O. Smith is described as being a good bat, who should be careful not to try and hit straight balls to square leg. B. W. Holman proved a useful bowler.

REPTON SCHOOL had a very good eleven, and were particularly strong in batting, C. B. Fry, R. C. N. Palairt, and L. C. H. Palairt averaging respectively 36, 35, and 29. So even indeed was the batting all through the side that every member of the team can show a double-figure average, and six of them one of over 20. The brothers Palairt accomplished one especially fine performance against the Lincoln Lindum Club. L. C. H. Palairt comes out at the head of the bowling averages, having taken fifty-six wickets for less than 13 runs each, and when we add that, in addition to his performances in batting and bowling, he proved an excellent captain, it will be easily understood that he was an invaluable member of the eleven.

TONBRIDGE SCHOOL only won two matches out of eleven, so they cannot have had at all a successful season. It should be said in excuse for them, however, that they often had to meet very strong sides, and that on several occasions they were without the services of their captain. There was certainly no Rashleigh among the batsmen, but M. O'C. Tandy obtained a very fair average. This gentleman, who must be cautioned against an over fondness for back play, is the captain for 1890.

UPPINGHAM also had an unsatisfactory season, winning only two matches out of nine, losing two, and drawing the other five. They succeeded, however, in winning their match against Haileybury by an innings and 73 runs. A. D. Alderson proved himself a very able captain. The best bat on the side was certainly T. Hemmant, who, though his biggest score was only 61, gained the capital average of 35. He is described as possessing a very fine off-drive and strong defence. Bowling seems to have been the weak point of the eleven.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL cricket has been at a low ebb for some time, but 1889 brought some improvement on recent form, and the team had a very fair season, gaining victories over the Old Carthusians, Old Westminsters, and the Masters' Eleven. S. H. Gregory had the honour of heading the batting and bowling averages, and his innings of 106 against the Old Westminsters was highly spoken of. F. Street, the captain, was also a useful batsman. J. O. Powell, the best bowler on the side, is so young that it seems reasonable to expect a good deal of him. He bowls left-handed and gets a good deal on the ball. Unfortunately, he was overworked on more than one occasion.

SHREWSBURY, like Repton, had a very fine batting team, nine members of the eleven averaging double figures. In bowling also the team were said to be rather above the average.

ROSSALL, considering that only two of the 1888 team were available, had quite a successful season, and won their matches both with Loretto and Malvern. The former victory was due in a considerable measure to the bowling of H. S. Goodwin, who in the second innings of Loretto took five wickets for 7 runs. A. E. Marriott was a very good captain, and met with great success as a bowler in the same match.

RADLEY COLLEGE managed to win their one school match—against Bradfield—but their team does not appear to have included any cricketers of more than ordinary ability.

LANCING sadly missed the services of their 1888 captain, and did not have such a good side as in the previous year. They possessed, however, a very good man in the captain, C. J. R. Richards, who later in the season was tried for Hampshire. He is a left-handed bat, with strong defence, and when well set is said to be a very hard wicket to get. It is thought that he might, with advantage to the team, have bowled far more often than he did, but this on the part of a school leader was certainly a fault on the right side.

DULWICH COLLEGE had a very strong team, and in Mr. Borrodaile's opinion would have made a good fight against any of the other schools. In J. Douglas they certainly possessed one of the best bats they have ever had. This young cricketer, a brother, we believe, of Mr. A. P. Douglas, who assisted Surrey once or twice, and holds a commission in the Army, had the truly splendid average of 58.7. It seems certain that he was one of the finest school batsmen of the year. He is thought to have some little weakness on the off side, but his defence is excellent, and he has considerable hitting powers. Should he be able to continue the game there is every reason to expect great things of him.

WELLINGTON COLLEGE show a very good record of seven victories against three defeats, this large measure of success being due, in a considerable degree, to their smart fielding. The brothers Mordaunt were the mainstays of the batting, E. C. Mordaunt having an average of 35 for eleven innings, and G. J. being close behind him with 34. In the match against Haileybury they scored 85 and 90 respectively. G. F. H. Berkeley, to whose performance reference has been made at the commencement of this article, had one of the best records among the public-school bowlers of the year. Against the Old Boys he took six wickets for 35 runs, and against Haileybury he also met with marked success.

Of the Scotch Schools LORETTO are to be congratulated on gaining the championship, and also on possessing a very good team. Their weak point was their fielding. P. C. Cohran and D. L. Evans were the best bats on the side, and all through the season they played very consistently. In R. H. Dunn Loretto possessed an exceedingly good lob bowler. For this kind of bowling an average of less than 10 runs each for twenty-five wickets was certainly quite out of the common.

FETTES missed the services of M. R. Jardine, but T. E. Bailey proved a very fair substitute for that cricketer, obtaining a batting average of over 30, and a bowling average of just over 12 runs each for thirty-eight wickets. The bowlers on the side were severely handicapped by the indifferent fielding of the team. With these remarks we conclude, and leave the scores and averages to speak for themselves.

ETON V. WINCHESTER.

Played at ETON Friday, Saturday, June 28, 29.—There was a large and brilliant gathering of spectators on the playing field at Eton on both days of this match, and the following of each school had its day of triumph. On Friday the game went all in favour of Eton, for they first got rid of their rivals for 139, and then scored 191 themselves for the loss of six wickets. For each side there were two good batting performances, Case making 61 out of 86 for Winchester, and being well backed up by Little, while for the home eleven, Tollemache and Studd scored 115 between them—Tollemache making 66 out of that number. Play began on the second day soon after 10 o'clock, and when the remaining Eton batsmen had been dismissed for an additional 25 runs, and they were left with an advantage of 77, it certainly seemed as if the best Winchester could hope for was a draw. When the visitors began their second innings, however, the entire character of the game changed. Case and Little again did well, but it was left for F. Leveson-Gower to play the highest and best innings of the match. In the end Winchester ran up a capital total of 255, which left Eton 179 to win, but only about two hours to make them in. It was, of course, hardly possible that the Light Blues would get the runs in the time, but their friends confidently looked forward to their making a creditable draw of it. There was, however, a sensational start, Hill taking five wickets in as many overs, and his partner, Boger, two more from the opposite end, the seven batsmen being out for 12 runs. This, of course, took all the heart out of the Etonians, and they lost in the end by as many as 114 runs. The result was a glorious triumph for the Winchester boys, who, having an uphill game to play, won it by admirable all-round cricket, and especially by brilliant fielding. During Eton's second innings this was of the most dashing description.

CHELTENHAM v. CLIFTON.

Played at CHELTENHAM, Friday, Saturday, July 5, 6, and ended in a draw in favour of the home team. Some capital batting was witnessed, the not-out innings of Mr. Hodges being extremely good. Cheltenham closed their second innings when nine wickets were down, but the Clifton boys managed to play out time, and make a fairly creditable draw.
