WILLOWS REPRINT

PUBLIC SCHOOL CRICKET IN 1893.

By C. B. FRY.

Every year there is much, perhaps unprofitable, discussion as to which of the great schools may fairly claim pre-eminence for their cricketer-representatives. A study of statistics in many cases leads to an entirely erroneous opinion about the respective merits of the cricketers who have not played one another. Some schools who can show annually a heavy list of victories and high individual averages fail to produce as many really good players as others whose records are comparatively moderate. The reason is that their opponents vary very much in class. The results of M.C.C. and inter-school matches sometimes give fair data for a comparison, but even these are in many cases misleading. In fact, until a specific league system is established among the schools, or a public judge sent round to watch the play of all the teams successively, the question will never be satisfactorily decided. However, as far as can be seen, Eton, Uppingham, and Tonbridge are last season better than any of the others. The eleven of 1893 was certainly the best Eton has had for some time. H. H. Spongson, though last season's best bowler, the strongest there has been at Uppingham since Lucas's time. Tonbridge, which has maintained a high standard of excellence for several seasons, was very successful, and would probably have been a formidable opponent for either Eton or Uppingham. On the whole the Eton eleven was probably the best. Uppingham may have had its weak batting side, but the former had the advantage in bowling. The narrow field below its standard of late years, and was no match for Eton at Lord's. Winchester, too, had a disappointing season. They began well, but fell off towards the latter part of their programme. Both Marlborough and Clifton had good sides, but neither and Marlborough seem to have been well above the average, and Charterhouse, also, had a strong eleven.

To pass on to individuals, there can be no doubt that J. B. Mason, the Winchester captain, was the best public school batsman of the year. John Ince, last Wilson of Uppingham, had an average of 50 against Mason's 55, but the latter's success in first-class cricket for Kent stamps him as a performer of phenomenal merit. To step from school into county cricket and secure an average of 27 by consistently good play was a triumph. He also bowled successfully for his school, taking forty-five wickets for 16 runs apiece, and for his county in their match with Middlesex at Lord's. He is unfortunately not going up to either of the Universities, but as he has bridged the gulf between school and county cricket so successfully, Oxford and Cambridge will be the only losers. With his assured position, fine physique, and undoubted powers, he ought to have a splendid future before him. Wilson of Uppingham is also a batsman quite out of the common. He is, we believe, going up to Cambridge. He has played no first-class cricket, but his school record is wonderfully good. He totalled 722 runs, with an average of 90, his highest score being 183 not out against Repton. Though he does not hit with Mason's freedom, he plays very hard all round the wicket. He certainly ought to come to the front at the University. Alexander of Shrewsbury had a fine average of 52, and was much the best bat in his eleven. He hits hard on the off side, timing the ball very well, but he is not quite so stylish as he might be. Bannon of Tonbridge was one of the most successful school bats of the year, his average being 48. Bromley-Martin, Cunliffe, and Pilkington of Eton were all very good, and Nicholls of Rugby, with an average of 37, Curtis of Clifton, Rhodes of Malvern, and Peers of Charterhouse also deserve mention.

It is difficult, as a rule, to speak of Public School bowlers with any certainty, but last season the one who came most to the front was Townsend of Clifton. He was remarkably successful for Gloucestershire. His hat-trick, all three victims being stumped, was one of the most curious incidents of the season. He bowls very slow, and has a wonderful command over the ball. He is not particularly strong yet, and ought to improve considerably during his next school season. His brother-Cliftonian, Grace, did extremely well for his school, taking fifty-one wickets for 11 runs each; but he hardly came up to expectations when tried for his county. Harrison, of Eton, who bowled capitally against both Winchester and Harrow, is very fast. Cunliffe, too, was useful. Edwards of Dulwich had the remarkably good average of 8.8 for fifty wickets. He is a fast left-hand bowler with a decided leg-break. Some of his performances were very good, and there seems no doubt that he was quite one of the best school bowlers. Jordan, also of Dulwich, was almost as successful as Edwards, but is not nearly so dangerous. Andrew of Rossall, Neville of Malvern, and Hartley of Tonbridge have good records.

An exhaustive account of the cricket season at each of the more famous schools would be beyond the compass of this article even if sufficient information could be obtained. The following short notices, arranged in alphabetical order, are necessarily in many cases founded on second-hand information from headquarters:—

BRIGHTON started the season under rather difficult circumstances, as only two choices—Belcher and Jacques—remained over from the eleven of 1892. Next summer they ought to do much better with a nucleus of six to begin with. Out of fourteen matches they won four, drew one, and lost nine. Ames, who headed their averages with 21, was their best bat. He is a good hitter, and gives promise of improving into a fine player. Marshall and Jacques did most of the bowling. The former took thirty-eight wickets for 15 runs each; the latter thirty-two for 17. Their fielding was good, especially in the Lancing match. Their batting collapsed against Tonbridge and Dulwich, by both of whom they were easily beaten.

BEDFORD GRAMMAR SCHOOL have a much higher standard in football than they have in cricket; but lately their interest in the latter game has shown a marked increase. They succeeded in defeating Merchant Taylors' and St. Paul's, but went down before Dulwich. H. Beasley, C. L. Beasley, and Harris had averages of over 20 for them; the first-named headed the list with 37. All three of them scored centuries. Harris, we believe, will be at Sandhurst next season. In Warner they had a promising left-hand bowler, who took thirty-four wickets for 15 runs each.

The BRADFIELD eleven showed some improvement upon the team of 1892, but they cannot be congratulated on their performances. They have one solitary victory to their credit. By Radley they were badly beaten, and at Sherborne, in spite of a promising beginning, they failed completely. The weakness of Bradfield in cricket is probably entirely due to the shocking condition of their practice wickets. Tyndall was a good captain, and their wicket-keeper, Anderson, did very well. In Hinde they had the best bowler they have produced for some time. He failed against Radley, but was on the whole highly successful.

Of the sixteen matches played by CHARTERHOUSE seven were won, three lost, and six drawn. Seven of their eleven will be available next season, so they have very bright prospects. No less than nine of them had averages of double figures. Peers was at the top with 31; Barrington, Bray, Crabtree, and Garnett all exceeded 20. None of them had a century to their credit, but they were consistent scorers all through. Crabtree acquitted himself admirably as captain, though he might with advantage have taught his men to field better. They had plenty of bowlers, Anderton being the best with forty-nine wickets at a cost of 16 runs each. Towards the end of the season, however, he seemed to tire. Baker, too, was better at the beginning of the summer. Smith and Dyne were both useful change bowlers, while Austen late in the season got a lot of wickets. Both Westminster and Wellington were defeated. Against the former Crabtree and Peers batted well, and Baker was the most deadly bowler. In the Wellington match Peers played finely in the first innings, and Garnett scored 90 in the second, while Dyne took three wickets for 3 runs. The match was very exciting. Crabtree and Bray, who kept wicket, are both at Cambridge.

CHELTHENHAM were throughout a fair batting side, but in bowling and fielding they were weak. The Clifton match was drawn, owing to bad weather, in their favour. Champain, who will be captain next summer, was their best bat; he has a nice style and is very promising. Their best bowler was Stratton. Quinton was a good hitter, and Bignell (who has gone to Woolwich) was a useful steady bat and field.

With Grace and Townsend to bowl their opponents out CLIFTON were a successful eleven. They won five matches, lost two, drew one, and tied one. As above mentioned, rain cut short their match with Cheltenham. Curtis with 31, Grace with 29, and Townsend with 28 were their best batsmen. Grace has gone to Cambridge, but the other two are still at school. Curtis, who is a fine bat, will be their captain next season. Townsend and Grace seem to have bowled practically unchanged through most of the matches. The former's success for his county has already been noticed. He should become a splendid bowler unless he is overworked.

DULWICH won seven matches, including those with Brighton and Bedford, but suffered defeat at the hands of Tonbridge, M.C.C., and Quidnuncs. Tonbridge beat them by seven wickets. The Quidnunc match was a good one, and the Dulwich eleven may be congratulated on a fine struggle against a strong team. Douglas, their captain, was their chief scorer, though Arthur and Barry helped him materially. The strength of the team lay undoubtedly in the bowling of Edwards and Jordan. The former, as I have said already, was certainly one of the best school bowlers in 1893. Five of the team will be gone before next season. Jordan is at Oxford; he is a medium right-hand bowler and a fine field.

ETON turned the tables upon Harrow and Winchester in a very decided fashion. At the beginning of the season they were only moderately successful, but they ended up exceedingly well. Bromley-Martin, their captain, was a very capable leader and a good bat. Harrison turned out a good fast bowler, though inclined to be erratic; in the two school matches he was very destructive. Pilkington, with an improved defence, should develop into a really excellent bat. Cunliffe proved himself a most reliable all-round man. The 1893 team was certainly a dangerous and dependable side, with a capacity for rising to the occasion. Success at Lord's sometimes lends an Eton team a reputation in excess of its merits, but taking everything into consideration their last representatives may be regarded as having proved themselves the best of the school elevens.

HAILEYBURY won five matches, lost five, and drew one. In some respects they were very unlucky. Reid, their captain, was hurt, and could only help them in their last two matches, and two of the other three old choices with whom they began the season were incapacitated. The usual match with Uppingham was not played, and they lost to Wellington somewhat easily. Snell headed their batting, and Barton their bowling averages.

The cricket at HARROW last season was not up to the usual high standard of excellence. With the exception of Vibart, who is young, and very promising as a bat and field, their new choices were not a success. They had no Jackson or MacLaren to make their runs. Of those who played in 1892, Woodward and Ferris were fairly good; their captain, Rome, improved wonderfully as a bat. The bowling was inclined to be weak, Rome having a damaged hand, which seemed to deprive him of his power. The fielding of the eleven was exceptionally good. Next summer they will have six old choices left. Rome and Ferris have preferred the Army to the Universities.

LANCING were not a very good eleven. Their solitary victory over their old boys saved them from a season of unbroken disaster. Much their best bat was Brydone, who showed up well on several occasions. Carter, who will be captain next season, was top of the bowling averages, but Floyd, who is a slow left-hander, was probably their best man in this department. They were defeated by Tonbridge, Brighton, and Hurst College.

MARLBOROUGH had a good eleven, though their strength would have been much increased if they had found a fast bowler. Their best bat was Mortimer, who scored 98 against Rugby. Druce, also, who was their captain, and a good one, played several stylish innings. Both he and Mortimer are at Cambridge. They had a free hitter and fine field in Graham. Of their bowlers, Beloe, a slow left-hander, was the most useful. Johnson, the wicket-keeper, was hurt before the meeting with Rugby at Lord's, but previously he performed very creditably. Their fielding was consistently good. The Rugby match ended in an evenly balanced draw.

MALVERN played eleven matches, of which they won five, lost two, and drew four. They were a very fair side, though not as strong as in 1892. Both Repton and Sherborne went down before them. In Rhodes they possessed a free, dangerous bat, and a good wicket-keeper. Next to him in the averages come Marriott and Simpson. Bowling and fielding were their strong points, the batting as a whole being rather weak. Neville and Lowe were the stock bowlers, and both did very well. The former had an average of 12 for forty-five wickets, the latter one of 12 for thirty-five.

RADLEY were unfortunate in their earlier matches, but came on with a rush at the end. Of their last eight matches, six were won and one drawn. After the middle of June they were quite a good though not very dangerous side. They had some steady bowling backed up by good fielding. Their batting seemed to be plucky when occasion demanded it, and Webb was an excellent captain. He will be succeeded next season by Bailey, who is a promising player. Chinnock was a useful man. They beat Bradfield.

REPTON were distinctly better than in 1892. Some of their performances were creditable, but they were no match for Malvern, much less for Uppingham. Davenport headed their averages with 30. He was a persistent scorer but inclined to be slow. Both Beasley and Busby played some plucky innings. Bryant, a slow bowler with a leg break, was fairly successful, but he was not sufficiently collected under punishment. Shepstone, who was fast, did some good things. Busby was disappointing as a bowler.

ROSSALL had a strong batting side. Their most conspicuous performance was against Liverpool, when they scored 272 for three wickets; two of them, Newett and Stone, made centuries on this occasion. The Shrewsbury match was a draw in favour of Rossall; Loretto beat them. Newett will be at school next season, so they will retain their best bat. Wilson is a young and promising all-round player. Andrew was a good bowler; he took fifty-eight wickets for 14 apiece. King also did some useful work. The cricket of the school seems in a promising condition, and they have good prospects for next season.

At RUGBY the batting was good, but the bowlers without exception proved expensive. Nicholls, who headed the batting averages with 37, was a good man. Marshall 24, Slater 23, and Eckersley 20 were the next best. They had two left-hand bowlers in Rhodes and Christopherson, the former being fast, the latter slow. Sample and Gowers also bowled. Their fielding was good on the whole and their wicket-keeping efficient. There is every prospect of a good eleven in 1894.

SHERBORNE were seriously handicapped by the enforced absence of their captain, and in addition to this had great difficulty with the practice wickets, which were rough and bad. Painter, their coach, was continually away playing in county matches. Their record, therefore, of three wins, one draw, and five losses, was as good as could be expected. They were beaten by Malvern, but defeated Bradfield. Stevens was much their best bat. He was very successful in July, and heads the average list with 36. Holberton, a slow left-hander, and Radford, medium right, were a good pair of bowlers. Stevens, too, was useful as a change. Prichard was the best of a smart fielding side.

SHREWSBURY had a very fair eleven, but it was not nearly so strong as in 1892. They won four matches, lost two, and drew three, including the Rossall match. Alexander had the first-rate average of 52. He was far in advance of the others, Rose with 25 coming next to him. Alexander is a strong hitter on the off, with an excellent eye, but his style is as yet rather rough. He remains on for next season with five others, so there is every prospect of a good eleven. Salt was the best bowler, though Rose and Roberts were very useful. The fielding was only moderate, especially against Rossall.

TONBRIDGE, as has been remarked, produced one of the best elevens of the year. They will have to work hard to equal it next season, as only two of this year's team are remaining. All three school matches were won. Brighton and Lancing were practically outclassed, and the Dulwich match ended successfully after a good game. The side improved steadily through the season. Bannon, who was captain and is staying on, was the most successful bat with an average of 48. Clark (33), Hill (24), and Hartley (23) were all good. Ronald, a very useful bat, was only able to play a very little. Their bowling was strong. Hartley and Body did most of it, while Hubbard and Carlton were good changes.

UPPINGHAM had a splendid eleven. They were beaten by a strong team of Quidnuncs, which included C. M. Wells, and by Liverpool. One match was drawn, the remaining four won. Repton were easily beaten, and the Old Boys, M.C.C., and Christopherson's XI., all strong teams, fell before them. Of Wilson and his wonderful performances we have already spoken. Everyone who saw him was very much struck by his play. His 183 not out against Repton was a faultless and finished innings. At Uppingham he is regarded as equal if not superior to any batsman the school has had. When we remember the number of splendid cricketers Uppingham has produced, this is indeed high praise; but it seems quite deserved. Wilson's success in first-class cricket seems a certainty. Besides their champion the school had a sound batting team from beginning to end. The fielding perhaps was somewhat below the usually high standard, chiefly owing to slowness in several instances; but the inevitable wicket-keeper was found in Cowan, who was decidedly good. Bardswell made a fine slip. Of the bowlers, Wilson, Taylor, and Bardswell were the best. The latter should develop into a really good bowler. He goes to Oxford.

WELLINGTON improved considerably during the term. They won four matches, lost six, and drew one. Their most meritorious performance was their victory over an M.C.C. team containing Mead, Barnes, and G. G. Hearne. They beat Haileybury but lost to Charterhouse. Livesay scored 107 in the former and 73 in the latter school match. He is a stylish bat. Beard, however, was top of the averages. He is a dangerous bat, but is inclined to be rash. The fielding was inaccurate at the beginning of the season, but latterly it improved much. Beard took thirteen wickets for 45 runs against Haileybury. Dashwood, who succeeded Forbes this year on the latter's resignation, will be captain again next season.

WESTMINSTER were not successful. They only won two matches out of thirteen. Their victories were over the Masters and Lords and Commons. They were probably a better team than statistics would indicate, as, owing to their ground being in town, everyone is ready to play in the elevens they meet, which are consequently always very strong. Again, Sherring, their captain, seems to have mismanaged the bowling, especially in the Charterhouse match, which they had a good chance of winning. In Fisher, a young and promising player, they had a good bowler and bat. Sherring was top of the batting averages. Severn also was a fair bat. Shearme was a fairly good bowler.

WINCHESTER had not such a good eleven as last year. Though successful at first they went off considerably. They seem to have been liable to batting collapses, probably because Mason was expected to make all the runs. Stephens, Henderson, and Rowe scored occasionally. The fielding was very good. Gibson, a medium-pace left-hander, could bowl fairly, but was very variable. Mason was the best bowler: he took forty-five wickets. Of his batting it is almost unnecessary to speak; everyone knows how successful he was for Kent. He is a beautiful bat, and scores at a tremendous rate. In 1894 he will probably be high up in the first-class averages.

ETON V. HARROW.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 14, 15.—The Eton and Harrow match last season was even less remarkable than the contest between the two Universities, the cricket being distinguished by few features of more than ordinary interest. For the lack of brightness and freedom in the play, however, the weather was in a large measure responsible, the wicket being considerably affected by heavy rain in the early part of the week. Eton proved themselves by far the stronger side at every point, and won easily by nine wickets, their victory—the first they had gained since 1887—giving rise to the most enthusiastic demonstration we have seen at Lord's for a long time past. It was a pity the match could not have been played on a hard, lively pitch, as we are inclined to think under such circumstances the Eton team would have given a very fine display of cricket. Only having seen them on this one occasion we would not care to say too much in their praise, but we believe it was the opinion of Mr. R. A. H. Mitchell, who had certainly better means of judging than anyone else, that the school had not for several years put so strong a team into the field. On the other hand, it was freely admitted by those most interested in Harrow that the latter school had by no means so good a side as usual. Uncertain weather and the strong counter-attraction of the meeting of Orme and La Flèche in the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown considerably affected the attendance on the opening day, the company scarcely numbering more than 12,000, of whom 4,500 paid for admission at the gates. The only old choices in the match were Bromley-Martin, Pilkington, and Bircham, for Eton; and Rome, Ferris, and Woodward, for Harrow. The two captains were Bromley-Martin and Rome. Harrow, who won the toss and went in first, were batting for exactly two hours, their innings commencing at five minutes after eleven and ending at five minutes past one for a total of 125. On the slow and rather heavy ground this did not seem a bad score, but subsequent play showed that it was scarcely a good one. The batting was singularly uneven, some fairly good play in the early part of the innings and just at the close being contrasted with a series of failures in the middle. Fifty went up before twelve o'clock with only two wickets down, and with but four men out the score reached 80, Harrow's prospects then seeming quite hopeful. At this point, however, Harrison (right hand fast), who was bowling from the Pavilion end, became for the time irresistible and took four wickets—three of them in four balls—with the total at 81. He bowled Gore and Stogdon, got Munro out leg before wicket first ball, and bowled down Bullock's leg stump, after that batsman had been missed at point. Nine wickets were down for 97, but the last wicket added 28 runs, Sandilands hitting out with plenty of resolution. Harrison had an extraordinary average, taking six wickets for 29 runs. He kept up his pace very well and was evidently not afraid to pitch up. Eton's innings was started in a remarkable way by Egerton and Meeking, who went in at twenty-five minutes past one and were not separated till twenty minutes to four. Deducting the luncheon interval, their partnership lasted rather more than two hours, during which time 71 runs were scored, this number including a liberal share of extras. With such extreme caution did they play before luncheon that in twenty-five minutes they only made 11 runs, four of these coming in one hit. The way in which they resisted the temptations offered them by the bowlers made the cricket at times decidedly tedious to watch, but the two young batsmen deserved every credit for the patience and judgment with which they played on the slow ground, and the easy victory of their side was certainly due in a large measure to their exertions. Meeking was batting nearly three hours and a half for his invaluable fifty, the total, when he was at last got rid of, standing at 141. His hits were one 4, three 3's, ten 2's, and seventeen singles. Well as he played, however, his innings was by no means free from mistakes. When he had made 28 he gave a sharp chance of being caught and bowled, and with his score at 36 he was missed at mid-off. Moreover, we believe that he ought once to have been caught by the wicket-keeper. Decidedly the brightest cricket of the innings was shown by Pilkington, who, during his partnership with Meeking, scored in forty minutes 30 runs out of 42. At ten minutes past six rain came on and stopped further play, Eton's score being 166 for eight wickets.

On the Saturday the match came to an unexpectedly rapid conclusion, the end being reached soon after half-past three. Thanks to the vigorous play of Cobbold, the last man, Eton raised their score to 199, and it was felt that with a lead of 74 they had the match pretty well in hand. So carefully were the runs obtained that the Harrow bowlers sent down no fewer than 158 overs. Just before twelve o'clock Harrow went in for the second time, and in a little over two hours of actual cricket they were all out for 105, the last wicket falling immediately after the luncheon interval. Thanks to Rome, Ferris, and Woodward, 40 went up with only one wicket down, there seeming at this point some prospect of a good finish to the game, but there were seven men out before the balance on the first innings had been hit off, and it was clear that Harrow had no possible chance. Harrison followed up his fine bowling on the first day by taking three wickets for 26 runs, and thus had the fine record for the whole match of nine wickets for 55 runs. Eton only wanted 32 to win, and for the loss of one wicket the runs were hit off in half an hour, Egerton, who had played so carefully on Friday, showing that he was quite capable of forcing the run-getting when occasion served. His 17 not out was a really capital innings.

Sixty-eight matches have been played, of which Eton have won twenty-eight, Harrow twenty-nine, and eleven have been drawn. This is the generally published record, but Harrow men object very strongly to the game in 1805 being treated as a regular contest between the two schools, contending that it is no more correct to count that than the fixture in 1857 for boys under twenty, which has been rejected. R. B. Hoare's 108 in 1888 was the ninth three-figure innings in the matches between the schools, the previous great scorers having been E. Bayley 152 in 1841; A. K. Watson 135 in 1885; A. W. Ridley 117 in 1871; C. P. Foley 114 in 1886; W. F. Forbes 113 in 1876; A. W. T. Daniel 112 not out in 1890; C. J. Ottaway 108 in 1869; and E. Crawley 100 in 1885.

M.C.C. AND GROUND v. LEICESTERSHIRE.

Played at LORD'S, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, July 20, 21, 22.—After having all the worst of the opening stages of this match with the M.C.C., Leicestershire played up superbly on the last day, and only just failed to save the game—the Club, who began Saturday's cricket with every prospect of an easy victory, winning by the narrow majority of 10 runs. Some excellent batting by Storer, Barnes, Davidson, J. H. Roberts, and Attewell for the M.C.C., and by Holland for the county, and some capital bowling by Pougher, Hillyard, Davidson, and Mee, marked the cricket of Thursday and Friday, and when play ceased on the latter evening, Leicestershire, with three men out in the fourth innings for 40, wanted 216 more to win. As we have suggested, the last few batsmen played up with great spirit, and nearly succeeded in pulling the match out of the fire.

GOVERNMENT V. OPPOSITION.

Played at Lord's, Saturday, July 29.—A match between members of Parliament representing respectively the Government and Opposition was played, but did not prove the attraction expected. However, the weather was most unfavourable. The Opposition, which included several well known cricketers, won very easily, declaring their innings at an end when three wickets had fallen for 243 runs.

RUGBY v. MARLBOROUGH.

Played at LORD'S, Wednesday, Thursday, August 2, 3.—Two exceedingly well-matched teams represented Rugby and Marlborough in this annual Schools match, which, favoured by fine weather, attracted a capital attendance at Lord's on both days. On Wednesday each side completed an innings, Marlborough making 165 and Rugby 228. Druce and Mortimer for the former and Dowson, Slater, and Marshall for the latter showed to the best advantage in batting, while Rhoades, a fast left-handed bowler, displayed promising form with the ball, and the fielding of both teams was extremely good. The second day's cricket was remarkable for the splendid batting of Mortimer, Graham, and Ainsworth, who between them contributed 216 out of the Marlborough total of 308. Mortimer, who will be remembered as having made 106 in the match of 1892, scored 98 without a mistake, and was unlucky in just failing to reach his hundred. He was batting two hours and thirty-five minutes, and hit fourteen 4's, four 3's, and seven 2's. Rugby, with 246 to win, had no time to get the runs, but they might have lost had not Nicholls and Marshall stayed together over an hour and added 73 runs, after three wickets had gone down for 19. This stand saved them from disaster, and when stumps were pulled up and the match left drawn, very little advantage could be claimed by either school.

CHELTENHAM v. HAILEYBURY.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, August 4, 5.—Following the decision of the Rugby and Marlborough match, another public school fixture was arranged for the same week. Owing to the inclement weather on the first day only an hour and three quarter's cricket was possible, and in that time Cheltenham scored 95 for the loss of five wickets, while on Saturday rain had so seriously affected the ground that the bowlers nearly always held the upper hand. The game produced a remarkably close and interesting finish, and when time expired and the match was left drawn, Haileybury, with one wicket to fall, wanted 10 runs to win. It seemed a great pity that the captains did not agree to go on for a few minutes and bring the contest to a definite issue.

ETON v. WINCHESTER.

Played at ETON, Friday, Saturday, June 23, 24.—For the first time since 1837 the Eton boys were able to beat Winchester, gaining a highly creditable victory on their own Playing Fields by five wickets. Mr. J. R. Mason, who afterwards made such a successful appearance for Kent, was, as in 1892, by far the best all-round cricketer in the match, as he scored 79 runs and took eight wickets for 61 runs; but, apart from their captain, none of the Wykehamists showed form of more than average ability. For the winners the honours were carried off by Mr. Pilkington, who scored 85 and 4, and Mr. Cunliffe, a left-handed bowler of great promise, who took eleven wickets at a cost of 74 runs. It is satisfactory to note that the fielding on both sides was excellent.
