PUBLIC SCHOOL CRICKET IN 1903.

By W. J. FORD.

First of all, my thanks to all those whose kindly help has made this article possible; without such assistance an article "of sorts" might have been evolved, but the difficulty would have been huge and the results unsatisfactory.

Before taking the dive I should like to say a word about a new venture made in 1903 by the Marylebone C.C., viz.: the institution of a match which it is hoped will prove a hardy annual—eleven of the Public Schools v. M.C.C. The club paid me the compliment of asking me to get up the Public Schools' side, a task which I accepted with diffidence, fearing that the date, the August Bank Holiday, would find few public school players in town, and that the exigencies of country house and other cricket, which thrive in early August, would militate against the chance of assembling a representative side. However, diffidence was misplaced. The invitations were accepted readily, in fact they seemed as popular as hot cakes, so much so that I was beguiled into a snare; for, having two or three vacancies to fill a fortnight before the match, I issued, as a wise manager would five invitations, fully expecting that three at the most would accept, and that as some one would probably "chuck" at the last minute I should have a reserve man ready. All five accepted! I can only apologise to those whose invitation I had to withdraw after its acceptance—which is somewhat of a paradox. Eventually we had an eleven consisting of twelve men—another "bull"—in which ten of our leading schools were represented, three men hailing from Eton, and one man from each of nine others. One could not always get the particular player one wanted, but refusals were very few. I hope to get a side for next year that will be even more representative, but that is on the knees of the gods. The main deficiency in the team was the lack of a good fast bowler, a commodity that is sufficiently rare, for unhappily Knox of Dulwich College could not accept, but as the match was played on the practice-ground at Lords, and on a wet wicket, he might have found it hard to get a footing. The issue of the game, played as it was under awkward conditions, was a fairly stiff beating for the Public Schools, who made 78 and 85, as against 132 and 99, but on a fast wicket I would have backed the boys, who, one critic declared, played as well as either Oxford or Cambridge. As a matter of fact the two professionals, Thompson and Tarrant, upset the balance of the sides on that slough of sludge and "stickphast." They were practically unplayable, breaking right across the wicket time after time in such a fashion that Grace, Webbe, or Shrewsbury would have had to work hard to make 50 runs. Crankshaw (Eton) hit away in spirited fashion for 36, but had a couple of "lives," while Maxwell (Cheltenham) made 17, and Crawford (Repton) 15. These were the only double figures. As to the other side, Thompson scored 36 and 20, thereby showing how much he did for the win, his fourteen wickets only costing 59 runs. J. M. Hulton made 17 and 26, and J. Howard 20 and 16. Tarrant had eight wickets for 62 runs. The Public Schools' fielding was very excellent. Bevington being admirable at mid-off, and the other people everywhere, but in regard to Payne's wicket-keeping a curious question arose, though it was not submitted to the umpires. During the little preliminary gesticulation in which all "keepers" indulge before the ball actually arrives in their clutch, he undoubtedly got his hands over or in front of the wickets; several of us went out in a line with square-leg to watch. The law says "If any part of his (the wicket-keeper's) person be over or before the wicket, the striker shall not be out, etc., etc.," but it does not specify any time—for instance, after the delivery of the ball, or, after the bowler has started to deliver the ball. However Payne "kept" with much cleverness, though on a tricky wicket byes were bound to come, the ball beating "striker" and "keeper" in equal ratio. Hatfeild (Eton) bowled his "slow left" with good effect, but he seems to me to be a fast-wicket bowler who relies on subtle variations of the slower paces rather than to extravagance of break. Bowling against Harrow on a fast true wicket, he seemed hitable, but wasn't, and those who have "gone for him" have found it hard to make hay of his bowling. I fancy he would do well to add a medium-paced ball to his répertoire, and if it comes with his arm there'll be no harm done. I trust to be acquitted of partiality for my old school if I write down Crawford (Repton), brother of V.F.S. and R.T., as one of the best school bowlers I have seen for a long time. In delivery he resembles Jack Hearne very closely, with a similar open-shouldered swing, though he has not Jack's gallop up to the crease, but his varieties of pace are good, he breaks back cleverly, and bowls a good fast ball that comes with the arm. As compared with Hatfeild, though the comparison does not amount to much, he got eight wickets for forty-nine, and his rival seven wickets for seventy-seven, the wicket being, as I have hinted, not quite in Hatfeild's favour. At the same time I have seen Crawford bowl excellently on a plumb pitch, and shall be surprised if he does not make his mark in high-class cricket, should he get the chance, for he is quite a good batsman and an excellent field in the cover-point direction. Mugliston (Rossall) was also successful with the ball—five wickets for fifty—but his medium-paced bowling with some leg-break on it would probably have been better, relatively, on a faster pitch. In fact, that “faster pitch” would have suited my boys—if they’ll allow me the paternal term—better than the slow one, both as to bowling and as to batting. Crankshaw hit gaily, but was lucky in being missed twice, once by his father if my memory serves me, and hitting was the right game under the circumstances. I think Nicholl is the better bat of the pair, but he starts just a little too soon; however, as his style is unimpeachable and his power undeniable, he ought to make a batsman of a very high class, the same terms applying to Crankshaw. Nicholl, by the way, captained the side, and with much discretion. Bevington (Haileybury), who failed in this match, is a fine powerful batsman, as the Cheltonians ascertained, and so fine a field at mid-off as to deserve a place in many a good side. Bence-Pemberton (Charterhouse) is all right when he has got going, but he is a bad starter; he got started against Westminster, however, in an hour when all seemed black for Charterhouse, and “the pinks” can tell the rest of the tale, how they lost the match, and how B.P.—not the only Charterhouse “B.P.”—took 103 not out. In eight other innings for his school he only scored 74 runs; still, he won the big school match for his side, and that covers a multitude of sins. Bevington, by the way, played capitally against Cheltenham, and also, I hear, against a good M.C.C. team, though he is apt to get his leg in front of the wicket. I have had more than one hint—I digress for the moment—that this class of play, to step in front and push the ball for two instead of driving it for four, is gaining favour at some public schools, and am asked to inveigh against it. I certainly agree that it is a most undesirable style of cricket, for though Ranjitsinhji can use the stroke and use it with the utmost effect, yet it is not given to all to be Ranjitsinhjis, while further I have often noticed that whereas the ordinary player makes two runs off the stroke Ranjitsinhji makes four, thanks to his special quickness of elbow and, perhaps, wrist; further, Ranjitsinhji will drive to the boundary for four the very ball that he played to leg for four in the last over, whereby he keeps an extra gap open in the field for himself. In all honesty, however (to say nothing of gladness of heart), I can record that in none of the public schools whose matches or players I have watched did there seem to be any trace of systematic leg-play, or of jumping in front of the wicket to “glide” or “glance.” Long may this state of things last! Gorell-Barnes, who headed the Harrow averages, thanks to some not-out innings, is a fine slashing hitter, but “lets go” too soon. I have not had the luck to see him at his best. Mugliston, of Rossall, could bat as well as bowl: he captains his school for 1904. Of Fyffe, of Winchester, I received the news: “He’s a most amusing bat; you’ll enjoy him if he gets going;” he bowls fastish medium and swings across the wicket well, but, as it happened, he was not wanted to bowl at Lord’s. Cozens-Hardy, of Rugby, is an excellent and sound player, though his style is not very attractive, but he has strokes all round the wicket, is hard to dismiss, and is a bowler to boot, with a useful and fastish “yorker”, which often did execution. Maxwell (Cheltenham) was the best player in his school, possessed of a good cut, and of some first-class drives and half-volley forces on the on-side, being a good fielder as well. Payne (Wellington) was a sound and useful batsman apart from his excellent wicket-keeping, and he came out second in the Wellington averages, which however were more useful than flashy.

Passing to the other good players of the year who did not take part in the match under question, I note that Eton had a third batsman of great merit in Williams. He is not the stylish slasher that Nicholl and Crankshaw are, but played what seemed to me the sounder cricket against Harrow, though he dealt out plenty of vigorous punishment to the dark-blue bowling and with no light hand, but hard hitting was an attractive feature of all the Eton batsmen. We did not see the Harrow batting at its best in the Eton match, though Baily (son of E. P. Baily, also of Harrow, and my contemporary at Cambridge) played plucky and careful cricket at a very dark period of the Harrow fortunes, and got some good help from Bolton who had, however, only left the sick-room recently, and had to play when dead out of practice. Rattigan, who was regarded as the best Harrow batsman, injured himself seriously a few days before the match, and played, it was rumoured, against his doctor’s orders. Apart from Gorell-Barnes, none of the Harrow bowlers showed much form, for Foster though very fast, was equally erratic. Under the circumstances the Harrow breakdown was not unnatural, but Baily, though suffering from an injured finger, kept wicket admirably, for while he missed Crankshaw early—he himself is my only informant—he captured three victims and only gave away twelve byes, stopping a lot of awkward balls on the leg-side too. Winchester possessed one really fine player in Weatherby; he is not quite the school-boy wonder that Mason was, but is a particularly sound and punishing batsman on the off-side; unfortunately he has no strokes, as one critic remarks, between short-leg and mid-off, and the Etonians, discovering this, crowded the off-side with men and thereby kept cramped his run-getting. But Weatherby, scoring 43 and 83 gave them a bad fright, and was unlucky in being on the losing side. Wright of Winchester on the contrary was a fine driver especially to the on, but weak in strokes behind "cover." If the opinion of critics may be quoted here, there was probably no sounder batsman in the public schools than Branston of Charterhouse. He had a snug little average of 78 and more, and bowled uncommonly well, getting as many wickets practically as all his comrades put together. His runs are acquired mainly by drives—O si sic omnes!—and as a bowler he bowls fast, but it is hinted to me that he tries to bowl too fast and does not bowl his slow ball often enough. The Notts committee selected him for several of the August county matches, and though he did nothing notable in that watery month, the fact that he was invited to play for so strong a county stamps him as a player of remarkable merit. I hear that in the last two years he has only once failed to get a century in house-matches, and that his one failure produced 46 runs! Young, of Repton, need not fear comparison with any one, even though he is handicapped by having to play in spectacles; in the two school matches he picked up 89 runs against Malvern, and 129 not out (going right through the innings) against Uppingham. His average for the year was 60, and his wicket-keeping was both safe and sound. Cheltenham had a thoroughly sound and safe batsman in Maxwell, as has already been said; Marsden is a fine hitter who, however, begins too soon, and Salter is a stylish batsman who will probably turn out to be the best of the trio; unluckily we did not see him at Lord's, as illness had a prior claim on his services. Logan of Westminster did not strike form till the season began to wear on, but when he found his legs he was a really brilliant batsman, powerful all round the wicket, and punishing the bowlers unmercifully; he is apt to "have a go" a little too soon, wherein I have a sneaking sympathy with him, while he can pick up any catch that comes within range. That is the sort of cricketer that is after my own heart. The Marlborough batting was not strong, especially as Colbeck, the captain, did not run into form till late in the season; against Rugby he played admirable cricket, being cool and collected at a time when nerve was being highly tried; but for him, Marlborough must have lost. Scott was a good player and a gallant trier, but suffered as a bowler from the lack of a good stumper. I see that I have inadvertently omitted to mention the name of Payne (Charterhouse), who suffered by comparison with Branston, but was really fit for any school eleven, and who, luckily for Charterhouse, will be available next year. Snowden, the Rugby captain, was one of the best school bowlers of the year, and a cricketer of much cunning; his slow left hand bowling brought him in a goodly crop of wickets, while he is no mean batsman of the "free" type. Rogers, a steady and useful player, heads the Clifton averages, which do not run high, but I gather that Ramulu was really the best player, just as Meakin, the captain, was the best bowler, though I am bound to say that his leg-breaks were expensive. In Imlay the Cliftonians had a capital wicket-keeper. Of the Haileybury players, Bevington, as aforesaid, was the best batsman, but Heymann was a most valuable ally as a left-hand medium bowler who could send down a really nasty ball, and who will be on the spot—in one sense of the word at least—in 1904, but Howard, a left-handed player also, was easily top of the batting averages. Uppingham had a very useful cricketer in Hurst, who drives with power and precision, but is apt to be in a hurry. He can bowl as well as bat—leg-breaks with a good length; but the bright particular star was Franklin-Smith, the captain, whose wicket-keeping is absolutely first-class, as I have heard from many outside sources. As he goes to Cambridge I hope the Light-Blue captain may read this and make a note of it. No news has reached me direct from Malvern, but I hear through other information that G. N. Foster is really a good player, though he failed for Worcestershire, and that A. P. Day runs him fairly close; at the same time Cornelius and Mellin must have had the right stuff in them, as in the hour of their school's necessity they got a century apiece against the strong Repton bowling. There was no Hutchings at Tonbridge this year, but "the bright spot was the wicket-keeping of Waggett," who goes to Oxford this year. I should like to call attention, by way of parenthesis, to the special excellence of the school wicket-keepers of 1903. Slow wickets help a wicket-keeper to some extent by keeping down the pace of the ball, but they handicap him in the bewildering amount of break that the bowler can develop. It is clear, however, that the "keeping" was wonderfully good in the cases of Aspinall (Eton), Baily (Harrow), Payne (Wellington), Franklin-Smith (Uppingham), Waggett (Tonbridge), Imlay (Clifton), Young (Repton), and others. I was besieged with suggestions as to the merits of rival "keepers" for the Public Schools XI. Sherborne owned a capital and careful player in its captain, Phillip Smith, who acquired an average of 32, with a highest score of 49; this argues consistent cricket with a vengeance. He was outdone, however, in mere figures by Lang, "the brightest and best of the bats, and the pick of the basket as a coming cricketer," while a "pocket cricketer," Jesson, did good service with the bat, and turned out to be an excellent leg-break bowler. In the Rossall team Jobson, the captain, was quite the best batsman, and Mugliston, next year's captain, was a good bowler and a good batsman, though as a bowler he was outdistanced by Powell, a high, fast bowler, and by Jobson as a batsman; still it is a good performance to "run up" in each department. Dulwich was fortunate in having so good a player to preside over its fortunes as N. A. Knox, who was not only a fast bowler of much success and of much promise, but a fine powerful batsman, who knew how to "throw his arms away from him;" but apart from Knox there was not much talent to be found, except in Wigg, a slow left-hand bowler, who was very fatal against school sides. H. H. K. Worsley, of Radley, was undoubtedly one of the best of school batsmen, and what is more will be able to help Radley in 1904. Those who know his play regard him as better than either of his brothers, who have been tried for Oxford, and hope that the "blue" is not beyond his reach, if, and when, he "goes up;" he is a capital bowler as well as batsman. St. Paul's found a valuable and capable player in Wakeling, who will be captain next year, and was far ahead of his colleagues as a run-getter. I gather that he is a careful player, as he only made 102 out of 293 v. Brighton College, but as he went in first and carried out his bat the feat was highly commendable. M. B. Elderton was the chief luminary of the Merchant Taylors' XI, being a good batsman and a capital wicket-keeper, but I note that he got nearly half of his runs in two innings out of the fifteen that he played. Muirhead was the best batsman that Bedford Grammar School produced, being quite a consistent scorer, with plenty of scoring strokes on the off-side, though he is inclined to shirk the risks of cutting. Peel was an excellent bowler, especially when the wicket was friendly, as witness his nine wickets for seven runs v. Wadham College! Bedford Modern School was particularly fortunate in having so good an all-round cricketer as Oliver, who headed both averages and was well ahead of his confrères, while he put the seal on his abilities by some sound cricket for Bedfordshire. I have heard so much of his cricket from good judges that I regret that he is not going to either "Varsity." Again, Turner of Hurstpierpoint must have been a pretty good player; in sixteen innings, twice not out, he made 503 runs, with a highest total of 69. The intelligent reader will at once deduce the fact that he was a very consistent getter of runs; add to this that he could bowl, and that he was captain in 1903, and will resume the post in 1904, and it will be gleaned that he was and will be invaluable. Eastbourne College had a batsman of whom to be proud in J. V. Young, brother of the Repton player. He was only 53 short of 1000 runs, made an innings of 205 not out, and had an average of 43; as a bowler he annexed 63 wickets, the price paid being 23 runs apiece. But apart from figures I have private information to the effect that he got his runs well, and bowled with much precision. He will be captain again next year, and should have an even greater season. King's School, Bruton, is sending two excellent players to Cambridge—I hope the light-blue captain reads this article as well as the rest of his Wisden's—in the persons of W. W. H. Nash and A. F. Bland. The former is a fine player and a fine hitter, with plenty of defence, and has made his mark outside school cricket, while the latter—Bland—bowls fast with a good high action, and a concealed slow ball that breaks from leg. I hear that the Somerset secretary thinks very highly of both these players, so I hope to see their names in the "Freshers' match. Just in the nick of time, nearly a month after my circular went forth, comes information from Lancing, though the Sussex school is not much later than others. Unfortunately the secretary does not answer my questions in order, or at all, but I dig the following facts out of the Cricket Retrospect viz., that Mathieson kept wicket well, that the bowling and fielding were respectable, and that Howell was a sound and patient performer with the bat. Three school matches were won, but Brighton triumphed, since some "simple slow bowling and moderate lobs" were too much for the batters. I beg to repeat the hackneyed remark that no school eleven is complete without a lob-bowler, even if he is only a lob-bowler of sorts.

I have been asked to say a few words on two subjects connected with school cricket. They are of a rather delicate nature, but that is no reason why they should be shirked. The first one is the question of umpiring in the matches which are played on the school ground, in which matches the school coach habitually officiates, though in inter-school matches the umpires generally come from Lord's. This last fact is so pregnant with meaning that it is needless to dilate on it; but there are innumerable grumbles, well-founded grumbles, I fear, in the air, to the effect that the umpiring is so one-sided that it is not worth a man's while to play in matches against schools, as he is more likely to be got out by the umpire than the bowler, and can only get the boys out by bowling them clean. I put the visitor's plea in an extreme form, but the visitor, I regret to say, has justification for his statements. Of course the school 'pro' is very keen that his alumni should do him credit, and when competition runs close for "colours" is very anxious that his own particular protégé should get them. Hence his decisions are often biassed, and his conscience is appeased by the reflection that it doesn't matter to I.Z. or the M.C.C. whether they win or lose but it does matter to "my boys" or perhaps to "my boy." Umpires, even the very best, make mistakes, but I fear that in school matches the mistakes are many, and generally made in favour of the school; yet Law 3 says that "two umpires shall be appointed; one for each end," not "for each side." This wording is often forgotten or disregarded, and the mere fact that "foreign" umpires are engaged for inter-school matches is painfully significant. Can nothing be done to put matters on a satisfactory footing?

The next point is illustrated by the following dialogue, which is not given verbatim, but is sufficiently accurate for my purpose.

"Will you play against X school for me on Saturday?" "No." "Why not?" "Well, I went down last year; one of the masters was captain. I went on to bowl first and got two wickets in my first three overs, so I was taken off and sent to field in the country. The boys got 320, and I never had another bowl. I was put in eighth because I might knock the school bowlers about, and never got a knock at all as things went. Not me, thank you!" Now this dialogue is exaggerated to the smallest extent. In many foreign matches the "cricket master," or an "old fellow," selects and captains the opposing side, and thinks that he is doing the best he can for his school if he "coddles" the boys to the last degree, and arranges that the batsmen shall get runs and the bowlers wickets. My good friends, the cricket masters, who give me so much invaluable help, believe me that you are wrong all down the line! And for these reasons, with an intelligent limit. The boy who is really a cricketer, heart and soul, doesn't want to be coddled in this fashion; he would far sooner play a few overs from Trott and Hearne, let us say, and score fifteen or twenty runs, than make 50 or 100 off third-rate amateurs; he will not break his heart if he is bowled out first ball, knowing that he has died honourably. Nor, if he be a bowler, will his bowling be ruined or his courage damped because a Jessop or a Thornton has hit his bowling all over and out of the ground. That he expected when they came to the wicket, and he will be well pleased to have got them out in the end. Boys' hearts are not so fragile as some people think. A brother of mine once went down to play against a public school and knocked up some 120 runs in characteristic fashion. The boys were delighted, they enjoyed the smacking, did not mind the running about, and doubtless learned something; but it was quite a different matter after dinner, when over the claret the hapless smiter received a severe lecture from the head master for having "done his best to ruin some promising bowlers!" I can understand the tenderness that the nurses feel for their young charges, but as the young charges fully appreciate that cricket is cricket, I would never let nurse command the opposing side; some ruthless, merciless outsider, who plays to win and to win by a big majority, if possible, and to play the game up to the hilt, is the right man to command a side that takes on a school. I am not solitary in my belief.

I gladly pass from an unpleasant fact to a pleasant one. Rumours, which I hope and trust are founded on fact, reach my ear to the effect that the match between Harrow and Winchester is to be revived. If the rumours are true, the thanks of all cricketers are due to Drs. Wood and Burge, good sportsmen both, for the revival; it has long been an anomaly that these two great schools should not meet each other, and could only be compared on the form they could show against Eton. However, the meeting has not, as I write, been formally announced. Again, many of us would like to hear that a third match was arranged at Lord's for the first two days of the week in which Rugby meets Marlborough, and Haileybury Cheltenham. As a "beak" of experience I know that "Certificates" and "Prize Days" present a difficulty, but is the difficulty so inseparable that we could not see at Lord's, in that week, a match between some two of the following schools:—Charterhouse, Wellington, Westminster, Clifton, Malvern, Uppingham, Repton, or even the Harrow-Winchester match, to which allusion has been made? I am sure that the M.C.C. would welcome an innovation of that kind.

Here is the annual table of the performances of the leading schools.

The match between Charterhouse and Wellington was abandoned in consequence of the bad weather.

I have no satisfactory answer ready to the question often asked, "Which was the best school of the year?" I defy any one to answer it satisfactorily, except perhaps to himself, since the only data one has are the results of inter-school matches—foreign elevens are very variable in strength—and the opinions of those who are far more familiar with the doings of their own particular school than with those of others. However, coûte qui coûte, I give my own opinion, which is worth little or nothing, though I've watched a fair number of school matches, and have heard much from others. Personally I believe that Eton, Rugby, and Repton were the three best schools; on a good hard wicket I think Eton would have been first, owing to the strength of the batting; on a bowler's wicket I would have backed Repton; and on either sort of wicket Rugby would have been severely formidable. Eton was hard pressed by Winchester, but circumstances were against the Etonians; for, first, they had not discovered Hatfield; second, they were short of practice, owing to floods and inundations; third, the sad and fatal fire in one of the houses naturally re-acted on the cricketers' nerves. As things went, Eton did well to win. Harrow, of course, had bad luck in regard to illness and accident, but the defeat was so severe that one cannot write off very much on that account, though the Harrow XI. was far below its mark when it appeared at Lord's. But the thing that guides one most is the fact that Eton was exceedingly strong in every way; heaps of batting, a capital wicket-keeper, one very good bowler—Hatfield—and a very useful one in Schofield, and good fielding throughout, especially Boles in the slips. Eton wanted a lot of beating. Rugby was a very sound side, full of batting and well “ribbed up” in bowling; Eton would have had to work hard to win, and but for Colbeck's batting Rugby would have beaten Marlborough, a poor side, in a single day. Repton were very strong, and beat both Malvern and Uppingham in an innings, the Malvernians, however, put up a rare good fight, and had not Foster been badly hurt, would have saved the game perhaps; they could never have won it. Uppingham were weak. From what I saw of the Reptonians it seemed that the batting was so good that they could hardly lose a match in two days on a sound wicket, and that on a bowler's wicket they were dreadfully formidable, thanks mainly to Crawford's bowling, though the batting was good enough to get 120 to 150 runs under poor conditions. On a rather nasty wicket the Rugbeians, playing a very “open game” in the hope of winning, scored with ease and freedom off the Marlborough bowling, and though they did not win success, deserved it. Cheltenham won both their school matches, beating Marlborough by two wickets in one day, and scoring a good win over Haileybury. For all this I don't think Cheltenham were really very strong; they ought to have done more with Marlborough, for one thing; for another it did not seem to me that the Haileyburians played up to form in their second innings; but that is all in the day's work. The Haileyburians hit rashly at the slow bowling—there was no need to hurry—the ball flew in the air, and the Cheltonians held the catches with great composure; wherefore the Cheltonians deserved to win, especially as their left-hander, Taylor, played remarkably well for 75; but I must say that I fancied Haileybury. However, Wellington beat Haileybury handsomely by eight wickets, so that when all's said and done they cannot have been very strong, though, as a small Haileyburian said to me “They did beat us, but they weren't the best!” Charterhouse were a side hard to defeat, and should be grouped, probably, with Eton and Co., but for the fact that so much depended on Branston, and in a less degree on Payne. The pair failed against Westminster, but luckily Bence-Pembroke played his one great innings of the season at the critical moment. On the whole I put the Carthusian side below the first three, good as some of the individuals showed themselves to be. Rain prevented all play in the match between Wellington and Charterhouse, the result of which, had any play taken place, might have given us a line as to the comparative strength of the several sides, while, owing to a mysterious reticence on the part of the Wellington people all I know about the eleven is that Payne is an excellent wicket-keeper, and that the College beat Haileybury. I can't make bricks without straw, any more than the Hebrews could. The fielding of the Clifton eleven was remarkably good, but in other respects, with the exception of Imlay's “keeping,” the side was disappointing, and never got going after the wet wickets of early summer. The match with Cheltenham was not played, owing to illness at Cheltenham. The Westminster XI. is not ticketed as very good, but at the same time it managed to get a lot of runs, the difficulty being to get the opponents out; pretty strong opponents too do the “Pinks” face. Besides Logan, who was very excellent, there were plenty of fellows who could get runs, and Powers was very useful as a fast slinging bowler, but there was no one who could utilise a bad wicket as it ought to be utilised. The fielding was good, and Coleby's wicket-keeping very fair, though unluckily he missed Bence-Pembroke in the Charterhouse match. Logan was a wonderfully good catcher, especially in the deep field. Uppingham did not win a single match, but though severely beaten by Repton, drew favourably with Haileybury, and very unfavourably with Malvern. To Franklin-Smith's admirable wicket-keeping I have alluded, but he batted well into the bargain, though he was some way behind Hurst, a powerful hitter, who is too often in a hurry, but is a leg-break bowler of parts. Johnson is quite a promising fast bowler, swinging a bit from leg. I have no news from Malvern. Rossall lost to Shrewsbury, and could not play Loretto, as the latter school was a victim to that painful and humiliating malady, mumps. The Rossall side, however, was a pretty good one, and was not lucky in meeting Shrewsbury on a sticky wicket after five weeks of hot weather! What a land Rossall must have been to live in during 1903! Jobson batted well through out the season, and Powell, a fast bowler with a high action, was quite successful. “In fact,” says my correspondent, “cricket is very flourishing here." So mote it be! Shrewsbury had a decent side, Forman being the best batsman, Humphrys the best bowler, and Craig a wicket-keeper possessed of "a good eye and great quickness of hand." The fielding, good on the whole, was marred by nervousness, which led to missed catches. Sherborne was particularly unlucky in having both school-matches knocked off owing to mumps. To the good play of Phillip Smith and Lang I have already alluded, but Cole and Jesson were two excellent players of small size, Jesson being a capital bowler of "tosh," as well as a batsman. Bamberger is another promising bowler, and the general cricket of the side was quite up to sample. Tonbridge beat Dulwich fairly comfortably, but the eleven, without a Hutchings in it, was weak in batting, though pretty strong in bowling, and very strong in Waggett's wicket-keeping. It was curious that, notwithstanding plenty of practice, the catching was sometimes badly at fault, but Sadler and Colley did good work, the former "in the deep," and the latter at "cover." Price, Finch, and Solomon all had success with the ball. The Dulwich team is described as "rather a one-horse affair;" in fact it was Knox, et præterea nihil, Knox being lengths ahead of anyone else both in batting and bowling; however, in the latter line, he had good help from Wigg, whose slow left hand bowling was a good foil to the "fast right" of the captain. The fielding was only fair, but the general promise is good. Radley, headed by Worsley (vide supra) had a very promising side, coached by Law, the old Warwickshire "pro." Bowling was a weak point, but hard practice did much for the fielding. "This year we had a one-man side, but next season it will be a different thing." Mark this, O ye opponents of Radley! St. Paul's beat Brighton, but fell before Dulwich. Judging from the statistics, my only source of information, the batting depended largely on Wakeling, and the bowling on Stamper and Smyth, but Bromley, Critchley, and Scott all got past the rubicon of 50, which is creditable in such a beastly year—no apology for the vulgarism—as 1903. My correspondent at Eastbourne College writes "Our season was a great improvement on last year, the results being due less to our batting, which was good at times, than to general all-round play. We had three capable bowlers (Brooker, Young, and Cole) who were well supported by unusual keenness in the field, and by a good wicket-keeper." Young was lengths ahead of anyone else in the batting, though Jackson and Elliott had fair figures. Young returns to captain again in 1904, and should prove a particularly tough customer if he gets his eye in. Merchant Taylors' had a one-horse side as far as batting went, M. B. Elderton doing most of the run-getting and being in great form as a stumper. The bowling of Hammond, Wells, Vince, and Sayer pans out well against other schools of moderate calibre, but was not supported by fielding of a high class, while, outside Elderton, the batting was very mediocre; consequently results were distinctly moderate, not to say unsatisfactory; there was certainly no Raphael on the side. Nor had Felsted any great player; S. K. Mathews was quite the best batsman, but had a good following in Phillips, Ward, and C. B. Mathews; weak bowling and moderate fielding kept the side back, though it played a good game against a team of M.C.C. The Brighton College team was hardly up to the average, as the side fell before Dulwich and St. Paul's, drew with Christ's Hospital on pretty even terms, and defeated Lancing. The side had quite a good bowler in Rose, who got more wickets than all the rest of the eleven put together, and was a good batsman as well. Belcher, who captains for 1904 and was captain in 1903, should make a player if he gains strength; de Smidt is sound, and Shallow, small but good, made the only century of the year. To the Lancing cricket allusion has been made, as well as to Mathieson's good play, but a wail goes up as to some dropped catches which marred fielding that was otherwise good. I firmly believe that if every member of a school eleven had to catch twenty catches a day, easy ones, he will do well before the season is a month old; it is merely a case of training the muscles of the eye and hand, and of teaching them how to co-operate. Hurstpierpoint was not strong and not lucky, but the matches were crowded in so closely that the team got stale. Turner was a right good batsman, who scored 503 runs with a highest of 69 and an average of 36, while Verver and Smiles were quite good bowlers. Bedford Modern School, notwithstanding the presence of Oliver, who was best with the bat and best with the ball, and did great things with each, had a bad season as far as winning matches went, but the reason may be found as usual in uncertain fielding, added to wicket-keeping that was only moderate. Oliver got the best help from Willett with the bat—his figures are quite creditable—and from Pickwood with the ball. As to Bedford Grammar School, I cannot do better than quote the ipsissima verba of an old 'Varsity player who knows more about the side than I do. "Excepting that we won both school matches played, we have had but a moderately successful season. Contrary to precedent, our batting was the weak point. This was largely due to the fact that neither the captain nor Joyce 'came on' as was expected. Muirhead was the best and most consistent player on the side, and Alexander and Brander both did very fairly well. The averages show that there was no tail to the team. Peel's bowling results are the best we have had for some time, and Joyce got through a lot of work very creditably. The fielding—with two or three exceptions—was excellent, Alexander and Atkinson being much above the average. Both school matches were won by excellent cricket."

Of the six Scottish schools that compete for the championship, only three have sent me a report. Fettes, however, readily achieved the blue ribbon by drawing one match and winning three matches, our old friend the rain causing one to be abandoned. Blairlodge won two matches and lost one, "abandoned" being written against two. Trinity College, Glenalmond, had a neutral season as far as school matches went, but for the two losses bad batting was mainly responsible. As things went on, Malcolm proved himself a good scorer, likewise Clarke and Jenkinson, Daintrey being the best of the bowlers with Verel, who was especially successful in school-matches, a good second. From the others no report comes, but I note that Edinburgh Academy lost at least three games. Fettes is, however, the champion school for the second year in succession, not having lost a match in 1902 or 1903. "The chief strength of the team lay in the quality of its batsmen. Turner is undoubtedly the best all-round cricketer, but Johnstone won the proud distinction of scoring two successive centuries in school matches. The fielding, generally, was really good, the large majority having safe hands and throwing well." So "The Fettesian," and who shall gainsay it? The Blairlodge side was not strong in fielding, but rose to the occasion against Glenalmond, and improved as the year rained onwards. Russell was the best all-round player, though Noon, six times "not out," beat him in the batting averages, and Walker out-did him as a bowler. Apart from Noon and Russell the batting was only feeble, none of the rest averaging as many as 10; Hence it is not surprising to read that only to Noon, Russell, and Walker were first-eleven "colours" awarded.

The following members of the Public Schools elevens will probably, I am informed, be in residence at Oxford or Cambridge in 1904 :—

ETON v. HARROW.

Played at Lord's, Friday, Saturday, July 10, 11.—In gaining the most decisive victory in the history of games between the two Schools for nearly sixty years, Eton were mainly indebted to C. E. Hadfield, a slow left-handed bowler. This young cricketer, who had not been given a place in the eleven that met Winchester, bowled with a nice easy action, kept a really remarkable length for a school boy, frequently made the ball come with his arm and in the two innings of Harrow took a dozen wickets at a cost of less than eight runs apiece. Even at the one time that he met with any approach to punishment, he never became at all loose. Not since E. M. Dowson was at his best for Harrow, had so promising a bowler appeared in the Eton and Harrow match. Considering how much skill and judgment he showed, he ought—unless given too much work on plumb wickets—to have a big future before him. Eton's superiority was quite as marked in batting, for although Harrow certainly possessed a fine player in Bailey, the Dark Blues had no such set of run-getters as their opponents possessed in Nicholl, Crankshaw and Williams. Nicholl only scored 44 but he batted in most attractive style. Crankshaw, who enjoyed the distinction of making 100 in an hour and fifty minutes, did not cut much but hit finely to leg and drove in rare form while Williams, whose 89 was in some respects the best innings of the day, scored all round the wicket in delightful fashion and was especially strong on a stroke between cover-point and mid-off. In addition to the brilliant batting and skilful bowling shown for Eton, there was some very smart fielding, so the side acquitted themselves admirably at all departments of the game.

The match was practically won on the first day when Eton dismissed their opponents in two hours and a half for 115, and then in just over four hours ran up a total of 425. Harrow, who enjoyed the assistance of four old choices in Baily, Bolton, Barnes, and Phelps, never looked like putting a good score together, fully an hour passing by before a single noticeable hit was made off Hadfield. Six wickets fell for 78 runs and though Crake and Forster by capital cricket added 35 in half-an-hour, the last three wickets went down for two runs. Only Nicholl, Williams and Campbell of the Eton eleven had previously appeared at Lord's. From the first the Light Blues played most brilliant cricket, forcing the pace to such excellent purpose that they were more than 150 runs ahead before the Harrow bowlers had any chance of settling down. To begin with, Nicholl and Crankshaw hit up 87 in the first forty-five minutes. The Eton captain was then dismissed by a very fast ball from Foster, but by most punishing and attractive cricket Crankshaw and Williams added 123 runs in an hour for the second wicket, and Boles assisted Williams to put on 62 more in thirty-five minutes. Barnes (medium left) bowled with some success during the next half-hour. The game changing from 272 for three wickets to 294 for six. The batting regained the upper hand with Tod and Lucas together, these two making 64 in three quarters of an hour for the seventh wicket. Tod played most refreshing cricket but, of course, by the time he went in the Harrow bowling had lost any sting it originally possessed. The last wicket yielded 30 runs in less than ten minutes, Scholfield hitting four 4's in one over. With the close of the innings stumps were drawn for the day.

Wanting 310 runs to escape a single innings defeat, Harrow on Saturday morning at first collapsed in such deplorable fashion before the bowling of Hadfield, that within fifty minutes of the start of play, six wickets were actually down for 27 runs. To add to the desperate nature of the position Baily, receiving a severe blow on the knee, had been compelled to retire and it was not known at the moment whether he would resume his innings. Happily, he was not only able to return to the wicket but played such fine cricket that in company with Bolton he added 101 runs in an hour and a half. The spirited and skilful work displayed by these two batsmen robbed the defeat sustained by Harrow of much of the bitterness which would have attached to it had the side gone down without the semblance of a struggle. Bailey hit all round the wicket with excellent judgment but at last fell a victim to Hadfield, driving one ball splendidly to the on and skying the next to mid off where Lambert—to the obvious relief of his colleagues—brought off the catch. Bolton, after showing strong defence for a couple of hours, was easily taken at slip and just before lunch time, with Harrow all out for 156, Eton could claim a splendid victory by an innings and 154 runs. Eton's success gave general satisfaction for the Light Blues had not beaten Harrow since 1893, while prior to that encounter their most recent success was gained in 1887, A. C. Maclaren and F. S. Jackson making their first appearance on Lord's ground on that occasion. Among the company present on Saturday was Mr. R. J. P. Broughton, one of the trustees of the Marylebone Club, who, celebrating that day his eighty-seventh birthday, had captained Harrow against Eton, sixty-nine years previously.

1864. Harrow won by an innings and 67 runs.	1903. Eton won by an innings and 154 runs.

Seventy-eight matches have been played, of which Eton have won twenty-nine, Harrow thirty-three, and sixteen have been drawn. This is the generally published record, but Harrow men object very strongly to the game in 1805 being treated as a regular contest between the two schools, contending that it is no more correct to count that than the fixture in 1857, for boys under twenty, which has been rejected. Fourteen three-figure innings have now been played in matches between the schools, as follows :—E. Bailey, 152 in 1841 ; T. G. O. Cole, 142 in 1897 ; A. K. Watson, 135 in 1885 ; A. W. Ridley, 117 in 1871 ; C. P. Foley, 114 in 1886 ; W. F. Forbes, 113 in 1876 ; A. W. T. Daniel, 112 not out in 1860 ; C. J. Ottaway, 108 in 1867 ; E. Crawley, 100 in 1885 ; R. B. Hoare, 108 in 1888 ; J. H. Stogden, 124 in 1895 ; and H. C. Pilkington, 101 ; B. J. T. Bosanquet, 120, both in 1896 ; and E. N. S. Crankshaw, 100 in 1903.

RUGBY v. MARLBOROUGH.

Played at LORD'S, Wednesday, Thursday, July 29, 30.—As rain prevented any cricket on the Wednesday there was never much chance of this Schools' game being played to a finish, but in the full day's play that took place on Thursday all the honours went to Rugby, and at the end Marlborough with only a couple of wickets to fall were but 53 runs on. Cozens-Hardy, Harrison and Tripp batted admirably for Rugby, who declared their innings with a lead of 97, but failed to get their rivals out in the last two hours. Snowden, the captain, carried off the bowling honours for Rugby who were assisted by six old choices, while of Marlborough's team ten were new to the match.

CHELTENHAM v. HAILEYBURY.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 31, August 1.—By scoring 206 against 122 and then dismissing one Cheltenham boy for 30 runs in the third innings on the opening day, Haileybury obtained so great an advantage that their victory seemed assured on the Saturday, but thanks to Taylor and Weddell, and later on to Marsden, the captain, the western school fairly pulled the game round, and Haileybury were set 127 to win. This, as it happened, proved too great a task, for, though 40 went up with only one man out, Weddell's bowling was altogether too good for the others. Assisted by the smart wicket-keeping of Taylor, he dismissed seven batsmen for 21 runs, and was largely instrumental in Cheltenham's meritorious victory by 49 runs.

ETON v. WINCHESTER.

Played at ETON, Wednesday, Thursday, June 24, 25.—After a capital match in which, on the second day, the fortunes often changed, Eton won by 43 runs. They secured an advantage on the first afternoon, getting a lead of 45 runs and then scoring 9 without loss. Winchester were ultimately set 218 to get to win, and when they had 160 up with only four men out they looked to have the game in hand. Upon Weatherby's dismissal, however, the Winchester boys completely lost their heads, and the last six wickets fell in half-an-hour for 14 runs. For Eton Nicholl batted extremely well, several of his off-drives being very powerful, while Evans—fast right-hand—bowled with effect. Weatherby showed by far the best form for Winchester, making his runs in admirable style in both innings. Owing to the wet state of the Playing Fields, the match was played on the new ground called Agar's Plough.
