

JOHN WISDEN'S
CRICKETERS' ALMANACK
FOR 1909

WILLOWS REPRINT

PUBLIC SCHOOL CRICKET IN 1908.

By C. TOPPIN.

I was interested a few weeks ago to observe a statement by a critic of the game, whose remarks are, as a rule, admirable and full of point. In the course of a general review of the first-class cricket of the year he asserted that in the case of the leading amateurs, Messrs. Fry, Warner, and H. K. Foster among the number, their respective schools cannot well claim to have taught them the style and strokes to which they owe their present prominence. The inference, I suppose, that we are invited to draw is that the training of our school cricketers has hitherto been based on an absolutely false system, and that the young aspirant to future honours in the cricket field is only taught on the school ground things which will have to be avoided, and lessons which will require to be unlearnt in the future, before he can hope to be a good batsman; in short, that he must have the courage to cast away the tradition of the elders, and evolve for himself a new system of salvation. One would be disposed to ask whether the assertion is the result of personal interviews with the cricketers whose names he has cited. It would, for example, be interesting to know whether Warner considers that he was taught cricket on an absolutely wrong system at Rugby, where, by the way, I should have written him down as a most assiduous and painstaking learner, and whether H. K. Foster is prepared to assert that his cheery and vigorous style of attacking the bowling was not, in the first instance, acquired at Malvern, or again, whether Fry does not believe that he laid the foundation of his success at Repton. But, say the Arabs, "A man cannot be wise without experience," and again, "Mind and experience are like water and earth co-operating, neither of them alone can bring forth a flower." The best two-year-old that was ever foaled would probably be found incapable of winning the Derby, and we do not expect the head boy on the Mathematical Side of a Public School to step straight out of the school class-room into the Senior Wranglership. But when the blue ribbon of either the Turf or University is won, is all the credit to rest with that man alone, be he trainer or private coach, who has put on the final polish? Fry, Warner, and Foster, among others, are simply so many instances of boys who were excellent types of orthodox cricket when they left school, with such a ground work of soundness that, having had the leisure to learn and the genius to profit by a few extra lessons won by experience, the development of manifold scoring strokes was bound to follow. Imagine the converse and picture the results, direct and indirect, of attempting to teach a boy Bosanquet's leg-glide from a ball a foot or two outside the off stump, or Ranjitsinhji's flick to leg with a cross bat. I am constrained to go a step further, and suggest that school boys are expected to force the game too much now-a-days. A Jessop appears but once in a generation, hardly even that. Here again the word genius comes in. No man living can play the kind of game which he produces, and no man living has had so great an influence on the game. His would-be imitators are innumerable, especially among the inexperienced, and almost as many are the promising cricketers who have been spoilt by insisting on adopting from the start of their innings forcing tactics, which only the genius can carry out, and that at comparatively rare intervals. I do not for a moment advocate slow cricket, but I do deprecate, on every ground, the idea that a boy who is content to play a maiden over is an indifferent batsman.

But let me get somewhat closer to my allotted task. The annual encounter between a Public School Eleven and a side of amateurs representing the M.C.C. again took place at Lord's. But the match was robbed of a good deal of its interest by the fact that the boys' eleven could not be considered in any way representative of the school cricket of the year. The difficulties of securing a fully representative side seem to be almost insuperable, and it is a great pity that this is the case. At the same time, the principle, which I believe to be in vogue now, of asking one member of each of the leading schools to play, can hardly be a sound one. There were many notable absentees from the schools' side this year, including Greswell, Sale, Sharp, and Altham of Repton, Crutchley and Lawson-Smith from Harrow, Evans from Winchester, Wolfson from Marlborough, and Hammond from Haileybury. And yet the game was not altogether a waste of time, for two or three of the boys, notably Susskind (University College School), Prest (Malvern), and Lagden (Marlborough), acquitted themselves with some distinction. If it could once become a coveted distinction to be selected for this match, and the side were really representative of school cricket for the year, the game would be well worth seeing, and, indeed, surpassed in interest by very few in the course of the season.

While I again propose to make no attempt to classify the various school elevens in order of merit, the majority of critics, I fancy, would award the place of honour to Repton. That school for the last five or six years has turned out first-rate sides, and possibly this year's lot were stronger than any of their predecessors. They had no player of the calibre of J. N. Crawford, nor of Young, but there was batting, and sound batting too, to the eleventh man, and their attack, both in bowling and fielding, I have never seen surpassed by a school side. But, and I do not say this to detract from Repton's achievement, they were first in what was, I believe, a singularly lean year. Very few of the other leading cricket schools had teams up to their average, while, in most instances, they fell far short of it. Nor is it easy to account for this fact. The conditions were, more or less, normal in respect of weather, which, starting wet and none too warm in May, improved out of all knowing, so that by the end of July the general verdict was that we had had a fine summer term, which might have been expected to produce some notable school cricket.

The following table gives, in more or less succinct form, the results of the most important school engagements. For convenience sake I divide them into somewhat arbitrary groups.

- (1) Harrow beat Eton.
Eton beat Winchester.
- (2) Marlborough beat Rugby, and drew with Cheltenham.
Cheltenham beat Clifton, and drew with Haileybury.
- (3) Repton beat Malvern and Uppingham.
Haileybury beat Uppingham, and drew with Wellington.
Clifton beat Malvern.
- (4) Charterhouse beat Wellington and Westminster.
- (5) Shrewsbury did not play Rossall owing to illness.
Rossall drew with Loretto.
- (6) Tonbridge beat Dulwich and Sherborne.
Sherborne beat Radley.
Radley beat Bradfield.
Dulwich beat Bradfield.
- (7) Oundle beat Leys.
Leys beat Bedford and University College School.
Bedford beat Dulwich, and drew with St. Paul's and Merchant Taylors.
- (8) Eastbourne beat Lancing.
Lancing beat Christ's Hospital.
Brighton beat Lancing.

Harrow had a really good side, with great variety of bowling, some good batting, and a fielding lot that were constantly on the move and looking out for work. They were on top of Eton from the very first in the great match at Lord's. It was a game played under conditions which would test the most experienced of cricketers, for the weather and wicket were both nasty, after a long spell of hard fast wickets; and the fact that Harrow proved the better side at all points of the game, would seem to show that that they were very much the stronger combination. They had in G. E. V. Crutchley one of the best school batsmen of the year. He has telling strokes all round the wicket, with a strong partiality for driving and cutting, and he is no mean bowler. He should be a tower of strength to the side next year. Besides Crutchley they had three very useful batsmen in Anson, Lawson-Smith (who played an invaluable innings at Lord's), and Lang, who captained the side with good judgment, and is a sound wicket-keeper. Altogether, with ten out of the eleven capable of making runs, four or five really useful bowlers, who formed a stronger combination than they have had for some years, and a fielding side which held most things that came in their way, they were a team which would have taken some holding. Eton were by no means a good side, and had a disappointing season. It is true that they won the Winchester match easily, but this is very largely discounted by the fact that Winchester, owing to a visitation of that ridiculous complaint, mumps, could only place what was little more than a second eleven in the field. As I have suggested above, Eton cut, more or less, a sorry figure at Lord's. Their batting, especially in the first innings, was feeble, their fielding left much to be desired, while the bowling, which, after all, was their strongest department, was not very effective. The conditions were, no doubt, disheartening, the loss of the toss a distinct advantage to their opponents, and the failure of their captain and crack batsman a trial to their nerves. But still, when all is said and done, their all-round display was not a great one. I often wonder whether forward play is not too much exaggerated among school boys, and not least among Eton boys. It is a delightful method of treating the ball when the wickets are fast and true, but a most dangerous habit to the inexperienced when the pace of the wicket is slower and the ball requires more watching. "Reach out to 'em, Sir" used to be the cry of the old-fashioned coach, but I verily believe that he was wrong, and that the "half cock" shot is the best for all defensive purposes. Benson, one of the best of triers, did not fulfil the expectations which were formed of him last year, and the Harrow boys must have been considerably elated to see him dismissed twice in four balls for half as many runs. Cartwright was the best all-round cricketer on the side. Possessed of strong physique, he can bowl as fast as you like and as long as you like, while he is a sound fielder and a strong, effective batsman. Useful members of the side were Fowler, a cricketer of some promise, who bowls slow with a somewhat exaggerated break, and makes runs, and Twining, a wicket-keeper of good class, who catches well, but is apt to give away too many 'extras'. His batting record has been rather disappointing. Cruel fortune, in the form of the visitation of mumps to which I have already alluded, ruined what chance the Winchester side might have had of coming through the term with credit. But they were a weak side at best. The batting was moderate in quality and quantity, and much below the school standard, the bowling, with the exception of Evans, also of mediocre merit, but the fielding was good, and Gilroy, the stumper, excellent. The Eton match was a farce, the Wykehamists taking the field without Evans, Parke, Habershon, and Young, while Gilroy went straight from the sick room to the wickets to take charge of the side, and keep wicket extremely well. If both sides had been at full strength the game might have been a close thing but, as it was, the Wykehamists were beaten, though not ingloriously, in an innings. Evans, son of a famous father, was easily their best cricketer, and he goes up to Oxford with excellent credentials as a sound batsman and a good slow medium bowler and slip fielder. Huson played a very plucky innings against Eton, and is a sound, though possibly dull, bat, who is very difficult to dislodge. Parke, who showed such promise in 1907, hardly came up to expectations, and seems scarcely to have recovered his nerve from the nasty blow he received that year. It may be that it is not loss of nerve so much as lack of inches, but he is certainly weak at anything in the shape of a rising ball. I have already drawn attention to Gilroy's stumping. He is described as being quite up to "Varsity form." Apart from the four names I have mentioned, the cricket of the side was very moderate.

First division of the first-class is the place assigned to the Marlborough eleven of this year, and the division is a small one. They had all the elements of a well-balanced side, with plenty of batting, some of which was very good, excellent fielding and stumping, at least one bowler of class, and last, but by no means least, a captain who knew his business, and who was a big asset to the side. With the addition of another bowler of something like Wolfson's calibre they would have been a remarkably good side. As it was, they lost but one of their eight fixtures, and that the first game of the season. The Rugby match produced some good cricket on both sides, but the Marlborough boys were easily the better combination, and won handsomely by 200 runs, Wolfson, in the second innings, securing nine Rugby wickets at a small cost. They played a remarkable game with Liverpool, in which over 1,200 runs were made within two days, and Lagden entered the comparatively small band of double 'centurions.' In him they had a batsman of high class, who could hit with discrimination, and who should secure a good trial at Oxford next summer. Womersley, their excellent captain, is a very sound bat and fine field, while Brooks is a natural batsman and fast scorer, who, moreover, has the knack of coming off when most wanted. With other useful batsmen in Shaw, Scott, and Leventhorpe, they proved themselves a difficult side to dislodge. If, as I have suggested, they had possessed another bowler of real class, I should have backed them in shillings to half-pence against any other school side of the year. Rugby again were no more than a fair side. It is true that they had several dangerous batsmen in the team, but their bowling was distinctly weak, without much skill or variety, and the fielding, with the possible exceptions of Poulton and Forrester, slow and uncertain. Had it not been for the fact that in King they had an exceptionally good stumper, their attack generally must have occasioned them some concern. They met their masters at Lord's in Marlborough, who were on top all the way, in spite of plucky cricket by Sharpe and Rait-Kerr. R. Cunningham was easily their best performer, a capital bat and useful bowler, but moderate field. Rait-Kerr could generally be depended on for runs, as is shown by his average of 34 with a highest innings of 66, and Poulton is one of the vigorous kind with a strong partiality for leg strokes. As they seem likely to have nine of this year's lot in residence next summer, they should have high hopes of better things to come, and a turn of the tables in their classic match at Lord's.

Charterhouse were impartial in their results, winning, losing, and drawing four matches. Among their wins were their two school matches—Westminster easily, and their one day game with Wellington by 67 runs. And these two successes relieved the season from mediocrity. They were not a strong side, but they improved as the term advanced. Probably their most promising cricketer was Emley, a really good fast bowler, and he is very fast for his age. I see that one critic describes him as having too long a run, and therefore soon tiring. There is a limit, of course, but personally I do not believe that the few extra yards run make any appreciable difference to a bowler's lasting powers. The effort comes in the act of delivering the ball, and considerable impetus is necessary. Some require more than others, and it is simply a matter of suiting the impetus to the delivery. Wilson was wonderfully consistent with the bat, and was clearly the "stand-by" of the side. He does not affect a great style, but he can play either the dogged or dashing game, and may make his mark at Cambridge. Atkinson is a really good cricketer, a stylish bat, useful bowler, and fine field. The prospects for next year are good and I shall be interested to see how the fast bowler fares. Westminster had a fairly satisfactory season, and, if the Charterhouse match could be eliminated from their programme and memories, they would have every reason to be pleased with themselves. But once more the Carthusians were too strong for them, and in spite of all the hopes and anticipations that, this year, they would begin to wipe off something from the debtor side of the sheet, they had to retire beaten by an innings and some runs. Turner was easily the best player on the side, and his record is a good one. He is one of the sound, watchful sort, with a variety of crisp strokes, but perhaps hardly flashy enough to attract the authorities at Cambridge. Ranson, Gow, and Reed did pretty well with the bat, and Wood comes out with creditable bowling figures. In some ways they play old-fashioned cricket at Vincent Square, for the wickets are not too good and everything is run out. Bowling was fairly plentiful and steady, but not startling in quality, and the fielding, as a whole, good, with occasional epidemics of catch dropping. But, and this explains a lot, there was no real wicket-keeper in the school, and the side consequently entered the field very severely handicapped. There were distinct elements of strength in the Wellington side. Nine of the eleven could, and did, make runs, and had averages ranging from 32 to 20; they had two quite average bowlers, and their fielding was, as a whole, good, with one or two weak spots. They succumbed to Charterhouse after a good match, in which Atkinson, for Charterhouse, played a great game, and made nearly half the runs, and they were unfortunate in not bringing the Haileybury match to a conclusion, but being left with little more than half-an-hour, in which to make 155 runs, the task was impossible. The two best batsmen on the side were Kidd and Arkwright, both of whom play sound, attractive cricket, and, as the former comes out top of the bowling figures and is an excellent field, he is one of the sort whom most captains would welcome on their side. Field was another of the useful kind, for he not only made runs with some regularity but he kept his bowling end up, and shared with Kidd the honours in this direction. While there was no real "flier" on the side, there was an unusual number of really good school cricketers among them, and they were distinctly unlucky in winning neither of the school games. I should be inclined to say that they were the strongest of the three sides.

I doubt whether any school has, for some years, produced a better, or even as good, an eleven as Repton turned out this year. Their record of five wins, as against three lost and two drawn games, is somewhat misleading. The two latter games were both in favour of the school. In the case of the lost games, A. O. Jones "got going" for the Notts Amateurs to the tune of 113 out of 209, after the school had been dismissed for 179; in the old Reptonian match J. N. Crawford was responsible for 79 and 153, and then bowled the boys out for 154 on a crumbling wicket, while against Burton, such was the condition of the wicket that the loss of the toss meant the loss of the match. They gained a signal triumph over Uppingham, and their victory over Malvern was almost grotesque. But perhaps their most remarkable win was against a strong Quidnunc side, whom they dismissed for 184, and then proceeded to knock off the runs for the loss of one wicket! Criticise as one may, it is difficult to find a weak spot in their all-round merit. Their bowling was admirable, with Greswell, who was found good enough to bowl out Yorkshire inter alios in August, to lead them. His record for the school is excellent, but, in spite of figures, I cannot help thinking that Vidler is a bowler with greater possibilities. Their fielding, especially on the off side, was worth seeing, while with regard to their batting it is only necessary to say that ten of the eleven were really good. To my mind the pick of the basket were Sharp and Sale. The former watches the ball well, and seems to have scoring strokes all round his wicket, while Sale is one of the dashing sort, who, yet, does not seem to play outside himself, and his style is excellent. Altham played some extremely useful cricket for his side, but I could not help feeling that he was more the made than the natural cricketer. Altogether they were a remarkable side, and not the least remarkable fact about them was that during August, out of the eleven, Altham played for Surrey with some success, Greswell for Somerset, Sharp for Leicestershire, and Sale for Derbyshire. Campbell and Cardew were asked to play for Surrey and Somerset respectively, and Vidler appeared for Sussex Second Eleven. I doubt whether such a record has ever been surpassed by a school eleven. Malvern started the season with high hopes, for they had an excellent nucleus for their side, and some promising material for the gaps, but they could never get going as an eleven, and the matches which they won were mainly the result of individual efforts. If it were possible to except the school matches, their record would be quite a good one. But there's the rub. Both school matches were lost, and chroniclers had to go back eighteen years for a parallel. Against Clifton it may be that an excess of self-confidence on the part of Malvern and a swerving left-hand bowler on the Clifton side were the main causes of the defeat. Anyhow, the rout was severe and inexcusable. Against the redoubtable Repton side no play was possible before 4.30 on the first day, and having the misfortune to lose the toss, on an easy, lifeless wicket, and a wet ball to deal with, the Malvernians were placed at a disadvantage, which they could ill afford. At the same time no excuse could be offered for their miserable display in both their innings. And yet there was any amount of cricket on the side. It is doubtful whether Prest had a superior as a batsman among the school boys of the year. He plays in excellent style, with a full quiver of fine forcing strokes anywhere except behind point. As he is a fine field into the bargain, he should come very near his "Blue" at Cambridge. Foster, a forceful bat with a variety of telling shots, lacks, as yet, the requisite soundness before he can follow his brothers in the first flight. Kirby played some useful innings, but Hughes could not produce the form which he undoubtedly possesses. In the bowling line, Tuff certainly did not improve on his previous form and the others did not greatly help him. In a word, disappointment is writ large on the annals of Malvern cricket of '08. The record of Uppingham cricket again proves dismal reading. For the second year in succession they can point to no victory, and this time seven losses and two drawn games out of nine fixtures is a disheartening performance. The fielding was, as a whole, good, and they had a capital stumper in Tomlin, but the bowling was woefully weak, none of their regular bowlers having an average of under 29. Nor could any very pronounced merit be found among the run-getters. Most of them could play with a straight bat, but there was too little disposition to put the bat against the ball, with the result that their display was mainly tame and uninteresting. Fawcus was the most consistent and serviceable scorer, and three of his four innings in school matches were highly creditable. All friends of the game must wish more success to a school which has been one of the greatest nurseries of amateur cricket in the past.

The Cheltenham cricket was comparatively free from remarkable incident. Their match with Marlborough was hopelessly drawn owing to wet weather, but against Haileybury at Lord's the Cheltenham boys were set to get 266 in one hundred and forty minutes and gamely went for them, with the result that they lost seven good wickets, and were eventually saved from defeat by a capital piece of defensive cricket on the part of Dickinson. Things looked ominous after an innings apiece in the Clifton match, but Brown and Dickinson rose to the occasion, and dismissed their opponents for 76 and, with Light backing them up by some invaluable batting, Cheltenham won in fine style by six wickets. Dickinson had been their crack bowler of the year before, but this year much of his attention was devoted to batting, and he came out top of both averages with very respectable figures. Brown and Reid proved two extremely useful members of the side, the latter especially being one of the right sort, who could rise to an emergency and pull his side out of a hole. Considering the fact that there was only one member of last year's side available, the results of the term's cricket were eminently satisfactory. The Haileybury boys could do no more than win two of their matches, losing six, and drawing six others. One of their wins was at the expense of their old foes from Uppingham, a result mainly due to the excellent bowling of Waller, and some level batting by his confrères. But they were not a strong side. It is true that they had one capital bat in Hammond, who has quite fulfilled the expectations formed of him last year, and some other useful batsmen in de Freitas, Dawson, and Stafford, but their bowling was distinctly on the weak side. The brunt of the attack was borne by Waller, a really good leg-break bowler, who spins the ball well, and is not, like so many of his kind, too slow, but he was poorly supported by the rest of his brigade. Pawle shapes well, both with bat and ball, and as he will be two more years on the side he should make his mark before he leaves. I hear encouraging reports of promising material among the "colts," so that, with six of this year's lot to start with next year, they should give a good account of themselves. Clifton are to be congratulated on showing distinctly better form than they have done for the past few summers. There seemed to be more of the real cricket spirit about the side, and the fact that they severely trounced Malvern should add to their amour propre. At one time they looked like beating Cheltenham too, but they collapsed dreadfully in their second innings and easily lost the game. Their strength undoubtedly lay in their bowling and fielding. Ball, a fastish left-hander, with a swinging yorker, is uncertain, but on his day he is very good, and Brownlee is also one of the swinging sort. The latter is easily the best cricketer on the side, for, besides being a competent bowler, he is a batsman of high promise and a fine field. I trust that he has grown out of the carelessness which spoilt his cricket last year. The batting of the side, as a whole, was nothing remarkable, indeed it could hardly be strong, for no one in the course of the season was responsible for more than 73 runs in an innings, and only four of them got over 50.

Tonbridge are to be congratulated on turning out a remarkably good side, possibly one of the best which has ever represented the school. They started their programme in great form by winning eight matches off the reel, and were then pulled up by the Free Foresters, who defeated them by one run. But even this was a moral victory for the boys, as they were compelled to bat with ten men, the absentee being their crack, Bannister. They triumphed with ease in both their school encounters, beating Dulwich in a low scoring game by 90 runs and Sherborne by an innings and 80 runs. In spite of strong batting figures, it is safe to say that the strength of the side lay in their attack, for they had, in Bannister, C. Marzetti, and Bourdillon, three extremely useful bowlers, who were a capital foil for each other, and only once failed to dismiss their opponents cheaply. Bannister, too, was easily top of the batting averages, and I should be inclined to place him as very nearly the best all-round school cricketer of the year. It seemed a sad lack of enterprise on the part of Leicestershire not to give him a trial during August. Knott, too, who has two or three more school seasons before him, and Knight proved reliable run-getters, while five others of the side were capable of making 60 runs and upwards. Altogether, I should be inclined to place the Tonbridge eleven in a very small class at the top of the tree of school sides of the year. Dulwich easily met their masters in their game with Tonbridge, and succumbed also to Bedford by a few runs in a low scoring game, but won the rubber in their other school matches. They were quite a capital side, with plenty of batting—their lowest average was 13—which was backed up by some useful bowling, and the fielding was first-rate. Their two best performers were Meade and Waddington. The former is an excellent all-round player, who should prove a capital recruit for soldier cricket later on, while Waddington, who goes to Oxford, besides being a fine fielder, watches the ball carefully and drives with some power. Altogether, they were a side which was well up to the average, and their prospects for another year are full of promise. With the exception of their encounter with Tonbridge, when they were distinctly outclassed, the Sherborne boys have every reason to be satisfied with their results. They were a keen side, with no very pronounced batting merit, but some quite respectable bowling, which was backed up by excellent fielding. "Far and away the best fielding eleven seen on the ground this year," is an authoritative comment. They do things thoroughly and systematically in this respect at Sherborne, and their methods might well be adopted by other schools to their advantage. Carey was their most dependable bat, though he never succeeded in running up a big score, and in Taylor they possess an all-round cricketer of distinct merit. With eight of this year's lot staying on and plenty of new blood to draw from, they should give a good account of themselves next year. Radley played Sherborne for the first time this year, and had a capital game with them which ended in a victory for the latter on the first innings. They had a very close shave with Bradfield, winning only by a narrow margin of runs, after some exciting cricket. They were a side well up to the average with level lot of batting, and two bowlers of more than average merit in Willcocks and Ames, fastish left and right hand respectively, and up-to-date swervers. There was no real star among the run-getters, the best of the lot being Bruton, Babington, and Vidal. Bradfield again had to be content with a moderate amount of success, among their lost games being their two school encounters, with Dulwich and Radley. The former beat them easily, a timely stand by two of their tail alone saving the side from sheer annihilation. But against Radley they put up a good fight, and were just beaten by their opponents' last wicket. I hear a grumble, which seems justified, that they do not play enough matches. Eight innings apiece, which is more than the eleven averaged, does not seem a liberal allowance. With so few chances of distinction, boys are likely to be much too excited to do themselves real justice. The acquisition of a fine new ground, which is shortly to come into use, instead of the present narrow, sloping ground, should do much to develop Bradfield cricket in the future. They accomplished a very creditable performance against a useful M.C.C. side, thanks to a capital innings by Jugpen, and I had it from one of the visiting bowlers that they were one of the best school sides he had played against for a long time. Possibly with more scope, they might have proved his assertion to be more correct than it seems.

The Shrewsbury side were a stronger lot than they have had for some years. It was very bad fortune that their solitary school match, with Rossall, could not be played owing to illness, but two or three of their games produced some very sporting cricket. Against Exeter College, after making 202, the boys ran the last three of their opponents out and won by one run, while against the Aliens they declared at 318 for six wickets, and were defeated by three wickets at the last ball of the match, 637 runs having been made in four and three-quarter hours. Bardsley was easily their best cricketer, and his record of a batting average of 40, with a highest score of 90, and bowling average of fifty-three wickets for 17 runs apiece, was a very fine piece of work. He has another year at school, and should do great things. Burton was his understudy in both departments. With seven of the pick of this year's lot they ought to turn out a fine side next year, but they must secure a reliable stumper. Owing to the fact that, for various reasons, three of their fixtures fell through, the results of Rossall cricket are meagre in the extreme. The outstanding feature was Sleight's bowling, which is fastish with a swerve. He goes up to Cambridge, and if he continues to improve he should be heard of again. Ling and Furneaux were the best batsmen on the side, and were consistent without doing anything very startling. Faulty wicket-keeping seems to have been almost epidemic among the schools this year, and Rossall were no exception to the general failing. It is a far cry to Sedbergh, snugly hidden away among the hills and dales of Yorkshire, where the weather is apt to play sad pranks with the summer game. With a final score of four wins and six losses, they were only moderately successful, a result chiefly due, I am told, to fielding, which was exceptionally bad! Their best cricketer was Lockhart, a very fair bat, and not a bad disciple of the 'googly' order of bowlers. Their most promising batsman was Thursby, while Scott, besides being the best fielder on the side, must have been a very consistent scorer.

Leys School embarked on an ambitious programme of twenty fixtures, including no less than six school matches. They had a fine game with University College School, and won, as the chronicler has it, by one ball. This is literally true, for, when the last over came, their opponents had three wickets to fall, but Guibell rose to the occasion and dismissed the trio in five balls. The batting was very much dependent on Hollaway and Pinkham, the former of whom is a capital all-round cricketer and the latter is that rara avis, a powerful hitter and consistent scorer. Without these two the side would have fared badly. I should add that Hollaway played a very fine innings of 220, not out, against a pretty good M.C.C. side, and it was a distinctly creditable performance on the part of the boys, after declaring with four wickets down, nearly to succeed in getting rid of their opponents. Reports on Bedford Grammar School are not so pessimistic as they were last year. Their results are not too flattering, but it must be noted that in the majority of the lost matches, so narrow was the margin, that a slice of luck, or, it may be, another dependable bowler would have turned them into victories. A win over Dulwich, after a close game, a loss to Leys School, and drawn games with St. Paul's and Merchant Taylors, was the tale of their school matches. They had a good bat in Sutherland, and a left-hand bowler of more than average merit in Grierson, but their catching, I am told on good authority, was extremely uncertain. The St. Paul's eleven fared badly against Dulwich, otherwise they would have had little cause for self-reproach. It may be that, as the Pauline puts it, four successive school matches were too much for them. They vanquished Brighton College and Mill Hill, and drew evenly with Bedford Grammar School. The bowling, led by Sargent, was distinctly stronger than the batting, though it must be noted that they had, at least, four useful scorers, the most promising of whom was Fender, who, though only 15 years old, was seen to advantage in goodish Sussex cricket during August. I am told that he made 1,200 runs during the month. Nothing of much note is to be gleaned from the doings of the Oundle eleven. They began the season with their four bowlers of last year, but found some difficulty in unearthing any reliable batting, with the result that they only succeeded in winning two of their ten matches. Their most creditable performance was their win over the Leys School, a much stronger side, when Gore-Brown bowled nine of his opponents and caught the tenth. Forest School turned out only a moderate team. The bowling was distinctly on the weak side, and the fielding was not too good. Of the batsmen I fancy that Morris was the best, though he does not come out with the best figures. With ten losses to one victory they could hardly consider their season a successful one. Merchant Taylors had a very poor season, Forest School being their only victims out of twelve matches played. Indeed, so weak was the supply of material, that they were obliged to adopt the unusual course of leaving the last three places on the side vacant. Though only two of the boys succeeded in winning "talent money," there was some fair batting shewn by the first four or five men on the side, but, as the Taylorian graphically puts it, "the tail end was usually skittled out for not many more than ten runs." The bowling was dreadfully weak, and practically all of the same kind.

Eastbourne College cannot complain of dulness during their summer term, for they entered on a campaign of eighteen fixtures, not to mention a modest sixteen for their second eleven. And this year they emerged from the ordeal with some credit, though I cannot help noticing that all their last eight matches were either lost or drawn. Can it be that this was due to staleness? They had an extraordinary game with King's School, Canterbury, which is deserving of record. Eastbourne declared at 309 with three wickets down, two of them run out, and their opponents responded with 345 for the same number of victims, one run out, with half an hour to spare. It was all in a day's work, and the school paper puts it well. "In the course of the day, ten bowlers, slaving like niggers, between them secured three wickets at a cost of 650 runs!" Coxhead was out and away their best cricketer and heads both bowling and batting statistics with very respectable figures, and Dennys, Tudor, and Cranfield had capital averages considering the number of innings they played. The Lancing boys were not seen at their best against Brighton College, but this was their worst performance, and, speaking generally, they had quite a satisfactory season. Hopewell and Wilkinson, their next year's captain, were their best batsmen, and several others showed good form on occasions, but their bowling was weak and uncertain. Nothing very startling was to be found in this year's cricket at Epsom College. They had a very fair fast bowler in D. J. Evans, and some useful batsmen in Stanley, Walker, and Macphail, but I notice a severe criticism in connection with the fielding of the last named player. "Good field when the ball goes to him, but is too slack to run for it." I hope that this is not literally true. But fielding seems to have been a weak feature of their cricket. The Felsted eleven had a fairly satisfactory term, winning two games as against two losses. Their bowling was poor and wanting in variety, but this was, to some extent, counterbalanced by some capital fielding and catching. Jewell was their star performer and his record ranks him as a cricketer of distinct class. Besides him, Hamilton, Page, and Morris were quite up to the average. There was a lot of level batting merit to be found on the Mill Hill side, but no real "flier," while the bowling was efficient, so far as it went, but there was a degree of sameness about it. More than half their matches were drawn, and, as the scoring, as a rule, was low, it would almost appear that their cricket days are on the short side. Mention should be made of some capital work by Harris among the bowling brigade.

The competition for champion honours among the Scotch schools produced some interesting cricket, but it must be confessed that its quality never attained a very high standard. Watson's College, who were champions last year, fell from their high estate and resigned the honour to Loretto, who were admittedly the best side of the year, though more than one of their rivals gave them a severe fright. For instance, against Merchiston, they were dismissed for 81, but Dempster, their captain and out and away their best cricketer, rose to the occasion, and secured the first five wickets of his opponents for 0 runs! They had, also, a capital tussle with Fettes, who, thanks to an excellent innings by Moir, secured a creditable draw against their stronger opponents. With four wins and one drawn game, they were easily the best school side north of the Tweed. Dempster was in a class by himself as an all-round cricketer, and his bowling and batting figures are excellent. R. Gillespie, Clay, and Hunting were also useful members of the side, and altogether they were a combination well above the average. Merchiston Castle were the most likely runners up in the competition, and beat all their other opponents except Loretto. They had four capital cricketers in R. Fraser, Myles, A. Fraser, and Cameron, the first named of whom always seemed to have the happy knack of coming off when most wanted, as witnessed by his performance against Loretto. Fettes had some fair batting, with Moir as their crack in this department, but their bowling was weak, and they were not a side which inspired much confidence. Edinburgh Academy had three useful bowlers, but otherwise they were a poor side. Chief interest with them centred in the doings of Crole, who is only 13 years old, and small for his age. I am told, on good authority, that he is extremely promising. At all events, before he leaves school, his experience of inter-school matches will be considerable. Neither Watson's nor Glenalmond made much of a show in the competition. The former were well led by W. G. Stuart, but he had very little backing.

To summarise briefly, the pick of school batsmen seem to be Bannister (Tonbridge), Crutchley (Harrow), Altham, Sharp, and Sale (Repton), Prest (Malvern), Lagden, Womersley (Marlborough), Hammond (Haileybury), Susskind (University College School), and the best bowlers were Greswell (Repton), Bannister and Marzetti (Tonbridge), Wolfson (Marlborough). Evans, of Winchester, would, like Bannister, almost qualify for either list. Wicket-keeping was very poorly represented, but I should select Gilroy (Winchester), King (Rugby), and Tomlin (Uppingham) as the best. My selected side for the year would be, Altham (capt), Gilroy, Sharp, Greswell, Bannister, Crutchley, Prest, Lagden, Wolfson, Marzetti, and the last place would lie between Susskind, the specialist, and Evans, the all-round man, with a leaning towards the latter for his short slip fielding as an extra arrow in his quiver. I am fain to admit that this is not as strong a side as I picked last year. It has a longer batting tail than I like.

ETON v. HARROW.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 10, 11.—Judging from the previous form of the two sides there seemed every reason to expect a good fight between the schools, but the match was played on a soft pitch and Harrow, adapting themselves far better than their opponents to the conditions that prevailed, gained an easy victory by ten wickets. On a fast ground the Eton batsmen would, no doubt, have made plenty of runs, but a Lord's wicket spoilt by rain was altogether too much for them. Harrow really won the game at the start, Crutchley and Lawson-Smith putting on 120 runs in an hour and a half for the second wicket. At lunch time four wickets had fallen for 201 and, though the innings was afterwards finished off in five and twenty minutes, a total of 210, as events proved, placed the side in an unbeatable position. Crutchley played in a style that earned him unstinted praise. It was the general opinion that, allowing for the state of the ground, a finer innings than his 74 had not for years been seen in the match. He showed himself master of a great variety of strokes, and the certainty with which he timed the ball on the slow wicket was, in the case of a school batsman, extraordinary. He gave no chance and, if the ball had travelled faster in the deep field, he would, without a doubt, have had the satisfaction of getting a hundred. In point of class his batting dwarfed everything else in the game. Lawson-Smith, who took out his bat for 79, did not bear comparison with Crutchley as regards style, but he drove with plenty of power and steadily improved upon a moderate beginning. He was at the wickets for rather more than three hours. Of the Eton bowlers Cartwright, who took five wickets for 44 runs, was a long way the best. The fielding was far below the usual Eton standard, many runs being given away through want of cleanness in picking up the ball.

After lunch the wicket had become more difficult than before, and Eton, going in just after half-past three, gave a deplorable exhibition. Benson, who played so finely in 1907, was bowled in the first over, and when rain, after causing one stoppage, cut the afternoon's cricket short, six wickets were down for 37. Stumps were pulled up at ten minutes past six. On Saturday the weather, after a dull morning, turned out delightfully fine, but an easy victory for Harrow was so assured that little interest could be taken in the cricket. At one time it seemed certain that the match would be over before lunch. Eton finished off their first innings in something over half-an-hour for 71 and, following on against a balance of 139, they lost six wickets in fifty minutes for 42 runs. However, Windsor-Clive, Tennyson, and Worsley did something to redeem the batting reputation of their side, all playing with far more resolution than had previously been shown. Worsley's fine driving saved the single innings defeat after luncheon, but Harrow had only fourteen runs to get, this number being hit off in ten minutes. Crutchley followed up his brilliant success as a batsman by taking in all eight wickets for less than six runs each. He made the ball swing in rather awkwardly. Anson, though not so successful, bowled very steadily. Crutchley and Lawson-Smith were both new to the match.

		1908.	Harrow won by ten wickets.

Eighty-three matches have been played, of which Eton have won thirty-one Harrow thirty-five, and seventeen have been drawn. This is the generally published record, but Harrow men object very strongly to the game in 1805 being treated as a regular contest between the two schools, contending that it is no more correct to count that than the fixture in 1857, for boys under twenty, which has been rejected.

Seventeen three-figure innings have now been played in matches between the two schools, as follows:—

183	D. C. Boles	(in 1904), Eton.	112*	A. W. T. Daniel	(in 1860), Harrow.
152	E. Bayley	(in 1841), Eton.	108	C. J. Ottaway	(in 1869), Eton.
142	T. G. O. Cole	(in 1897), Harrow.	108	R. B. Hoare	(in 1888), Harrow.
135	A. K. Watson	(in 1885), Harrow.	101	H. C. Pilkington	(in 1896), Eton.
124	J. H. Stogden	(in 1895), Harrow.	100	E. Crawley	(in 1885), Harrow.
120	B. J. T. Bosanquet	(in 1896), Eton.	100	E. N. S. Crankshaw	(in 1903), Eton.
117	A. W. Ridley	(in 1871), Eton.	100*	M. C. Bird	(in 1907), Harrow.
114	C. P. Foley	(in 1886), Eton.	131	M. C. Bird	(in 1907), Harrow.
113	W. F. Forbes	(in 1876), Eton.

In making his 183 Boles set up a new record for the match, beating the 152 obtained in 1841 by Emilius Bayley, now the Rev. Sir John Robert Laurie. Bird in 1907 by scoring 100 not out and 131 performed a feat without precedent in the match.

CHELTENHAM v. HAILEYBURY.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 31, August 1.—Time did not permit this interesting school match to be finished but, after an extremely close game up to a point, Haileybury secured a big advantage. They, however, left their declaration in the second innings too late, and Cheltenham managed to draw. The position was all in favour of Haileybury for the others with only three wickets in hand required 137 runs to win.

WINCHESTER v. ETON.

Played at WINCHESTER, Friday, Saturday, July 3, 4.—Illness kept four of the regular Winchester eleven out of the match and, thus weakened, the home side could not make much of a fight of it, Eton winning easily in an innings with 14 runs to spare. On the first day Huson played splendid cricket for two hours and forty minutes, hitting nine 4's. He received poor support, however, and the whole side were out for 238, Cartwright bowling with considerable effect. Against that Eton made 410 for six wickets before declaring, Windsor Clive and Cartwright putting on 143 in an hour and three-quarters for the sixth partnership. Both batted extremely well. Going in a second time, Winchester lost five wickets for 30 runs, but Fleming and Balfour made 61 together for the last wicket, and so put a little better appearance on the score. Once more Cartwright bowled well, and in the whole match he had a record of ten wickets for 110 runs, in addition to scoring 102 not out.
