

PUBLIC SCHOOL CRICKET IN 1927.

By H. S. ALTHAM.

The cricket season of 1927 is already sure of an unenviable immortality, but, writing as I do of school cricket only, I feel bound to register a rather reluctant protest against its wholesale condemnation. I fancy that in the West and the North it showed its true malevolence early enough. July was universally deplorable, and the 'Schools' festival at Lord's was as wet, but not wetter, than of recent years. But May, if generally cold, was as generally fine, and at most schools in the South and the Midlands batsmen enjoyed a first-rate opening month's practice on almost uniformly fast wickets. That, at any rate, was our experience at Winchester when I never remember more cricket being played right down to the end of June. Of course, when the weather finally broke, batsmen were in trouble, but the real players soon learned to adapt themselves, whilst one and all were the better for their opening month, which more than ever convinced me that only on fast wickets can the average school batsman learn strokes and confidence.

My 'preamble' this year must be reduced to a minimum, but the comments of one or two of my correspondents make a reference to one issue almost inevitable. Ever since the M.C.C. inaugurated a 'Representative Schools Match' at Lord's in 1904, competition for places in the side, or, as they now are, sides, has grown steadily keener, until now selection confers a distinction very much coveted, not only by the candidates themselves, but for them by their schools and, perhaps not least, by their coaches, both amateur and professional. With competition so keen and the field so big, it is quite inevitable that there should be disappointments: but from what I have heard I gather that in some quarters there is the feeling that the good cricketer at the smaller school has no chance compared with the moderate cricketer at the big school.

Now as I happen to know just a little about the facts I would ask the critics to consider them. The body of school cricket is enormous, the general standard steadily rising, and if there are fewer school cricketers each year of the class that picks itself, there are more and more who, on performances at any rate, must be candidates for selection. The M.C.C. have no elaborate intelligence service for school cricket: they cannot send off a G.S.O. to watch X bat or Y bowl: even when the schools are playing at Lord's it is probably true that the Secretary's office sees least of the game. Inevitably they are dependent on figures and on such reports as reach them. In considering figures they quite naturally consider the class of opposition involved and the sort of wicket on which runs have been made or wickets taken : there is, for example, no denying the fact that the schools in or within a reasonable radius of London meet better sides than those further afield, whilst a batting average of 40 at Marlborough probably means rather less than the same figures at Clifton. But what the authorities at Lord's really want is information : best of all is it when it comes from a responsible authority who can speak from a whole season's knowledge, but corroborative evidence may also be invaluable. For instance A, the master in charge of cricket at Blank, may write in mid-June and say that he recommends for consideration a batsman "the best we have had for three years and with an average at the moment of 53;" good evidence enough, but not, it may be, decisive : then along comes B who has gone down to Blank for the Foresters and says "I saw that Blank boy the other day : he only got 15, but he is the real thing all right," and together these testimonials carry the day. I am quite sure that the M.C.C. secretary would welcome all such reports, made in good faith and from experienced sources : in a sense that may complicate an already most difficult task by increasing the number of recommended candidates, but there will be no complaint on that score if the field is worth the backing : the one desire at Lord's is to give all possible schools and candidates the fullest possible consideration.

It was a thousand pities that the August Bank Holiday should have been hopelessly wet and so have ruined what promised to be a most interesting game between two good sides. On the Tuesday the Lord's Schools established a decided advantage, and though the cricket after tea, with a result out of the question, rather lacked malevolence, I left the ground with the impression that they were, on a turning wicket, distinctly the stronger team, especially in attack. Heywood, at the beginning of the game, had looked really difficult, even if not always accurate, and, though Whittaker was quite ordinary, Ward had again shown unmistakably what a good bowler he was last year at Lord's. Conversely 'The Rest' bowlers were disappointing : Tew looked very troublesome for three overs, and subsequently rather commonplace ; Hay, though always steady, was little more and did not seem to have developed from last year, while neither Skene nor Elliott produced anything like the bowling form that had made them such terrors at Sedburgh and Wrekin. Elliott, both in action and ball-control, I found particularly disappointing, but I am told by those who knew his bowling best that he was by this time seriously stale, and that in June he was a really good school bowler.

The batting on both sides was singularly uneven : Human and Skene played capitably and saved their side from complete collapse, nobody else scoring more than five ! Skene's innings was thoroughly sound and convincing, old-headed yet never dull, whilst Human hit with a very stout heart, good wrists and clear eye, quick footwork, and a pleasant variety of strokes. Against the weaker attack the Lord's Schools looked more at home, but only three batsmen exceeded twenty. Wellings played like a good school No. 1, as he certainly is, and Stewart, though he gives hostages to fortune and looks as if there were holes in his defence, hit very well, especially on the off side, whilst Lindsay, though he never seemed really able to time the ball and had not much to bat against in the last hour, proved himself watchful and determined.

The task of selecting the side against the Army proved more than ordinarily difficult, contemporary form and performance having to be most carefully weighed against the records of the past term, but the side that eventually took the field, if perhaps a little lacking in variety of attack, strikes me as the best that has done duty for the Schools for some years—a conclusion that seems well supported by the course of the match.

It is true that on the first day the Schools owed a great deal to Fleming who, combining a most watchful defence and great patience with the will and the ability to drive and hook very hard, played extremely well for his 110 : but though no one else played a really considerable innings, the later half of the side batted well for useful totals. The final score 261, on a wicket that was for most of the innings quite easy, was reasonably good but no more, for the Army bowling, with Lieut. Gore not swinging the ball dangerously and Captain Joy only fast medium, was not particularly formidable. Ward and Heywood bowled definitely well to dismiss the Army for 215, which might have been considerably less but for a last wicket stand of 36, but by lunch time on the Thursday the Schools, with five wickets down for 58, had lost all their advantage.

Once more Fleming, alone of the opening batsmen, played in his best form. Only a hundred runs on and with plenty of time yet to go, there was now a very good chance of the Schools losing the match, but as they had done for 'the Rest' two days before, so once again Skene and Human came gallantly to the rescue. Indeed, once the immediate danger of a collapse had been averted, Skene made runs at a capital pace and Heywood hitting well also, Kingsley was able to declare at tea, leaving the Army 259 to get in two and half hours. This they looked no more like doing than losing the match, but their last innings did give Ward the opportunity of bowling very accurately again and the Schools side as a whole of fielding extremely well.

The Army were not so strong a side as they had been in some years of late, but there was general agreement that the form of the Public Schools had been definitely good. Kingsley's failure was a great disappointment and the best compliment I can pay him is to say that I do not think it seriously affected his reputation. Whittaker in the Army match was disappointing, but he bowled extremely well for Sussex in the following week. Baiss had a bad match, but fielded splendidly; the same may be said of Wellings, by this time obviously tired; Skene, if he disappointed as a bowler—probably another case of over-work—did splendidly as a batsman, and both Ward and Heywood were school bowlers some way above the ordinarily good. On a fast wicket I should rank Heywood as the more dangerous to good batsmen, but, when the ball turned, Ward was nearly always difficult, whilst on all wickets his steady persistency and command of length were quite exceptional. In the three games in which he played at Lord's, versus Harrow, 'The Rest,' and The Army, he bowled 145 overs for 178 runs and fifteen wickets!

A year ago I attempted a list of the best school cricketers other than those selected for the representative games at Lord's: when I began looking through the past season's records with the same end in view, I was almost deterred by the number of strong candidates a pretty clear indication, it seems to me, of the strength of school cricket in 1927. No such list is likely to be comprehensive and any such must invite criticism, but the following at least seem to suggest themselves for mention:—Of batsmen Woollatt (Cheltenham), Carlisle (Harrow), Sheepshanks (Eton), Benn (Wellington), Perkins (Uppingham), Neame (Haileybury), Olliff (St. Paul's), and Goodwin (Whitgift); Of bowlers Townsend (Winchester), Tilly (Clifton), Jarratt (Uppingham), Bland (Shrewsbury), Peart (Whitgift), Cruickshank (Glenalmond), Rutter (Tonbridge), and Johnson (Charterhouse); whilst there seems to be so many good all-rounders that I should really have liked to back the following side of them against either the Lord's Schools or the Rest:—Staples (Shrewsbury), Brett (Winchester), Crawford (Tonbridge), Garthwaite C. C. (Wellington), Sime (Bedford), Brown (Leys), Bradshaw (Malvern), Green (Brighton), Felton (St. Paul's), Wennink (Haileybury), and Tod (Edinburgh Academy): and even then there are half-a-dozen or so more clamouring for places!

The inter-school matches of last season produced collateral form more than usually perplexing, witness for instance the cricket played by Eton, Winchester, and Harrow against each other. The two first-named were unbeaten throughout the season: personally I believe that the experience and skill of their opening pair gave the Wykehamists an advantage, slight on a turning wicket, considerable on a fast one, over the Etonians, but that Harrow were much nearer to both than common opinion held. Haileybury were obviously another thoroughly good school side and Wellington, with four school scalps to the belt, another. Cheltenham seem to have been the best of the Western schools. It was a pity that they should have had the worst of the wicket against Haileybury, and that Tonbridge, another team with a good record, should have played so much below form at Lord's. Bedford were clearly the best in their group and were another unbeaten side. In the Midlands Rugby and Uppingham were the strongest.

The Eton and Harrow match was drawn for the sixth year in succession, thanks to rain on the second morning, to the unwillingness or inability of the authorities at Lord's to allow the teams to lunch early at short notice, and to some very slow batting against some very good bowling. In a sense I thought that some of the critics were rather inconsistent in praising to the skies the bowling of Whittaker and Ward and in the same breath heartily damning the Harrow batting. The two Etonians certainly bowled a wonderful length for a remarkably long time—178 overs for 92 runs and 14 wickets, is their collective record for the match! The wicket after lunch on the second day was never easy and for an hour or more was very difficult: Harrow had to hold the fort for four hours and hold it they did by a skilful defence and a degree of patience and tenacity that deserved much more recognition than it received. And yet—one wonders: is this the legacy of "test-match" cricket, and if so, is it worth having?

For the second year running Eton went through their season undefeated: of actual victories there were only two, but of the nine draws four were moral wins and only Winchester had clearly the better of the argument at the finish. Throughout May the wickets on Upper Club were fast and easy, and runs came readily enough: no batsman scored really consistently, but nearly all of them at one time or another played a considerable innings. When the vagaries of the weather began in June, however, it was soon obvious that there was more attack than defence about the Eton batting and right up to the last moment Whittaker had a hard task in picking his side. Witness the fact that Sheepshanks, hero of the Winchester match, was only picked at the very last moment, and then largely on the strength of his fielding. On the other hand the Eton bowling, which had been rather ordinary on the hard wickets became distinctly formidable when the ball began to turn. For a long time Whittaker was out of form, probably owing to his trying to spin the ball too much on the plumb wickets, gripping it too tight, and so losing his rhythm. Personally I do not think that he ever recovered his 1926 accuracy, but by July he was again a school bowler much above the average and his bowling played a big part in the moral victory at Lord's.

Ward, though his thirty-three wickets—the same bag as his captain's—cost slightly more, got through an immense amount of work; indeed he bowled very nearly permanently at one end or another, and was, to my mind, the more difficult bowler of the two. Perhaps he bowled just a little short of a length, and certainly his best ball had an exasperating way of beating everything, but on a wicket that helped him he was definitely difficult and his accuracy quite extraordinary. The other Eton bowlers did not bowl very much and were nothing out of the way when they did : Hubbard was a tear-away left hander, quite likely to get an occasional wicket ; Capel-Cure could spin the ball and knew what he was doing, but never could get his leg-breaks under real control ; Harbord, though criticised as "too plain," could both spin and swing the ball and, with more match practice and self-confidence might, I believe, become very distinctly better than ordinary. The Eton fielding was up to standard, with Sheepshanks perhaps the best of them.

The last named, with his excellent century against Winchester and his attractive batting on the Friday night at Lord's, was the surprise packet of the Eton side : he was known to have strokes and to time the ball well, but until he played against Winchester, his excellent defence and judgment had hardly been suspected. An attractive and resourceful player, he will captain Eton this summer and may very well prove himself an exceptional school batsman. For all Sheepshank's success, I shall still pick Capel-Cure as the best of the Eton batsmen, in the sense that he would, I think, have been the most likely of them to make runs against real bowling. He is compact, neat on his feet, plays all his strokes with decision, is strong on the leg-side, and he does watch the ball—in fact a definitely good player. Harbord constantly made 25 or 30 runs quite excellently, only to get out for no apparent reason—a failing that greater experience and concentration may well remedy. Nearly all the others could bat, though Ward and Packe did not make nearly as many runs as was hoped of them, but Buckston, a capable wicket-keeper, must surely have been one of the best school No. 11's on record. Against Winchester he just never looked like getting out !

To sum up, then, Eton, by virtue of their two left hand bowlers, were always a dangerous side on a turning wicket though I do not think their batting was sound or consistent enough for them to be rated as an exceptional school side. On fast wickets they would probably have made many runs, but in attack too much would then have depended on Ward. Sheepshanks will only have Hazelrigg and Gosling to support him next May, but the new members of an Eton side always seem much more mature than those of any others.

Harrow drew seven of their eleven fixtures, lost three of the remaining four, were beaten by Charterhouse, and were only saved by time from a heavy defeat at Lord's. And yet I am not at all inclined to regard them as a bad side. Perhaps I am prejudiced by the fact that they gave Winchester such a bad fright in 'Riddings' in June, but I should have liked to see them play Eton on a fast wicket : very likely three days would have been needed to reach a result, but there would, to my thinking, have been a rare struggle. The truth was that Harrow were essentially a fast wicket side : Robinson had not developed as a spin bowler and the attack really consisted of Palmer, who could not last, but could bowl really quick for a few overs with a late swerve, two good, steady, body-swing bowlers in Rome and Mathieson, who always took some playing, and Raphael, a bowler of rather similar type, who might be quite bad but could be definitely good. As these four bowled at Winchester, the attack was lively and accurate, in fact much above school average. Moreover, though the catching was rather erratic, the Harrow fielding was very keen, and Lindsay a good, sound, stumper.

Of the batting I feel rather less certain : against Winchester Lindsay, who really played very well indeed, and scored the first century ever made for Harrow against Winchester, had hardly any support at all : at Lord's the Harrovians were only seen with their backs to the wall, but he who saw most of them and should know best tells me that in fine weather their batting was good. Lindsay is an awkward looking, rather stodgy, player, but he has first-rate judgment, a most watchful defence, and is good on the leg-side. I am told that when roused, he can hit extremely hard, but I fancy those occasions were not common. Rome and Carlisle were up-standing, straight-batted players who scored pretty consistently and were always good to watch. Calthorpe was a 'racket-batsman,' unsound but with strokes and courage ; Clover-Brown, if his style was 'cribb'd, cabin'd and confined,' was a determined man who kept on getting runs, whilst young Shuckburgh struck me as really promising in method and temperament alike. There may have been something of a tail to the side, but Raphael, who is lowest but one in the averages, showed himself quite definitely a batsman at Lord's. Lindsay is staying on for a second year as captain, and Raphael, Rome, Robinson and Shuckburgh are a capital residue from last year's side.

Winchester were probably as good as any school eleven of the year : in fact on a fast wicket at the end of June and, given that the ball would swing, I would have backed them in guineas to pounds against all comers. They had in Kingsley and Fleming an opening pair of batsmen of exceptional resource and experience, one or other of whom was more rather than less likely to make 50 to 100 runs ; Brett proved an excellent No. 3, Atkinson, for the greater part of the season, was very sound and reliable ; Milligan and Guise were, on fast wickets at any rate, dangerous players, liable to rattle up 30 or 40 quickly, for they both had wrists and strokes and believed in attacking the ball. The later Winchester batsmen were always short of match practice, owing to the prowess of their earlier champions, but they were far from being passengers, as witness the average of Townsend, their No. 10 !

In attack, too, the side was definitely strong : Tew, now very big and strong, had got over his back-trouble of 1926, and for the greater part of the year bowled very well, attacking the off-stump more than he did and varying a late swing with an occasional break back: Brett, who for a new comer had a really fine season with both bat and ball, relied chiefly on the in-swing which at times, notably against the Old Wykehamists and Charterhouse, he bowled extremely well. At others—and unfortunately both Eton and Harrow matches were amongst them—he could not make the ball ‘run,’ and became immediately rather plain. Mason, still a name to conjure with at Winchester, was steady and very useful as a relief, whilst Townsend, after losing his length for three weeks, recovered it just in time for Eton and on the Saturday morning on Agar’s Plough bowled as well as I ever expect to see a boy leg-spinner bowl—a verdict which I know George Hirst would altogether endorse. Atkinson could also bowl left hand slow quite sensibly, but hardly ever got on.

Unbeaten throughout the season, Winchester were only once seriously in danger: this was against Harrow, at home, when after dismissing them for quite a moderate score, which, but for an admirable century by the Harrow captain, would have been in the region of the sensational, the Wykehamists’ batsmen cut up badly and were only saved by time from decisive defeat: Marlborough, as usual, provided a splendid day’s cricket and a most exciting match: the failure of the earlier Winchester batsmen before lunch was redeemed by a prolonged and admirable wagging of the tail: a good start by their bowlers was almost countered by a stout Marlboro’ recovery, but the new ball at 200 settled the issue. Charterhouse were outplayed and annihilated, Kingsley and Fleming, aided by some fortune, playing a long partnership and the bowlers being at their very best.

The Eton match was memorable for several things: for the fact that the groundsman, wholly without orders, had covered the wicket overnight, a proceeding that may quite possibly have made the difference between the match being finished or not: for Fleming’s 210 and its magnificent driving, for the complete failure of the later Winchester batsmen to drive home their early advantage; for Townsend’s splendid bowling on the Saturday morning; and finally for Sheepshanks’ century, and the wonderful stand of 144 in two hours and ten minutes by him and Buckston for the tenth Eton wicket—a stand in which Luck played no part at all, and which saved the follow-on and with it, if not the match, at least a very unpleasant situation for Eton.

Fleming’s innings was the second highest ever made in the match, second to J. L. Guise’s 278 in 1921. He was twice missed, once at slip and once off a hard hit to mid-off before he had scored 50, but he made astonishingly few false strokes, and kept his head admirably, while for power and persistency I have not seen driving to equal his in school cricket since J. N. Crawford was at Repton. For the second year running Fleming came out with very fine figures for his school season and scored over 1,000 runs in good club cricket after term. Yet well though he did, I cannot put him quite on the same level, at any rate in potentiality, as his captain. Kingsley was five years at “Lord’s” and five appearances against Eton is a Wykehamical record; last year he was definitely stronger than before, driving much more powerfully in front of the wicket without losing any of his soundness of defence or quickness of footwork. At Eton, though his scoring was, for him, quite modest, he looked like, and was widely hailed as, a first-class batsman. A fieldsman whom one could not put wrong anywhere, he is an exceptionally fine slip, and his temperament for all ball games is admirable.

One is always rather afraid of one’s personal prejudices, so that in repeating my belief that the Winchester eleven of 1927 was something out of the ordinary I call up two supports: first the considered verdict of Mr. E. R. Wilson that they were stronger than the well-known side of 1904, and secondly the following simple statistics: for 82 completed innings last season the Wykehamists averaged just on 38 per man: their opponents, for 123 innings, barely 17!

Scott leads the team this year, Townsend, Brett, and four other old choices will be available.

My Rugby correspondent a twelve-month ago singled out Monkhouse and Pearson as two promising cricketers and very well has his forecast been justified by events. Monkhouse last season playing thoroughly sound, watchful, determined cricket, averaged close on 50 an innings and should be well worth watching in the Parks next season: he may not be spectacular, but as a school cricketer he was certainly reliable. Pearson, his partner in Rugby’s opening pair, was a batsman of pleasant method and much the best bowler in the side: just under medium in pace, he could keep a length and, given any help from the wicket, his off-spin was apt to prove formidable. Against Uppingham he clean bowled their first three batsmen for ten runs; in the big match at Lord’s he had a very successful spell of bowling and then batted attractively for 40 runs. Unfortunately there was little to support Pearson in attack: Dawson could bowl quite fast, but was rather badly handicapped by a strain; Sallitt had one glorious half-hour against Uppingham, but that was all, and Blunt, a really steady bowler with a swing-in from the off, was not discovered until so late in the half that he never got an innings for the school! Apart from Monkhouse and Pearson there was no great class about the Rugby batting, but nearly all the others could get runs and had the admirable habit of getting them when they were wanted: Dawson was quite a good dasher, at his best against Clifton.

This Clifton match which, owing to a confusion about dates, was confined to one day, ended after some free scoring against some very moderate bowling (it was miserably cold) in a draw materially in Rugby's favour; against Uppingham Rugby had very much the better of the wicket and won comfortably, whilst the Marlborough match was altogether spoilt by rain. To sum up then, a vigorous side, not strong enough in bowling to be dangerous, but effective enough in batting to be difficult to beat. Dawson is captain elect and has, I believe, four old choices to support him.

It must be some time since Marlborough went through a cricket season without tasting blood, but such was their fate last year. Results, however, can be deceptive, and I am not inclined to rank them as among the weaker school sides. As usual with them since the war, their strength was collective rather than individual, and it is really rather remarkable how year after year they go on turning out half-a-dozen men who can bowl quite respectably and two or more of them with the sinister hand. Is it the bracing air on that lovely down that makes them all want to bowl or is it the slope on their junior game wickets that flatters them into thinking they can, or the sleepless eye of their cricket 'Providence' that drives them to it? What is more, that attack is generally—and this year was no exception—supported by very good fielding: nothing surprising in that, for the man who does not want to field on that beautiful ground does not deserve to wear white buck.

The only drawback of having so many bowlers is that they take some managing: in the nature of things the attack will be better handled some years than others, and I gather that this was one of the others. Of the individual bowlers Armstrong came out with the best figures, and with his puzzling flight was at times quite good: Pank, the other stock right-hander, got his arm well up and could swing the ball from leg, but neither of the left-handers, Marley and Morton, quite fulfilled expectations. There were two slow bowlers of whom more use might have been made: Hewan, though expensive, took nine Cheltenham wickets. In batting they were a very level lot, with Neilson, the captain, and Paul just outstanding. In a fine fielding side the last-named stood out and was something like a class fieldsman on the off side. Morton was perhaps the best all-round cricketer in the eleven, and Comber was certainly a wicket-keeper of very great promise: he is quick, and takes the ball very close to the stumps.

As usual Marlborough's game with Winchester produced an intensely interesting day's cricket, and if, the good Winchester eleven got home with something to spare at the end, it was only after a bad fright in the morning and a distinctly uncomfortable quarter of an hour in the evening, when Morton batted excellently and looked as if he might pull the game round. The same player had been the only one to try to stem the tide in a really rather disastrous match against Wellington. The two-day fixture with Cheltenham away ended in an even draw after the most interesting vicissitudes. Marlborough were 74 down on the first innings but, with Armstrong and Page making 114 for the first wicket in the second and Neilson and Page putting on another hundred for the next, they were fully on terms by lunch on the Saturday: the later batsmen made useful scores and Cheltenham were set 301 to win, a tall order in a fourth innings. Six wickets fell for 152, but light rain began to fall and though Marlborough stuck pluckily to their task for another hour, conditions became almost hopeless for the fielding side and the ninth Cheltenham wicket put on the best part of 100 runs. The majority of last year's team will still be at school in May, and Marlborough should be a school eleven above the average: I do not know who is to be captain.

Cheltenham disappointed themselves by collapsing badly before the strong Haileybury side at Lord's and being beaten by an innings and this after they had played Marlborough to an even draw and beaten Clifton who beat Tonbridge. The Clifton game was played on a rain-affected pitch and was practically won for Cheltenham by four men, Bryce-Smith who scored 52 in the first innings, Woollatt with 71 in the second, and Taite and Wellings who together took all but one of the twenty Clifton wickets. Against Marlborough Woollatt batted splendidly for 99 not out and 37, and Wellings got runs well both innings. The same player strove nobly to stem the tide against Haileybury, but missed catches by the Cheltonians, and some good bowling by the opposition left the margin a wide one at the finish. Had the catching all through the season been sounder, the Cheltenham attack would have been, at least, adequate, if always rather lacking in variety.

The batting, so long as the weather held, prospered, but on turning wickets the sheep were rather sharply divided from the goats. Kempster, though a batting average of 28 is certainly not to be despised, was, I gather, rather unlucky—his left hand was injured for all the Lord's match—but he proved a vigorous and popular captain. Woollatt came somewhere near fulfilling his promise of two years back and is clearly a batsman of exceptional gifts: given good health and good weather this summer, I shall be rather surprised if he does not come to the very front. Lovegrove and Bryce-Smith were both very useful batsmen and Martin again kept wicket very well. But the backbone of the side was Wellings, clearly one of the best school cricketers of the year: his performance on the first day at Lord's, when after taking seven wickets for 113 runs in thirty-six overs he went in first and batted through the innings for 44 undefeated, gives some idea of his value to the side. When I saw him at Lord's in the following week his bowling had, quite naturally, lost most of its life, but his bag of forty-seven wickets is the largest I have noted at any of the leading schools, and it is good to see such success attending a bowler of the old fashioned type who bowls a length and spins the ball. As a batsman, too, he is on thoroughly sound lines, watches the ball, and has the gift of 'cricket sense.' The captain for next season had not been elected at the time my information reached me, but five old colours were expected to be staying on.

Clifton won but a solitary one out of their programme of eleven matches, but inasmuch as that one was the all-important game with Tonbridge and that victory in it came by a very narrow margin, after hair-raising vicissitudes, and very much 'præter opinionem,' its memory still lingers pleasantly in Clifton minds to the exclusion of less pleasant recollections. This was clearly a great cricket match, not perhaps in the level of its technique, but certainly in extraordinary and dramatic vagaries and in the fighting spirit which again and again redeemed a seemingly lost cause. Clifton started horribly by losing five wickets for eight runs, then Owen and Tilly, by the pluckiest hitting, added 56 in half-an-hour and the last three batsmen collected 54 between them. On a wicket that gave the bowlers some help, that was at least not hopeless. By tea time Tonbridge, thanks chiefly to Baiss and Crawford, had 127 for three, but their later batsmen failed almost as badly as the Clifton leaders, and what might have been a decisive lead was reduced to a paltry 22. In the last forty minutes, however, Clifton lost four wickets for 31 and the game seemed almost over.

Next morning Owen was soon out and Habibullah, badly hurt in the field overnight, found batting impossible and had to retire: but Cornes who had gone in first played well and soundly, and Watt, last choice for the eleven, took his courage in both hands and hit. In just over an hour these two added 91, when Cornes was out and Watts followed him almost at once. Habibullah, with a man to run for him, came in again and after two further quick disasters found a gallant partner in the last man, Crawford; together they actually added 55 runs and 'all was to play for again.' Once again Baiss batted finely, but after making 58 runs was bowled by a good break-back: Armour hung on grimly, but the wickets began to fall. Tilly kept a captain's length, Cornes caught two splendid catches, Clark, brought on again at the crisis, shot out the last two men and Clifton were home by eleven runs.

I have written at such length about this dramatic game, that I have room for but little other comment. Clifton lost to Cheltenham rather easily on mud, and had a good deal the worst of the draw with Rugby on a good wicket. Their batting figures read very modestly: Cornes had quite a satisfactory season and may become good, Owen hit well, and Kettlewell played one or two good innings, but, in common with most of the eleven, was very inconsistent. In bowling Tilly, the captain, got through an immense amount of work, and Peck gave him good support, especially with the new ball, but the attack badly lacked variety and was not too well supported in the field. Mention should be made, however, of Tilly's fielding and catching at point—not the modern square 'cover,' but the genuine old-fashioned article, where the Coroner used to stand 'at the point of the bat.' If, as is expected, the captain is again available this season, together with Cornes and three other old colours, Clifton should have the nucleus of quite a useful side.

As Lord's recompensed Clifton, so did it bitterly disappoint Tonbridge. They went up there with a good record and with confidence in themselves, only to find their form had deserted them, to collapse twice with the bat and twice to be flouted by tail-end batsmen when the match seemed theirs. Both their other school games, against Westminster and Lancing, were drawn, though in each Tonbridge had the better of the argument. In club games their record is definitely good and goes some way to bear out the verdict of my local correspondent that at the beginning of July they were a strong side. They had a good opening pair of batsmen in Baiss and Armour, the latter very sound and stolid; the former, if he will keep his head and go on learning, quite likely to develop into a first-class player: there is no doubt at all about the class of his fielding. Dods, a left-hander, likes hitting the ball and played some fine innings and Davies showed considerable promise.

The averages and the Clifton match rather suggest that there was something of a tail, but I have heard nothing to that effect from Tonbridge. In bowling, the captain Tucker, got through an immense amount of work and came out with a good record, but I do not think he was quite the bowler he was in 1926. Rutter, who is young, supported him admirably and his figures prove clearly that he can keep a length. Smith was useful with his pace and Crawford, with fifteen wickets at a cheap cost in addition to 500 runs from his bat, seems clearly the all-round man of the side. Tucker led the team well and the fielding was good. Baiss succeeds him in the leadership and five others of last year's team survive.

I realised only too late that my good friend Mr. Hake, who keeps me au fait with Haileybury cricket, was away in South Africa, and emergency enquiries proving unavailing, I find myself distressingly ignorant about a team that was clearly one of the best of the year. Let me then apologise in advance for failing to do justice to the gifts of individuals. At Lord's I saw both Heywood and Stewart and was told that both Neame and Wennink might quite well have been in "The Rest" side too. Heywood looked a definitely good bowler, not so elastic as that other Haileyburian, R. J. O. Meyer, but with something of his life and pace off the pitch: he is strong too. His bowling average of eleven for thirty-eight wickets proves that he is accurate, and altogether I shall expect him to make a decided mark in bigger cricket. Wennink bowled after the same style and like Heywood could bat more than a bit, and if some of the change bowling, to judge from figures, seemed to have been rather mild, there is always merit in variety and five out of the six bowlers tried in the Cheltenham first innings of 120 tasted blood.

The batting was definitely strong and it is good to hear of a side that believed in attacking the bowling and hitting the bad ball hard. Seven of them averaged over 25, and if Neame has, by some way, the best record on paper, Stewart was a really attractive forcing batsman. Woolff is a young wicket-keeper of great promise, and the Haileybury fielding throughout the year was good and very keen. In short, a well-captained, well-balanced, determined side that played cricket in the right way and thoroughly enjoyed it.

In their school matches Haileybury drew with Wellington in a rain-ruined game which nevertheless served to show the strength of their batting, for having lost eight wickets for 160, they then totalled 362. The Uppingham match was also drawn and though Haileybury led by 50 on the first innings and were able to declare in the second, they got rather a fright before the finish when their enemy were within 15 of the required total. At Lord's, however, favoured by the luck of the wicket they made no mistake and scored a decisive win over Cheltenham—their first since 1913.

Once more the Midland group shows the most contradictory 'collateral form': Repton had their revenge for some past disappointments and deservedly, on the day's play, beat Shrewsbury, only to be virtually annihilated a week later by Uppingham, who in their turn were only just saved by the clock from a very thorough defeat by the Salopians at the beginning of July. And so if I begin with Repton, it is only because of a very long contracted habit that makes me think of them first!

The Repton eleven last season was not strong, though their actual record of but one loss to set against four wins in eleven matches reads creditably enough. With wet wickets prevailing throughout the season the young batsmen, of whom some hopes were entertained, did not fulfil expectations: indeed the batting as a whole was inconsistent and unreliable and no satisfactory batting order was even discovered, in itself an unsettling condition for any eleven. Human, the captain, was probably the best batsman, though, apart from his century against Shrewsbury, his figures would have been very modest. His character in "The Reptonian" describes him as 'sound': when I saw him at Lord's I should rather have labelled him 'dangerous,' but, of course, it is futile to judge on so short a shewing. Certainly he has a cricketer's strokes and a cricketer's heart, and he moves his feet well. Williams played some sound cricket at times and Greenwood could hit, but the only other batting in the side of any distinction seems to have been Rowley-Morris who, after taking a long time to find any form, played two invaluable innings against Uppingham and by his defence at the crisis just saved his side's bacon. The attack was reasonably steady; Williams could keep a length, Human could swing the ball a good deal, and Everett had some pace: plenty of attention was paid to the fielding, but even so Repton's out-cricket was never really formidable.

In the Shrewsbury match Repton owed much to their visitors' blunders in the field, but their captain, with a century and four for 42, had a very good match, whilst his young brother, a cricketer of some promise, made a capital first appearance. At Uppingham the Repton bowling was thoroughly collared—only some very stubborn defence by their batsmen in the second innings saved them from an innings defeat: Rowley-Morris batted nearly three hours for 29 not out, not perhaps magnificent, but, in the circumstances, most definitely war! The Malvern match, for the first, and let us hope, the last, time on record was abandoned without a ball being bowled. Human will again lead the side next summer, with four other old choices to support him.

Malvern continue rather in the doldrums, but then they always have to suffer comparison with their exceptional records in the past. Once again their batting figures make quite a modest showing, but, like most schools in the West, they seem to have had even more than a normal share of rain last season. Bradshaw, their captain, was clearly a good all-round cricketer and had an excellent match against Westminster, scoring 76 and taking eight wickets in the two innings for 69. He and Nunnely did practically all the bowling and the latter, who will lead the eleven this year, showed a big advance. He can now keep a real length with his left-hand medium, and, as he strengthens up to his height, his bowling should increase in natural life. Pyne was a sound No. 1, Pullan is promising, if he will learn restraint, and R. H. Bradshaw is a cricketer of possibilities.

The Repton match, as we have seen, was washed completely out: Westminster were quite outplayed and beaten by an innings at Malvern. Is a third school match quite beyond the bounds of possibility, a revival of the old fixture with Uppingham, or at least a one-day game with Shrewsbury, Clifton or Cheltenham? I know there are always difficulties about extending a programme, but it would be worth while dropping a club fixture to secure another school match. I mention this with all diffidence: no doubt it has been debated at Malvern already. Next season Nunnely leads the side, with Pullan, the younger Bradshaw, and Horrocks still remaining.

Uppingham hardly maintained their high standard of 1926, but that, on fast wickets at any rate, they could be a formidable side, their form against Repton and Haileybury clearly proved. Both those matches were drawn but in each the Uppingham batting was really good : it was no mean performance to give the strong Haileybury side such a fright as they did : Haileybury had declared with seven wickets down in their second innings, leaving the visitors 220 to make in just under two hours, and for the loss of only half their wickets they actually scored 207 of them.

The converse of the Uppingham shield is not so brilliant : against the good Shrewsbury bowling none of their batsmen really settled down and only time and rain saved them from an innings defeat, whilst in the one-day fixture with Rugby at home they went down by 50 runs. It is only fair to say, however, that the toss made a big difference in this game.

Of individual cricketers, Perkins, who made a capital leader, lost his bowling, but had a good year with the bat, scoring attractive 'fifties' against Repton and Haileybury, and hitting up a century in seventy-eight minutes against the Foresters. Oseroff, apart from a fine century against Repton, hardly maintained his last year's form, but with his sound defence and enthusiasm for the game, he is likely to go on improving as a No. 1. Christopherson's record in inter-school matches is quite first-rate and his 72 not out from 116 off the bat against Rugby must have been a splendid effort. He is still at Uppingham in the coming season, and I should not be surprised to see him come right to the front. Of the rest Chalk is thought to be definitely promising.

There were three bowlers in the team, Jarrett, Hurdle, and Chandler, and all came out with quite good records : Hurdle unfortunately strained himself against Haileybury and was never quite the same afterwards, but he has a good action and, if sound, may be a formidable fast bowler next season when he will captain the side. Jarrett, whose baton seems to have lain long unsuspected in his knap-sack, showed himself a natural bowler with a distinct 'flight' : if he will bowl his off-breaks more and slave for length, he may do very well. Taken as a whole the attack lacked variety and swing was more in evidence than spin. It was, however, fortunate in having a first-rate wicket-keeper in Upcher who caught 15 men and stumped 3 in the season, and under Perkins' example the fielding, if never reaching the standard of the last two years, was fairly adequate. Hurdle has four old colours to support him in 1928.

Charterhouse were a curiously inconsistent side : in their club games they did far from badly, scoring especially heavily against Oriol and the Butterflies. Thanks to some really brilliant fielding they defeated Harrow by one run at the end of May : ten days later they came to Winchester, dropped several catches before lunch, allowed the Wykehamists to make a long score, and then collapsed utterly in batting ; and two days later they were decisively beaten by Wellington. Their batting, on fast wickets, was, I am told, better than it had been for some years : Frankland certainly struck me as a definitely good player, quick on his feet and playing his shots naturally and with decision ; Pearce, too, had a wonderfully consistent season, and Linton, Anderson and Hunt all did quite well, but the later men went short of match practice and were not be relied upon when the pinch came.

The bowling virtually consisted of Linton and Johnson : the former is tall, gets his arm well up, and with a new ball looked quite troublesome ; Johnson was slower, very steady and businesslike : he struck me as a bowler who was always trying to do something, and that on a wicket that helped him he would need playing : he was at his best against Harrow, when he bowled unchanged through the innings. Rarely can there have been a more dramatic finish than the end of this game at Harrow. With two wanted to win and the last Harrow pair in, Raphael made an off-drive which looked a certain 4 only to see extra-cover throw himself full length and stop it : then Robinson made a similar hard hit on the off-side : Raphael ran, extra cover picked up the ball cleanly, made a brilliant return, and all was over bar the shouting. Five of last year's side will still be at Charterhouse next May.

Despite several appeals I have been unable to extract any information about Westminster from authoritative sources, but I gather that though they had an attack of considerable variety supported by admirable fielding, their batting was too unreliable to make them at all a formidable side. Neither Gardiner or Cook, of whom a good deal was expected, made any great advance : they could both play strokes, but only too seldom an innings. Evetts was young and quite promising and so was Symington : as they can both bowl they should be useful men next season. Of last year's bowlers Poulson was the best ; left hand with a late swing he could at times, as against I.Z., be really difficult. In a really fine fielding side special mention should be made of the cover-point, Foster, and of the excellent wicket-keeping of Bompas.

In their school matches Westminster were badly beaten by Malvern and lost to Radley by four wickets in a match that was almost a duel between Gardiner and Adams who scored 100 and 86 respectively out of modest totals ; on the other hand they gave the strong Wellington side a considerable fright by running them to a margin of 15, and though they had the worst of the draw with Tonbridge in what I believe is a new two-days match, their bowlers did very creditably against them. The Sherborne match had to be abandoned owing to infection and illness prevented the meeting with Charterhouse. Gardiner is captain for 1928 and as possibly eight other old choices are returning, the side should certainly field well, might easily bowl well and, with their beautiful wickets and given anything like fine weather, should surely learn to bat.

The Sherborne season was largely ruined by mumps which washed out both the two-day school matches with Westminster and Tonbridge. The one-day games with Blundells and Downside were played under run-getting conditions and both drawn, but the Radley fixture provided plenty of excitement at the end of which Sherborne just went down by two wickets. The captain, Eglinton, who won a place in 'The Rest' side at Lord's, was the mainstay of the batting and his record was a very good one: he was a sounder player than before, but still batted attractively. Hodgkinson, if he did not develop as much as was hoped, played a big innings against Blundells. Gladden is young and has the strokes of a cricketer. The bowling figures do not read badly and I gather that Kreyer and Meyer, fast right and medium left respectively, lasted very well through long spells of hard work.

A year ago I was able to comment on the marked advance made by Wellington cricket, and it is good to know that in 1927 this improvement was more than maintained: indeed, there seems little doubt that Wellington were one of the best balanced and consistent of school sides. There were no outstanding stars in the cast, though Benn's batting average of 51 for an aggregate of 615 was very good and C. C. Garthwaite was obviously an all-round player above the ordinary: his brother's leg-breaks hardly seemed to have developed as much as had been hoped, but he got more wickets than anyone else, if at a considerably higher cost than last year; Hamilton, a fastish bowler, had a very steady record, whilst the captain, Wood, played a splendid innings of 130 to win the Marlborough match, their first success over the Wiltshire school since 1920.

In the other four school games Wellington defeated Bradfield rather easily, Charterhouse by 85 runs but only on the stroke of time, and Westminster after a game full of vicissitudes. Winning the toss they did well up to lunch, but then collapsed and were out for 196: Westminster lost six wickets for 60, but the seventh wicket added 89 runs and in the end Wellington got home by only 15! It was a thousand pities that rain should have spoilt the game with Haileybury, but the latter had certainly the better of things at the end of the first and only day's play. Of their club games Wellington lost only one—against the Foresters and after a declaration!

To sum up, then, a good workmanlike side, with four very useful bowlers and a good deal of batting: the catching was sound, but it seems that the ground fielding at Wellington still leaves something to be desired. For this there is only one remedy—but that a certain one—determination and plenty of practice.

Dulwich were strong where in 1926 they were weak, namely in attack: they had in fact six bowlers of very fair variety, except that there was none of any real pace, and the bowling was backed up by first-rate fielding. The batting was fairly good so long as the wickets were fast: and Wilcox and D. S. Smith were a capital opening pair, and Knowland and Hughman, if less reliable, played some good cricket; but when the weather broke most of the batsmen were in trouble, lacking, as many of them did, adequate defence and patience. In school matches Dulwich lost to Bedford and Mill Hill, beat Brighton very easily, and drew with St. Paul's in a thrilling finish.

My information about St. Paul's is, I am afraid, very scanty, but I gather that, though by no means up to their remarkable standard of 1926, they were, under Patterson's excellent captaincy, a keen side with two capital batsmen in Olliff and Felton, the former a very attractive, wristy player, and the latter a distinctly good all-round cricketer. The averages suggest that there was something of a tail to the side, but the attack, in which Burt with his changes of pace was the most prominent and which was supported by excellent fielding, was well up to standard. Of their fifteen fixtures St. Paul's only won a couple against five losses, but the majority of the eight drawn games were in their favour.

Rossall were a weak side with only one player of any distinction, their captain, Roncoroni; time saved them from defeat at the hands of Shrewsbury, but it was some slight consolation that their solitary win was over another school, Stonyhurst.

Shrewsbury's record of two wins, five losses, and six draws, reads modestly enough, but I fancy that they were distinctly a better side than it suggests. The drawn games included virtual victories over Uppingham and Rossall, whilst if they lost to Repton, and on the day's play deservedly, there was probably very little between the sides.

More unlucky than most in their early weather, Shrewsbury only saw fast wickets twice on match days: naturally the young batsmen, of whom there were many, found batting difficult and never had a real chance of acquiring confidence and learning strokes.

Fortunately, however, the side had two real stalwarts in Moore and Staples who rarely failed, and whose records under such conditions are quite outstanding. I admit that when I saw Moore bat at Lord's I was rather disappointed: he seemed to me to have been rather badly bitten by the modern microbe, to overdo foot-work, and to be very two-shouldered in defence, but he certainly watches the ball, has good judgment, and is strong on the on-side.

I hope next year he may have some more fast wickets to bat on and that he will concentrate on making more use of his left shoulder and being firm on his feet when he plays his strokes. If he will do so, I am sure that he may become a first-rate player. Staples has always had wrists and strokes and last year greatly improved his defence : as he was also a very successful fast medium bowler his value to the side is not far to seek. The best of the Salopian bowlers was Bland, a young gentlemen whom I remember as being the best bowler in a man's match when he had not long entered his 'teens : left hand, with an action full of life and yet easy, he can swing and spin the ball, and best of all can make it come quick off the pitch. His form next season should be very well worth watching. With Bland and Staples, Sevirs' off-breaks, and Moore and Henchen as other useful changes, the Shrewsbury attack was quite formidable : unfortunately it was some time before the fielding was brought up to scratch and weakness in this department probably lost the Repton match. With ten old colours remaining and Moore in command, prospects for 1928 are really bright.

Radley lost exactly half of their long programme of sixteen matches, but inasmuch as their five wins included three out of their four school fixtures, they have considerable grounds for satisfaction. Against Bradfield the side batted very consistently and all four of their stock bowlers got a wicket or two—a very easy win ; the two-day game with Sherborne was one of those admirable dog-fights which produce no innings under 100 or higher than 170 and considering that their great crack, Adams, only made 3 and 32, Radley did well to win by two wickets, a margin that may just about reflect the difference between the sides. Westminster were beaten by four wickets, thanks in the main to Adams who hit very well indeed for 86. Stowe went off great guns and reached 180 for two, only to collapse for an additional 70 odd runs ; with 170 up for four at the call of time, Radley were on terms, but the weather all day was so cold that no bowler could feel the ball, whilst fielding was misery.

The great power on the side was, of course, Adams, who led the side well, set a fine example in the field, and made over 700 runs. Unfortunately, when I saw him at Lord's, he failed—indeed, if the truth must be told, he did not look very convincing on a slowish wicket—but I gather that he played some really fine cricket through the term, and has only to gain rather more experience and ring-craft to become quite first-rate: certainly he is splendidly put together, looks every inch a cricketer, and believes in putting the bat up against the ball. Osborne-Smith and Miller and Jeffrys were very useful all-rounders, and Van der Oucht, a wicket keeper and batsman of considerable promise who, to quote his 'character,' "should do very well when he grows to a respectable age and can hit the ball far enough for a run"! Rogers too was an excellent man to go in No. 5 and scored with admirable consistency in the school games. Adams will again lead the eleven in 1928, and with several old colours of promise to help him should be able to build up a goodish team.

Bradfield were a definitely weak side, losing eight and winning only one of their ten matches ; both Radley and Wellington proved considerably too strong for them. Most of them bowled, but none of them very well, and the batting, especially on slow wickets, was rather pusillanimous. Hunt, the captain, kept wicket really well. With six old colours still available, prospects for 1928, when Groves will be in command, are considerably brighter than the retrospect.

Brighton have had some strong sides lately, but nearly all the old hands had left and youth and inexperience generally have to foot a bill for one season. As a matter of fact they did not do at all badly, winning six of their fourteen fixtures and only losing to Dulwich of their school opponents. The side owed a very great deal to their captain, Green : he led them with judgment, batted most consistently, and though his bowling did not develop as was hoped, he took over thirty wickets and could be difficult on a turning wicket. The attack as a whole is described as "unintelligent," but with Bartlett and Macdonald each taking over thirty wickets for under 15 apiece, it was probably better than some, and the fielding is said to have been good. The batting, as was natural with so many young players in the side, was unreliable and inconsistent, but it is wonderful what an extra year means and the nine of them who will again be at Brighton next season should present then a very different proposition. Easily beaten by Dulwich, the Brightonians beat Lancing by 63 runs, Epsom by 116, and had very much the better of the game with Christ's Hospital. Green failed in the first-named match, but in the others scored 106, 73 not out, and 60.

Christ's Hospital, with five old colours of their successful 1926 side available, had hoped for great things in 1927, and were rather disappointed with their form. Of their seven school opponents, only St. John's, Leatherhead, were beaten, whilst Lancing, Eastbourne and Cranleigh all lowered their colours ; the drawn games with Epsom and Merchant Taylors were, however, substantially in their favour. Osborne, the captain, though a very good cover, rather fell away in batting, but Jennings and Bartlett both improved and finished with good records. Black was a very useful all-rounder, and Seaman was also successful with the ball. But there was a considerable tail to the batting, and it is rather sad to hear that the fielding and catching left a good deal to be desired. Now then next year's skipper, whose identity seems uncertain !

I have only the briefest note from Epsom, and gather that they were engaged in team-building and were well enough satisfied with the result. Rhys, their captain, had a good season with the ball ; Pettigrew, who scored a century against Christ's Hospital, is a most promising batsman, and the fielding all through the side was sound.

With eight old choices remaining, Epsom hopes for 1928 run high.

Eastbourne's record reads three wins against four losses and four draws, but of the latter three were virtual victories and the wins included two school games. My Eastbourne correspondent, who for all his enthusiasm remains judicial, considers the side the best they have had for some years, though his qualifying admission "To be quite candid we might have been a better batting side" is a verdict that seems very distinctly borne out by the batting figures!

Binge and Bowyer were two capital all-rounders, the former rated as high as any the school have had for years: he had plenty of strokes, bowled fast, was the best field in an exceptionally good fielding side, and led his eleven well both on and off the field. Bowyer was not far behind him, England did very well as a batsman and Parks was valuable as a change bowler. The one real disaster of the season was the Lancing match when after outing the opposition very reasonably, Eastbourne broke down rather badly in batting; the away game with King's School, Canterbury produced a splendid fight from which the visitors just emerged victors, thanks very largely to their captain who was in his best form with both bat and ball; another good performance was their game with the Foresters, when they outed seven of a good side for 49, only to be defeated in the end by their old friends and enemies, Ernest Smith and Miles Howell. Next season's captain is Bowyer: there will be four other old choices.

Bedford went through the year unbeaten and considering that the opposition they met was distinctly stronger than usual that was a real achievement. They defeated Dulwich comfortably enough; Wellingborough by 5 runs in a thrilling finish; played a slightly favourable draw with Oundle: another, very much in their favour, with St. Paul's, and had their game with Leys washed out altogether. The Crusaders, Cryptics, and M.C.C., all strong sides, scored freely against them, but the Bedford batsmen were in each case equal to the occasion, and easily held the fort. In Sime they had a capital all-round cricketer, a left-hand bowler who could spin the ball, a batsman of strokes and real consistency, and a good field: no wonder that he gained and kept his place in the Bedfordshire eleven in August. McVittie rather lost his freedom as a bat, but defended sturdily and was good enough as a wicket-keeper to be picked for 'The Rest' at Lord's. Stewart, the captain, played excellently in May, but rather lost his form later. The lower half of the side did not get enough match practice, but most of them showed by an innings or two that there was batting in them. The bowling, by comparison, was rather weak: Murray, right-hand medium, bore the brunt of the work, and Smith, a comparatively late discovery, did well. To sum up, Bedford were hard to beat, but their batsmen were too quiet and their bowlers too ordinary for them to be regarded as a really formidable team. Next summer Sime will have five old colours and there is promise of a good side.

Though I have full accounts of their inter-school matches, my general information about the Leys side is perilously near to nil. I do gather, however, that Brown, whose promise I noted last year, more than fulfilled expectations and that he is an all-round cricketer quite out of the ordinary. Given further progress this summer he will surely be a strong candidate for a place in 'The Rest' side. Raper, too, as in 1926, was a great source of strength, but though his batting came on, his bowling I gather did not. Rocyn-Jones was another useful all-rounder and a very capable and unselfish captain. Beyond these three the batting looks as if it may have been somewhat thin, a conjecture which is rather borne out by the team's form in school games. The U.C.S. were annihilated, Brown getting six wickets and Raper 136; but the match with Oundle was lost, only Raper and Joslin making over a dozen, whilst similar weakness in batting left Leys with the worst of the drawn games with St. Paul's and Mill Hill.

Wellingborough won six and lost three of their thirteen matches. Had their batting and fielding been up to the level of their bowling, they would have been a good school team, but unfortunately both were weak. The one good batsman was Stokes who seldom failed to make runs: he also kept wicket admirably. There was some promise shown by Veitch. The captain, Gamble, was the best of a good quartette of bowlers and his figures are good, but would have been better still had he been supported by slip catchers who could have completed the work that his swingers began. Wellingborough just lost to Bedford and had virtually a blank day against Trent.

Sedbergh had the best side and the most successful season they have had for years. Indeed they were unbeaten in a programme of thirteen matches. It was all the more annoying that rain should have spoilt two out of their three school matches. Giggleswick were defeated, but after making a good start against both Durham and Stonyhurst, they saw both games washed out. Of course, Skene was a tremendous asset and I should certainly rate him very high amongst school cricketers of the year. By the time I saw him at Lord's, he seemed to have lost his nip as a bowler and his arm was rather low, but there is no getting away from a record of fifty wickets for 8½ each. In batting, on the other hand, he was very convincing: his defence was most watchful and sound, his judgment excellent and he did not seem to play the off-side "if" strokes so natural to most of his kidney. He is just the type of straightforward, workmanlike cricketer that Oxford has needed of late, and I hope the Oxford captain will give him a good trial this summer.

But Sedbergh were by no means a one-man side: Hodgson was quite a useful fastish bowler, Crompton could flight the ball and keep a length, and Nicholls, March and Turner improved very much as batsmen and often showed good form. There will only be a small nucleus for 1928, but with memories of their last season's success to inspire them, Sedburgh should set about the process of team building with good heart.

Downside had an eleven quite up to the average: there was no-one quite such a swell as Turnbull, but Marks, the captain, scored a couple of centuries, averaged 66 and set a splendid example to his team by his fielding. Radcliffe was very consistent with the bat, and P. K. Geoghegan played some very good innings. Pettit and Dalton were the two chief bowlers. Blundell's were beaten after a stiff fight, the Sherborne match ended in an open draw, but against Bruton Downside collapsed deplorably and were only just saved by time from a heavy defeat.

Beaumont won half of their fourteen games and lost three, a very high proportion of finishes. On fast wickets, at any rate, the batting was quite good, with the tail very ready to wag if the head drooped. C. A. Russell was almost a model of consistency, whilst his brother D. L. Russell, the captain, if he failed to find his 1926 form, was still a dangerous man with the bat and a left-hand bowler who came out with quite a good record. The fielding, it is good to hear, was good all-round. In school matches Beaumont lost to The Oratory after a sporting declaration, but defeated Douai, Reading, K.C.S. Wimbledon, and Epsom. Six old colours remain.

Bromsgrove won seven and lost four of their fifteen games: they beat St. Edward's School, Oxford, K.E.S., Birmingham, and Campbell College, Belfast, and just lost to Wrekin in a keen match. They were lucky to have a good captain and wicket-keeper in Whitby, a sound left-handed bat in Roberts, and a very useful all-round cricketer in Hallett. The batting, on the whole, was not very convincing, too many were getting out just when they ought to have got well in, but the bowling was very steady and excellently supported in the field. With eight old choices returning, hopes are high for next May.

Whitgift lost to the M.C.C. and twice to their old boys, but they had five wins and most of the seven draws were in their favour—these latter included the games with Ardingly, St. John's, Leatherhead and Hurstpierpoint; Epsom were decisively beaten. The two stars on the side were Goodwin and Peart: the former had a splendid season, averaging over 50 for 683 runs and scoring three centuries in consecutive innings: he also did well in August in the Young Surrey Amateur cricket. He could also bowl. Peart took fifty wickets for 12 apiece and made 360 runs—a good double. His length is said to lack consistency and his batting soundness: may be, but there is no getting away from the figures. Of the rest Gage and Stutchbury were very useful with bat and ball respectively and Ling, who also shows promise as a batsman, kept wicket well. Six old choices remain and prospects are held to be good.

St. Edward's School, Oxford, had a disappointing season and were never able to command their full strength. Of a long programme of fifteen matches, they only won four, though the drawn game with Cheltenham 2nd XI was distinctly in their favour. Brooke was a capital all-round player and Denne bowled his slows with success.

It is a real satisfaction that this year I am able to say something of the Scottish schools: for this happy event I am mainly indebted to a gentleman whose name would, I felt sure, draw blood out of a stone across the Border and who, for all his somewhat caustic comments from the pavilion roof at Lord's, is a very good friend of all school cricket.

Loretto and Glenalmond were, I gather, definitely the two best of the schools and it was a bitter disappointment when the rain utterly spoiled the match between these two unbeaten sides. It is certainly not for a Sassenach to judge between them, but I gather that Loretto were undoubtedly the stronger hitting combination, but had no bowler who could compare, as a match winner, with Cruickshank of Glenalmond. This young man, when the wicket gave him any help, which, in one of the wettest summers known it almost always did, was something very like a first-class googly bowler: his figures of 76 wickets for 9 each speak for themselves. A fine cover-point and a batsman who got runs; I hope the Cambridge captain of 1929 will keep an eye open for him. Stevenson, a fast bowler, did quite well considering the wickets; Pearson had an excellent defence as a batsman.

On the Loretto side the great star was undoubtedly their captain, Ian Brown, a good leader, a brilliant fieldsman, and a batsman and bowler who seldom failed at a pinch. Nicholson and Drysdale were two other capital all-rounders: in fact the first six batsmen were all rather above school average. The rate of scoring too, was often high, 300 runs being scored in under three hours against George Watson's College. The attack, though the figures read all right, was, I am told, not really reliable, but the fielding was so keen and good that its deficiencies were generally well covered.

For Edinburgh Academy Tod was, of course, a tower of strength in this his fifth year in the eleven! In such a summer his batting aggregate of 824 with an average of close on 50 is most remarkable and with 69 wickets for 12 apiece he can have been second only to Cruickshank among Scottish school bowlers. In school matches he scored 75 v. Watson's, 105 v. Fettes, 47 v. Loretto, and 145 v. Merchiston: what is more he was a most enthusiastic captain where example and coaching did much for Academy cricket as a whole. Drutt on his day bowled fast and well (seven for 33 v. Fettes), but the rest of the attack was weak, and the fielding, I am sorry to hear, second-rate. It is, of course, to be remembered that it is virtually impossible for a day school to get as much regular practice as a boarding-school.

Merchiston were—shall we say—too modest to respond to our invitation for news of themselves, but I gather that they had a rather disappointing season in which the brightest spot was their virtual victory in July over the Academy when their captain, Logan, incidentally about the best of the school 'keeps' across the Border, played a splendid innings of 152. Connell made a real advance as a batsman, but the form of the team as a whole was very unreliable.

Fettes lost to Loretto, Glenalmond, and the Academy, beat Watson's and tied with Merchiston at '218 all'—which must have been good fun. The batting was rather 'sticky,' only Robertson and Jones playing with any real freedom, and there was no bowler of any real pace or one who could spin the ball at a length; but the fielding was good and there is plenty of promise in the younger generation, so that Fettes can face the future with good hope.

Watson's College certainly lost all their championship fixtures and were probably the weakest side of the six schools taking part in it. The bowling had some variety, and with better support might have fared reasonably well, but the fielding was very poor, a state of affairs that next season's captain will, it is to be hoped, make it his first business to tackle. The batting too was weak, though Gemmell and Inglis both played well at times. On the other hand it is good to learn that there was any amount of enthusiasm for the game in the school as a whole and that as many as thirty-two elevens were playing it. After all love of the game is more important than all the championships in the world, and when it persists championships are, incidentally, quite apt to follow.

From the general trend of the reports that reached me I gather that cricket in the Scottish schools has never been healthier and that the old idea that the game was never meant for Scotland is fast dying, if it is not already dead. Could not the M.C.C. be persuaded to send an eleven to play a week's, or better still a fortnight's, cricket against the leading schools across the Border? I am assured that it would provide a tremendous filip to the game there and it could not help being a delightful tour. It might be necessary to base the attack on a couple of professional bowlers, but the M.C.C. have never grudged effort in 'missionary' work, and I do not believe they would find any lack of batsmen ready and anxious to apply for places.

The following are reported to be the destinations of some members of last year's school elevens:—

ETON v. WINCHESTER.

Played at ETON, Friday, Saturday, June 24, 25.—For the third year in succession the match was drawn, but on this occasion Winchester held the honours, for at the end they led by 162 with only one man out in their second innings. At one time Eton were in grave danger of having to follow-on, nine wickets being down for 108, but a plucky stand extending over two hours between Sheepshanks and Buckston, the last pair, realised 144, and made a draw certain. Sheepshanks, having reached three-figures in two hours twenty-five minutes and hit ten 4's, then had the misfortune to step on his wicket. On the opening day, when rain prevented play before lunch, Winchester put together a total of 351. For this they owed almost everything to Fleming, who, sixth to leave at 305, batted faultlessly for three hours twenty minutes. He had one 6 and twenty-two 4's as his chief strokes.

TONBRIDGE SCHOOL v. WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.

Played at TONBRIDGE, Friday, Saturday, July 8, 9.—Much of the batting in this drawn game proved disappointing, but J. G. W. Davies, in the first innings, and J. A. Baiss, in the second, did good service for Tonbridge. R. H. Rutter caused a complete breakdown in Westminster's first attempt, taking six wickets for 7 runs.

WELLINGTON COLLEGE v. HAILEYBURY COLLEGE.

Played at WELLINGTON, Friday, Saturday, July 8, 9.—Haileybury had all the best of this drawn match, Wellington being 198 behind on the first innings. L. B. Neame, B. G. Wennink and F. I. W. Stewart all showed skill in batting for Haileybury, and F. M. Heywood (six wickets for 57) bowled well. Wellington must have fared even worse but for the fine all-round form of C. C. Garthwaite, who dismissed six men for 72 runs.

ETON v. HARROW.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 8, 9.—For the sixth year in succession the Schools' match was left drawn, Harrow, who just managed to escape defeat, being 27 runs on with a wicket to fall, when stumps were pulled up at a quarter past seven on Saturday evening. Dour to such an extent was the cricket, except for one partnership, that eleven hours and fifty minutes of actual play yielded no more than 477 runs. Eton obtained 225 of these in four hours and twenty minutes, Harrow, with much the worst of the wicket each day, taking seven hours and a half to score 252 runs. That freer methods, had they been adopted, would have met with a larger measure of success is more than probable, but it is only fair to state that the bowling—especially that of the two Eton left-handers, Ward and Whittaker—reached a high standard of excellence and was supported by smart and accurate ground fielding. Harrow had six old choices—Clover-Brown, W. O. B. Lindsay, Rome, Carlisle, Raphael, and Palmer, and Eton three—Whittaker, Ward and Capel-Cure.

Winning the toss, Whittaker sent Harrow in to bat. The course adopted by the Eton captain was justified as the play went but, with the pitch merely slow and the weather apparently unsettled, the advisability of it was certainly open to question. Indeed, had Harrow possessed batsmen with sufficient daring to try and knock Ward and Whittaker off their length, there might well have been a different tale to tell. So far from making any attempt in that direction Clover-Brown and W. O. B. Lindsay allowed themselves to be kept so entirely on the defensive that at the end of seventy minutes, when they both left, the score was only 24. Following upon the fall of the fourth wicket, Calthorpe hit up 31 out of 42 in forty minutes, but there was little else in the Harrow batting except the watchful cricket of Shuckburgh who withstood the Eton attack for nearly two hours. After lunch six wickets went down in seventy minutes for 38 runs, the last four falling after Shuckburgh's departure for only 6 runs. The innings proved a triumph for Whittaker and Ward who bowled with a measure of skill and steadiness that is rarely reached in a schools' match. In addition to showing such a pronounced lack of enterprise the Harrow boys ran badly between wickets.

Harbord and Packe began Eton's innings by putting on 26, making more runs in a quarter of an hour than Harrow's opening pair had obtained in seventy minutes. Still the third wicket went down at 50, Harrow, so far, holding their own despite the faster state of the ground. Greville batted in capital form for an hour and a half, yet when he left—fifth out at 107—Eton had not a great deal the best of the game. There followed, however, the one really bright spell of batting seen during the whole match, Capel-Cure and Sheepshanks playing so freely that they added 72 in three-quarters of an hour before the drawing of stumps. Capel-Cure drove hard and Sheepshanks made some capital strokes, Eton leaving off on Friday evening 40 runs ahead with five wickets in hand.

There had been more than 20,000 people present on Friday and even on Saturday, when rain fell so heavily during the morning that play proved impossible until one o'clock, another large company assembled, more than 30,000 paying for admission during the two days. The invaluable partnership of Capel-Cure and Sheepshanks soon came to an end, only four runs having been added when a brilliant one-handed catch at cover-point disposed of Sheepshanks who, batting for 55 minutes, had helped to put on 76 runs. Capel-Cure, ninth man out at 217, played the best innings of the match, withstanding the Harrow bowling for two hours and a half. He drove hard, as well as scoring cleverly on the leg side, and had eight 4's in his 65. Harrow on Saturday got down five Eton wickets in an hour and a quarter for 46 runs.

Entering upon their second innings, Harrow found themselves 86 runs behind with rather more than four hours left for play. This was an anxious position to face on a drying, if not sticky, wicket against two such accurate and skilful bowlers as Ward and Whittaker. In the circumstances Harrow decided not to try and hit off the arrears and set Eton a task impossible of achievement in the time remaining, but to concentrate their energies upon stubborn defence in the hope of playing out time. They withstood the Eton attack for three hours and fifty minutes and in so doing, accomplished a performance of considerable merit. Clover-Brown being lame sent Calthorpe in with W. Lindsay, and although a smart catch soon disposed of Calthorpe, Lindsay and Shuckburgh stayed together for forty minutes. Still the third wicket fell at 43 and had a chance offered by Rome, when 2, been accepted, Eton would probably have won. As it was Rome and Carlisle, although adding only 16, resisted the Eton bowling for nearly an hour. Despite this stubborn work there were seventy minutes left when Harrow's seventh wicket went down at 79, and again the Dark Blues found themselves in sore trouble. Raphael came to the rescue with a sound piece of work at this anxious time, yet the issue hung in the balance when the ninth wicket fell at seven o'clock with Harrow only 18 runs on. Raphael and Robinson, however, proved equal to the situation and at a quarter past seven with 9 more runs added stumps were pulled up. Remarkable work was that of Ward and Whittaker who bowled for two hours on end, the latter, indeed, keeping himself on for half an hour longer. Whittaker in the course of the match sent down 84 overs for 98 runs and nine wickets. He showed great skill and perseverance but, possibly the finer piece of bowling was that of Ward, who, somewhat faster than his captain, delivered 84 overs and two balls for 61 runs and five wickets.

Of the 98 matches played, Eton have won 39, Harrow 35, and 24 have been drawn. This is the generally published record, but Harrow men object very strongly to the game in 1805 being treated as a regular contest between the two schools, contending that it is no more correct to count that than the fixture in 1857 which has been rejected.

The one day matches between the two schools during the War are not reckoned as belonging to the regular series.

Twenty-four three-figure innings have now been played in matches between the two schools, as follows:—

183 D. C. Boles (in 1904), Eton	112*A. W. T. Daniel (in 1860), Harrow

In making his 183 Boles set up a new record for the match, beating the 152 obtained in 1841 by Emilius Bayley, afterwards the Rev. Sir John Robert Laurie. M. C. Bird in 1907, by scoring 100 not out and 131, performed a feat without precedent in the match

CLIFTON v. TONBRIDGE.

Played at LORD'S, Monday, Tuesday, July 25, 26.—Beginning so disastrously that in twenty-five minutes their first five wickets went down for 8 runs, Clifton nevertheless, snatched a remarkable victory over Tonbridge by eleven runs. Tilly and Owen, hitting freely, retrieved the early failures somewhat, yet Tonbridge reached their opponent's total with only four men out. Baiss, apart from one difficult chance, played faultless cricket, and driving hard, hit ten 4's but the last six Tonbridge wickets fell for 22 runs. Going in again Clifton lost two batsmen before they had cleared off the arrears and left off on Monday evening no more than 9 runs ahead with four wickets down. Cornes and Watt, however, hit up 91 in fifty minutes and Habibullah, although handicapped by a cut over the eye, helped Crawford to add 58 for the last wicket. In the end Tonbridge were set 201 to make to win. Baiss gave another fine display, staying for an hour and forty minutes and making 58 out of 69 while Armour withstood the Clifton attack for nearly three hours. For a time Tonbridge looked like winning comfortably, but again the batting broke down badly and although the total reached 189 with eight men out the two remaining wickets fell at that figure. Tonbridge indeed, lost their last five wickets for 47 runs.

RUGBY v. MARLBOROUGH.

Played at LORD'S, Wednesday, Thursday, July 27, 28.—Not only did wet weather interfere considerably with the progress of the Rugby and Marlborough match on Wednesday but on Thursday rain set in so heavily shortly after three o'clock that about an hour later the game was abandoned. On the opening day only twenty minutes cricket proved practicable before lunch and rain extended the interval by an hour. Marlborough began quite well, the opening pair, even if their batting had an element of uncertainty about it, raising the score to 40, and the second wicket, with Neilson putting plenty of power into his strokes, increasing the total to 93 in three-quarters of an hour. Later on Paul, showing the best cricket of the day, hit up 28 out of 44 for the fifth wicket. Following Paul's departure at 156, Pearson, a right-handed medium pace bowler, proved so deadly that in the course of 19 balls he dismissed four batsmen, only one run being scored off him meanwhile. In this way nine wickets were down for 178 at the drawing of stumps. Next day when play was not possible until noon, Neilson declared at the overnight total. Monkhouse and Pearson, beginning Rugby's innings on an easy lifeless pitch, hit so freely that they raised the score to 68 in just over an hour before Pearson, who had followed up his bowling success with a capital display of batting, ran himself out. Monkhouse stayed until the total reached 108 and just afterwards came heavy rain and the end of the match.

CHELTENHAM v. HAILEYBURY.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 29, 30.— Batting very brightly and bowling with considerable skill, Haileybury won by an innings and three runs and in so doing, gained their first victory over Cheltenham since the year 1913. They had four wickets down for 75 and yet in little more than three hours put together a score of 278. This capital performance was largely the work of Stewart and Sumner who hit up 116 for the fifth wicket in seventy minutes. Stewart, making his 76 in 95 minutes, hit to leg and cut particularly well. Sumner was also seen to marked advantage and Wennink, investing his efforts with much power, added, in company with Stanley, 53 in half an hour. Wellings, bowling unchanged, took seven wickets for 113 runs and followed up that performance by carrying his bat right through the Cheltenham innings. Unfortunately his colleagues failed him so badly that he had to exercise extreme care and although withstanding the Haileybury attack for two hours and three quarters he scored no more than 44. Following on next morning, 158 behind, Cheltenham for a time played an uphill game to fine purpose, Wellings, Lovegrove, and Kempster doing so well that 108 of the arrears were cleared off for the loss of three wickets. Then came such a startling collapse that, with only ten more runs on the board, there were eight men out. Furness and Ekin, adding 37 made a brave attempt to save the innings defeat, but just failed in their endeavour. In the two innings of Cheltenham Whitcombe, Wennink and Heywood all bowled to useful purpose.

LORD'S SCHOOLS v. THE REST.

Played at LORD'S, Monday, Tuesday, August 1, 2.— Unfortunately for this representative Schools' match rain fell almost continuously on Bank Holiday and the contest, restricted in this way to one day, naturally ended in a draw. Still, the game provided the Lord's Schools with something approaching a triumph, that side being 136 runs ahead and having two wickets to fall when stumps were pulled up. Startling success attended the bowling of Heywood at the beginning of the day's cricket, the Haileyburian actually taking four wickets for six runs and the total being only 21 when The Rest's fifth wicket went down. There followed a plucky attempt on the part of Human and Skene to retrieve this most disastrous start and, together for fifty minutes, the two boys hit up 79 runs. Curiously enough during this partnership Heywood was not given a second turn with the ball. Ward of Eton broke up the stand at 100, and finished off the innings, the last four wickets going down for 16 runs. The Lords Schools soon lost Baiss, but steady batting by Stewart and Wellings placed the side in a good position and later on Stewart and Lindsay added 62 for the fourth wicket. Stewart played sound cricket for two hours, making most of his runs by drives and strokes on the leg-side. Exercising much care for a long time, Lindsay took two hours to reach 50, but afterwards batted with refreshing freedom and in the last over of the match, when he had been at the wickets three hours and twenty minutes, completed a splendid hundred.

ARMY v. PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Played at LORD'S, Wednesday, Thursday, August 3, 4.— Although batting in very uneven fashion the Schools were able to declare with eight wickets down on the second afternoon and, if unable to force a win, they gave a much better account of themselves than the boys pitted against the Army in the corresponding match of the previous summer. Honours on the opening day fell to Fleming of Winchester, who withstood the Army attack for three hours and forty minutes and, when eighth out at 247, had put together an admirable innings of 110 which, free from serious fault until it amounted to 99, included a 6 and thirteen 4's. This was a thoroughly workmanlike piece of cricket, marked by great caution for more than two hours and afterwards characterised by considerable freedom. Going in against a total of 261, the Army lost three wickets for 49, but Bevan and Tudor retrieved the position and at the close of the day the Army had got to within 115 of their opponents and had five wickets in hand. Next morning Ward and Heywood finished off the Army innings for the addition of 69 runs of which 36 were obtained for the last wicket. Left with a lead of 46, the Schools at their second attempt, came to grief so badly against the bowling of Gore and Miles that, despite the efforts of Fleming, five wickets fell for 46 runs. Skene, however, came to the rescue, playing with much skill for more than two hours and being still unbeaten with 78 to his credit when the Schools declared. Set 259 to make in less than two hours, the Army, of course, did not attempt the task. They lost four wickets for 86, but had no difficulty in averting defeat.
