

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS, 1946

By E. M. WELLINGS

About the middle of the 1946 cricket season I watched a charity match on a Northern League ground. Three Australians were with me, and one of them remarked that there ought to be no lack of fine cricketers in the country, for there was more than a sufficiency of good grounds and each large school had its own professional coach. "We don't have coaches in Australia," he added.

Not long afterwards I was talking to a famous cricketing father of an equally famous son. He mentioned that he did not teach his son how to play cricket. That, he said, seemed to come to him naturally, but he did teach him much about what he called the inside of the game. By that he meant the battle of wits, the tricks of the trade, the stratagems of cricket.

The Australians have managed very nicely without the concentrated coaching such as Public School cricketers get. So, too, has this famous son of a famous playing father; he hit a century at the age of eighteen against an attack containing our leading Test bowler of the time. No Public School batsmen of my recollection have been capable of that, though they appear to enjoy all the cricketing advantages. Which prompts the question: Is School cricket sufficiently good to justify all the time, trouble and money spent on it?

The year 1946 is not a good one on which to base conclusions. School cricket suffered during the war years, when the opposition from club sides was weaker than usual and when the younger masters and coaches were otherwise engaged. The first deprived the boys of the chance of seeing good models, which is of great importance. Moreover, few games between first-class teams gave the young player a chance of seeing how the game should be played.

Yet I question if Public School cricket even before that was as good as it should have been, having regard to the attention and care given to it. For that, I suggest, the methods of coaching are responsible. It seems that too much time is spent at the nets turning out batsmen to a pattern; and a pretty dull pattern it sometimes is. If you watch a school side closely, you will see that most of the players conform to one type.

I have noticed, for example, that Rugbeians of late years have tended to bat with their hands kept close to their bodies while making their strokes. Their forward strokes as a result are of short stretch. Then Marlburians and Malvernians built up for themselves the reputation for driving delightfully to the off, but the same players were far from accomplished on a turning wicket. Ground peculiarities may be in part responsible, but coaching surely plays a larger part.

Cricket is a natural game, and it follows that the movements of a batsman should be natural. Men with cricket ability in them will instinctively discover the best ways of dealing with balls of various lengths. They require guidance in making their strokes rather than actual formation of those strokes by a coach. Formation of batting to a set pattern cannot produce a Len Hutton, or a Denis Compton, who, without any of the supposed advantages of Public School coaching, was as good as the best of them in his middle teens and was established as a county batsman at seventeen. At fourteen Compton hit 85 for the North London Schools against the South London Schools at Lord's. At fifteen he hit 114 against a Public Schools team on the same ground, and two years later he was batting number three for Middlesex. Only a lad free to develop his own great natural skill without having cramping artificiality instilled into him could have risen so rapidly to eminence.

The coaching which aims at making a boy play to a pattern tends to stifle individuality. So far as the pattern allows, the boy will become a good, sound player; but to scale the heights he needs something more, which can only be developed naturally, instinctively, and by imitating good models. That is probably why public schoolboys are tied up when facing slow spin bowling. The set strokes, which they are taught as it were by numbers and in which either the front or the back leg is moved, but not both, do not furnish them with a complete armament against such bowling. Something more in the way of footwork is required. A Hutton or a Compton, taught largely by instinct, experience and example, acquires that footwork naturally along with the rest of his batting. The drilled Public School cricketer, unnaturally produced, seldom acquires it in full even during his later career. Hence the reason for the celebrated remark of a famous professional bowler, "I always like to bowl at the fellows with pretty caps."

I do not mean to suggest that the schools should reduce the amount of coaching or that such coaching is not doing good work. It does do that, but within limitations. What I do suggest is that the manner of that coaching should be amended.

In the nets the methods of the late Aubrey Faulkner, South Africa's greatest all-rounder, might be followed with advantage. He was a great coach who never attempted to teach a stroke in any particular way. His aim was to guide a player's natural shot, bringing out its strong points and eradicating any obvious fault which was calculated to lead the player into trouble. I recall him attempting by an ingenious device to curtail the unnecessary height of R. W. V. Robins' back swing. Had he had the teaching of Robins before the habit was set he might have succeeded in curtailing that back swing, and Robins might then have been an even finer batsman than he is.

Also in the nets a good coach should be able to give purpose to a bowler. It is very difficult to teach bowling, but it is not so difficult to guide bowlers, to indicate how best they can use their particular styles to take wickets, and to give them an idea of what they should be aiming to do.

Outside the nets, fielding and the "inside of the game" give a wide field for the coach. At present very few school cricketers know as much as they should about the game. Quite apart from strategy, there is much to be taught by the coach and games masters—running between wickets, fielding positions and the like, which can make a tremendous difference to the efficiency of a team.

It is enough merely to note the positions taken by fielders in a school match to realise how much remains to be taught. To give an example—without mentioning names—from the matches at Lord's in 1946: one side for a time had two fielders sharing the silly mid-off position. They stood so close that they not only could but sometimes did hold hands, presumably to check that they were not out of touch with each other! The efficiency of both was impaired by their proximity, and it was, in effect, wastage of one and a half fielders.

In learning by example, which I have mentioned, much discrimination is needed, and guidance by the coach. Unfortunately not all things that are done in adult—even first-class—cricket are worthy of imitation. Among them is the modern fetish for declaring innings closed to obtain definite results—any sort of result, it seems, so long as it is definite. At Lord's, Rugby fought a splendid uphill game against Marlborough and then surprisingly declared, leaving Marlborough to score 120 in seventy minutes. In that time Rugby could not hope to get the opposition out. So, in effect, the declaration was made with misplaced chivalry so that Marlborough might have a chance of gaining a cheap victory. It rendered Rugby's previous fine fight so much wasted energy. A captain is appointed to plan victory for his own side and not the opposition. If a game of cricket is to have any meaning, a declaration should be made only to help the declaring side to win. It is a travesty of the game if a declaration is made in the name of "brighter cricket." The game can be bright without such doubtful aids.

I believe that, if the cricket masters and coach at one school would cut right adrift from the traditional methods of teaching the game, in order to guide rather than drill their young players, that school would soon have a team which would be the envy of all others. The naturally developed player has a far better chance of becoming great than the artificial one. The present mass-production methods bring along a large number of pretty sound players but do not give full scope to those who have the spark of greatness in them.

At Lord's in 1946 two natural cricketers of very different styles were seen. Cowdray, the thirteen-year-old Tonbridge boy, seemed to be a natural stylist; Campbell had methods all of his own, rough and ready by precise standards but very effective for all that. Here are two players who clearly should be given a minimum of text-book tuition, but should rather be free to go their own ways under the guidance of a good coach. It is far too early to say how Cowdray will turn out, even if he avoids having the natural flair for the game coached out of him. Campbell, who for the second year in succession scored over 1,000 runs for Canford and averaged over 100, is another proposition. He has so far avoided text-book dogmas, and he has it in him to become a fine slogger. His eye seemingly allows him to hook without moving the right foot across the wicket, to cut the ball very near the off stump, to drive cross-batted and to hit across the line of the ball. A good eye, confidence and exceptional power of strike are natural assets which add up to a large sum. He will learn those things which he can and cannot do with impunity in first-class company, and he should then be a very dangerous opponent.

He was undoubtedly the leading batsman of the School year, the one with individuality which none of the others could match, though their methods might approximate more to the guide-book conception of batting. He was also a talented wicket-keeper and a useful captain in the representative matches at Lord's. Next to him as a batsman I would place White, of Wellingborough, a neat little player with delightful freedom in his wrists, a maker of strokes who was willing to go out for those strokes and who used his feet well to make them possible. He batted long enough to show his class during the representative trial game at Lord's, and he did not bat long enough in the next match against the Combined Services to upset the impression he had made. There were several other highly competent School batsmen, and the batting generally of the Public Schools team was quite useful. Harrison, the Haileybury captain, who narrowly missed the distinction of scoring two centuries for his school against Cheltenham, was a left-hander of the attractive type. Rudd was an accomplished batsman in the Eton tradition, a mature, polished player; and Boobyer, the Uppingham captain, was a good opener, a player commended by his solid soundness and powers of concentration. Guard, of Winchester, was another very good boy batsman who afterwards played well for Hampshire. He used strokes all round the wicket and showed marked ability to punish the leg-side balls.

Good, too, was May, of Charterhouse. At the age of fifteen the previous year he played for the Public School team. In 1946 he was left out, although he made top score for the Southern Schools. The reason is easily found. His batting had not gone back, but his fielding was anything but up to the standard of his batting, and he was in effect made an example to all school players, who need to learn that cricket consists of more than batting and bowling. The fielding throughout the Schools fortnight was very disappointing, and the throwing often was quite disgraceful. In some matches the throws which the wicket-keeper was able to take without wasteful expenditure of energy could be counted on the fingers of one hand. The throwing touched rock-bottom while Rugby were in the field. Not otherwise, I think, could Marlborough have made the winning runs. It is as well that the selectors should have shown the importance they place on fielding.

Good fielding can make moderate bowling strong, and most of the School bowling in 1946 needed all the help it could be given. The most promising of the bowlers were two slow spinners, Esdale of Malvern and Lush of Sherborne. Esdale, one of the youngest bowlers in the trial game, won his place against Combined Services with his leg breaks and googlies, which were not very intelligently used by his captain. For a young bowler of his type he was decidedly steady, bowled with a neat, economical action, and, happily, used the googly sparingly. Excessive use of that delivery, which is more deadly in reserve than in frequent use, has killed many young bowling hopes. If Esdale continues in his present manner he should be the first genuine leg-breaker turned out by a public school for many years. His promise certainly impressed me more than that of any other bowler. Lush also was promising indeed; a slow left-hander giving the ball air with varied flight and pace, besides having a good, easy action. Neither Esdale nor Lush did much against the Services, but they showed greater possibilities than the bowlers of other types selected for that match. Of them, Exton (Clifton) spun the off-break, but put little life into his bowling. He bowled entirely with his arm, making not the slightest use of his body to give liveliness to his deliveries. At the end of his delivery his body was upright and, far from following through, he actually seemed to rebound after loosing the ball. His length looked good and he could certainly spin the ball. That was sufficient to give him wickets in School cricket, but he will find that something more is needed to bring him success in higher circles of the game. He was nevertheless the leading all-rounder at Lord's, being an excellent batsman.

Hignell, of Denstone, was the more successful of the two opening bowlers against the Services, but I would hesitate before describing him as more promising than Whitby, the Carthusian, who has a long, easy run and delivery finishing on a high note. Whitby might make a very useful bowler, and he also looked a good batsman. Of all the opening bowlers, Carter, of Uppingham, moved the new ball most, but he suffers from having a very awkward delivery; so awkward that he gets himself into a position from which a left-arm delivery would be easier than one with the right.

Rain interfered with the trial game and prevented some of the boys from showing their ability. We could with advantage have seen more of Taylor, an all-rounder from Ruthin, and Whitcombe, a wicket-keeper from Worcester of some ability, said to be even more promising with the bat. In the available time twenty-one of the boys batted or bowled. The unluckiest player was Cheshire, of Radley. He was making his second appearance in the match as a bat, but on this occasion did not get an innings.

Outside the players chosen for the trial there were several good ones. McColl, the Rugby captain, a batsman worthy of a trial had he been available; Rugby, as a result, was without a representative, which is unusual. So was Cheltenham, which is not so unusual, but in Lister and Swiney, brother of one of the best School batsmen of 1944, they had two of the most promising of the younger players; both have many school days ahead and should make much of them in a cricketing sense.

Generally, 1946 was anything but a good year for Public School cricket. There was a sad lack of good teams. Even Eton were below par, and their match with Harrow at Lord's produced cricket which would be most kindly treated by being ignored. Fear of defeat seems to have brought inertia into this old fixture; but inevitably, recovery of School cricket from the war years is a matter of some time. We can take comfort from that and may consider that the play in 1946 was as good as could well be expected when everything is taken into account.

THE SCHOOLS

(Scottish Schools will be found at the end of this section.)

Aldenham School enjoyed a good season, losing only once, although bad weather led to low scoring and several draws. Best of the batsmen were A. H. Bradley, who played a fine innings at Felsted, and J. Cockett, who, in his second year as captain, led the side cleverly. The bowling proved stronger than anticipated. J. R. Muir's right-arm slow spinners were decidedly effective, and M. W. Sheeres, medium left-arm, also did well. The fielding was good.

Steady if not brilliant batting and reliable bowling contributed to a successful season for Alleyn's School, beaten only twice in fourteen matches. The captain, R. A. Nash, set a good example with consistent batting; R. H. Dover, T. D. O. Lewis and C. W. Shearer all lent good support. J. G. Crisp, R. Voysey, T. D. O. Lewis and P. S. Lyons were successful bowlers.

Very weak batting and poor fielding resulted in a bad season for Allhallows School, although the bowling of W. T. M. Luff, N. G. Pitts, R. L. R. King and S. J. Harvey was fairly adequate. With some promising younger players in the school, a better time is hoped for in 1947.

Ampleforth, recording four victories and four defeats out of ten matches, beat Durham and Bootham decisively, but went under to Sedburgh and St. Peter's. Sudden wickets were not to the liking of most batsmen, R. A. Campbell, who hit two centuries and averaged over forty, being a notable exception. The bowling was varied and hostile, and three good performers, C. J. Kenny, S. A. Robertson and Hon. E. Fitzherbert, were available for 1947.

Apart from the Oratory match at Lord's, abandoned after two overs, Beaumont College won all six school matches. J. A. Russell, D. C. Kingsley, P. A. de Zulueta and R. J. Richard were the most consistent batsmen, Russell and Kingsley each making over 500 runs. Kingsley also took most wickets, and gained a place in the Southern Schools XI at Lord's. De Zulueta, the captain, enlivened the side by his keen fielding, and was successful with fast right-hand bowling.

That Bedford Modern School enjoyed some creditable victories was mainly due to the lively medium-pace bowling of A. G. Coomb and the steady length of B. L. Pollard. Highest total recorded against the school was 140 by Stamford. Lack of practice facilities affected the batting. Here again Coomb, the captain, stood out and in addition fielded splendidly, especially to his own bowling. He will again lead the side in 1947.

The batting of the Berkhamsted School side on a succession of soft wickets was rather disappointing, but the bowling and fielding were generally good. P. L. Jackson Fielden, by far the best batsman, also kept wicket well and captained the team with judgment. D. C. Morgan gained considerable success with fast-medium deliveries, besides showing batting promise and fielding with ability, while J. W. Adams, a splendid cover-point, showed useful form with the bat. Of the younger players, D. F. N. Pringle, a fifteen-year-old batsman, did well.

With P. W. Rowe as captain for the second year and ten 1945 players available, Bishop's Stortford College won all their school matches except for a defeat by Bedford Modern. The batting was more convincing than for many years, with D. A. Fothergill and J. B. Chaumston enjoying most success. Bowling slow leg-breaks skilfully, J. A. Mynott took more wickets than anybody at the school for some twenty years. P. H. Carruthers bowled very steadily, and fast bowler K. Bennett showed to advantage, while the fielding usually was admirable.

Blundell's School went through a good season, winning five and drawing five of thirteen matches. They owed much to the enthusiastic leadership of J. C. Newell Price, a good fast-medium bowler and keen field. J. M. Edes fulfilled previous batting promise, while C. R. C. Thomas proved a definite fast bowling discovery. Poor catching in the slips was a weakness, but E. R. Crowe made many fine catches at silly point.

R. S. Cull did best of the Bradfield College eleven, which enjoyed considerable success in school matches, although invariably losing against strong club opposition. Cull revealed good control of length with right-arm medium bowling, taking 22 wickets for 7 runs each in school games, and also batted well. B. E. Murch, a stolid left-hander, played some useful innings, and the captain, J. P. Trickett, used powerful strokes.

R. J. Blakey, a sound captain who batted well and fielded splendidly, set a good example to the Bradford Grammar School side. The chief weakness was the lack of a good slow bowler; batting was strong, and R. S. Longbottom showed decided skill as wicket-keeper.

Another team which felt the lack of a slow left-arm or leg-break bowler was Brighton College. Six matches were won, nine lost and one drawn in an interesting season which provided some exciting games. J. H. Hayton, the captain, again led the side well and displayed good all-round form, but missed four consecutive games through illness. Others who at times came off with the bat were D. B. Gardiner and P. Platts-Martin, while D. G. Owen, with slow right-arm in-swingers, was the most successful bowler.

Bromsgrove School were consoled in a very disappointing season by signs that several young players would develop well. The captain, D. A. J. Reid-Smith, worked very hard and set a fine all-round example, particularly in bowling. M. R. P. Roberts and B. A. Lloyd showed considerable batting ability.

The weather helped to cause a poor season for Bryanston School, interfering with several matches, but the side relied too much on the captain, C. E. Townrow, and the secretary, D. Harrison. Townrow batted reliably, bowled consistently well, and fielded splendidly, while Harrison bowled tirelessly and played several determined innings.

The remarkable batting of I. P. Campbell dominated the Canford School cricket in a very successful season. Exceeding 1,000 runs for the second successive year, Campbell actually made 1,277, average 116. Much sounder than in 1945, he yet batted with great aggression, as shown by his 222 not out against Marlborough scored in two and a half hours, and 237 against Old Canfordians in one hour forty-six minutes. Campbell made three other centuries; captain of the side, he kept wicket smartly. D. G. B. Knight batted well and, with F. B. Marsh, opened the bowling; P. A. Walters and W. H. Woods were promising spin bowlers.

Enjoying a fairly successful season under the capable captaincy of A. Jessup, Caterham School won four and drew seven out of fourteen games. Apart from Jessup, the team lacked the ability and confidence necessary to drive home advantages; otherwise several drawn games might have been won. Jessup gained considerable success with spin bowling, but needed a fast bowler to lend variety to the attack. The batting was a little disappointing and the fielding rather poor.

Largely through the efforts of A. J. Rimell, the captain, and old colours P. B. H. May, R. L. Whitby and O. B. Popplewell (wicket-keeper), Charterhouse School were very successful, winning five school matches comfortably, and the sixth, against Eton, being unfinished because of rain. In his second season of captaincy, Rimell revealed good all-round form. Whitby achieved two fine bowling performances, 8 wickets for 16 at Winchester and 7 for 38 against Harrow, besides giving good displays as opening batsman. May scored two centuries, and Popplewell, in addition to sound wicket-keeping, headed the batting averages.

Bad weather and illness curtailed the Cheltenham College fixture list in a disappointing season. J. C. H. Moody, the captain, did not show his best form until late in the season, but P. Strover enjoyed considerable success. Bowling was unreliable; most wickets fell to the slow leg-breaks of P. C. Gautier-Smith, who, as this season's captain, will have six old colours to assist him.

In an enjoyable season, Chigwell School won four and lost four matches out of thirteen, and the game with Bancrofts ended in a tie. The only school match lost was to Bishop's Stortford. B. R. Dowsing, the captain, was again prominent with both bat and ball. He received good support from sound batting, with D. L. Stapleton a valuable opener. The bowling lacked steadiness.

Although starting with only two old colours, Christ's Hospital developed into a powerful combination, winning eight and losing only one of eleven games. The captain, E. J. Chmurow, showed improved stroke play which, allied with correct defence, brought him high reward. A. G. May, P. F. Matthews, M. K. D. Gunton did well with the bat. Curiously, the side contained four left-handed bowlers, all of whom batted right; A. P. Jackson, right-hand fast, was the most effective bowler. Chmurow's excellent captaincy played an important part in the side's good results.

While the City of London School were at Marlborough their playing fields were taken over by the Army and were not available in 1946. The regular pre-war fixture list could not be renewed, so that last season could be regarded only as a preliminary to the future. Two matches were won, four lost and four drawn. Owing to lack of practice the batting was weak, but the bowling came fully up to expectations. Three members of the Eleven remained at school.

Good bowling, backed up by keen fielding, was the best feature of the Clifton College cricket. Well-flighted slow off-breaks brought R. N. Exton 77 wickets in 13 matches, including 47 for 371 runs in school games. The Tonbridge match at Lord's, lost by two runs, provided an exciting climax to the season. Clifton were unlucky in the second innings to be without T. S. Penny, their most consistent batsman.

With a long sequence of wet wickets, Cranbrook School games were mostly of a low-scoring nature, but the batting developed in July on firmer pitches. Seven matches were won, four lost and three drawn, one remarkable result being the defeat of Dover by an innings and 156 runs. Successful batsmen included J. D. J. Bluett, P. T. Delves and M. G. Madan-Meyers. P. M. Groves (fast), Delves (off-breaks) and P. L. Olley (fast-medium left-hand) were the best of a steady attack. G. S. F. Wilkin, captain for the second time, was out of form, but he and five others remained a nucleus for 1947.

So out of form were the Cranleigh School batsmen that only one half-century was made, but good bowling enabled five victories to be gained, as a set-off to as many defeats and two drawn games. At the age of fifteen, M. R. Fairbarns showed great promise with left-arm deliveries, and W. A. Fuller bowled in-swingers with remarkable accuracy. The wicket-keeping of the captain, C. J. Sindall, was well above average.

Bad weather interfered considerably with the Dean Close School programme, two games being abandoned almost as soon as started. Five matches were won and lost. The eleven found their best form at the end of the season, gaining four consecutive victories. I. P. Barlow proved the most dependable batsman, and M. Mander, showing great improvement, headed the bowling averages.

Unbeaten for the second successive year, Denstone College showed batting strength right through the team. A. F. Hignell and F. B. Everall, both medium-pace, bowled very well, Hignell being chosen for the Public Schools match at Lord's and also for the Schools team against Combined Services.

In their first season after returning from evacuation to Devon, Dover College were an average side. Only sixteen, J. M. Eames showed considerable promise, heading the batting averages and doing well with slow left-hand bowling. Most destructive bowler was the captain, E. A. G. Wheeler, fast left-arm.

On consistently wet pitches, Downside School batsmen failed to find their form, but good bowling and fielding were consoling features. P. T. Tait kept wicket in excellent style, while I. D. Chisholm (medium-pace) and N. V. Henfrey (slow leg-break) bowled splendidly.

A dismal season was experienced by Dulwich College, for, apart from wretched weather, ten out of thirteen matches were lost and only one victory gained. The batsmen could not get into form on soaked pitches, but the chief cause of failure was poor displays by bowlers of whom much had been expected, notably W. M. Mitchell, J. C. Bailey and J. R. Thomas.

Lack of concentration was noticeable in the play of Durham School, another team to undergo a poor season. An exception to the general rule was provided by R. W. Smithson, the best all-rounder the school has produced for some years. His left-hand batting, slow right-arm leg-breaks, and excellent fielding were mainstays of the Eleven; the rest of the side relied too much on his prowess.

With an inexperienced side following restricted war-time activities, Eltham College won only one and drew three of nine matches. There was considerable improvement towards the end of the season, and with the captain, J. J. Hills, and seven others again available, a better time was anticipated in 1947.

Epsom College batsmen found runs hard to make, but quite good bowling was supported by competent fielding. J. M. Knowlson, an excellent captain, bowled well; H. C. Levack, captain for 1947, was an accomplished batsman and able wicket-keeper.

The Eton College eleven began badly with three defeats from club sides stronger than those met during the war, but showed improvement and defeated Winchester besides enjoying the better of a drawn game with Harrow at Lord's. C. R. D. Rudd, the captain, by far the most polished batsman, was headed in the averages by W. N. Coles, a free hitter, who made a fine century against Harrow. R. A. Wellesley proved a reliable, if rather slow, opening batsman, while C. W. R. Byass displayed a wide range of strokes and great promise. There was no really hostile bowler. R. G. T. Speer, quite fast, showed determination but lacked control of length, while the Hon. P. Lindsay, perhaps the most dangerous, tired quickly but should prove valuable in 1947. Slow bowlers R. A. Wellesley and J. A. Worsley did well at Lord's, but in general were rather inaccurate. The fielding, except at slip, reached a high standard.

Even Framlingham College, situated in the driest part of East Anglia, suffered badly from the weather, four fixtures, including three school matches, being cancelled. Four games were won, four lost, and four drawn. As expected, G. Mitchell proved the mainstay in both batting and bowling, and as captain he got the most out of an inexperienced side. Best batting support came from M. P. Rosen, while of the other bowlers J. W. Davies showed most promise.

Statistics of Giggleswick School, two wins, four draws and six defeats, were not impressive, but the Eleven looked the best in batting for some seasons. Although adventurous, G. A. H. Hirst was consistent in batting, while M. H. Walker, R. E. Blair, E. Mitchell, P. S. Lenaghan and W. J. Kenyon all batted attractively. Two colts, M. S. Davidson and M. Scales, bowled with admirable accuracy and keenness.

Although Haileybury and Imperial Service College fared rather moderately, the captain, J. A. Harrison, batted with great success. Scoring 943 runs for an average of 62.86, he made 99 and 100 not out at Lord's against Cheltenham. R. M. H. Vickers batted well, while R. F. B. Letts, who also scored a century at Lord's, proved a capable all-rounder. Most consistent of the bowlers was S. J. Denniston, with accurate off-breaks. The fielding tended to be erratic.

The batting of the Harrow School eleven lacked the determination needed for good scores, and 200 was reached only once. On the other hand, the bowling was often good, particularly that of P. Wallis, the captain, who was sometimes very dangerous, and under whose leadership the fielding improved greatly. G. C. Hoyer-Millar, a promising wicket-keeper, captain for 1947, has the support of four other 1946 players.

A young and inexperienced Highgate School side won only one of thirteen matches, drawing four and losing eight, but improved form late in the season augured well for the future. Supported by sound fielding, D. H. K. Rata, a left-arm spinner, took 36 wickets for 12.41 runs each, but other bowlers disappointed. Besides heading the batting averages, the captain, D. J. Haslam, set a good fielding example.

Weak batting, apart from that of the captain, S. C. Simmons, who repeatedly saved his side from collapse, was the poorest feature of the Hurstpierpoint College cricket. Simmons also fielded splendidly, and bowled fast with consistent success. P. K. Ephraimson, a medium-paced spin bowler, displayed much promise, while D. M. Day kept wicket reliably, and brilliantly on some occasions.

Inconsistency with the bat resulted in a poor record for King Edward's School, Birmingham, who won two matches out of thirteen. An injury handicapped the batting of the captain, G. A. Pell, until late in the season, but he enjoyed great success with accurate leg-break bowling, taking 40 wickets for 8.95 runs each. P. T. Richardson, a fast-medium in-swing bowler, improved greatly.

Only two batsmen of King Edward's School, Stourbridge, attained a double-figure average. P. Aspinall, also, gained second place in the bowling figures, but generally the eleven fared badly.

Good bowling partly compensated for the poor batting of King's College School, Wimbledon, yet only two matches were won, three being drawn and five lost. Two slow spin bowlers, A. J. Moritz and I. W. N. Hill, bore the brunt of the attack with such success that no opposing team scored 200. F. J. L. Skeens was by far the best batsman.

Winning all their school fixtures except that against Canford, King's School, Bruton, in all gained eight victories; three games were drawn and four lost. With D. P. Oliver averaging 40.73, the batting was effective on firm pitches, but rather uncertain on slower turf. Although steady, the attack lacked venom, A. J. F. Voake, medium-pace right-arm, taking most wickets. A good spin bowler was badly needed.

A completely new King's School, Ely, team experienced a lean season, winning only three games and losing ten. D. H. Morgan played several courageous innings, but most of the batting was weak. By contrast, T. P. J. Dyke, a tall, medium-fast bowler, who could make the ball run away, established a school record by taking 63 wickets in 14 matches.

King's School, Canterbury, after five years of limited facilities in Cornwall, enjoyed cricket on their own ground. The coaching of F. E. Woolley was reflected in the success of left-handers, R. E. A. Greenslade, a fast bowler, and P. D. J. Johnston and W. M. Foxwell, batsmen. Foxwell headed the batting averages. J. C. Hulse, besides batting attractively, gained best bowling figures.

Eight previous season players were available for Kingswood School, and a fairly successful season was enjoyed, five of ten matches being won, three lost, and two drawn. Finding form gradually during the season, R. Wilkinson gained best batting figures, while N. H. Bellis proved the mainstay of the bowling. W. B. Mountford, second both in batting and bowling, swung the ball to good effect, and showed good style with the bat.

Lancing College, resuming fixtures against pre-war opponents, reached a good standard in bowling and fielding, but not in batting, though T. M. D. Robertshaw, a good captain, and P. M. H. Robinson both displayed all-round ability. With big coaching efforts further improvement was anticipated.

Under constantly bad weather conditions, Leeds Grammar School players could not find their true form. In particular, disappointing displays by batsmen G. M. Aber, captain, and R. N. Lewis, captain for 1947, and A. R. Hey, leg-break bowler, of whom much had been expected, affected the eleven.

Leighton Park School won six and lost four of their fifteen games. By far the most successful batsman, P. D. Strang and G. I. Sherborne, the captain, averaged over 28 and 25 respectively; C. M. Oxtan was the best bowler.

In their first season on returning from Scotland, The Leys School were only moderately successful, but improvement is confidently expected when familiar with home conditions. Besides leading the side well, I. V. Langfield proved the most reliable batsman, while K. O. Grive kept wicket in good style. G. H. Randall gained best figures in bowling, which improved greatly during the season.

Although the Liverpool College batting was sound and the side proved difficult to dislodge, the bowlers often failed to press home the advantage secured. R. M. Hughes, A. C. Chadwick and P. L. Ellis usually could be relied on for runs, but the averages were headed by M. E. Williams, who also bore the brunt of the bowling. Nine members of a young side were available for 1947.

A good but variable eleven, Malvern College performed very well against strong club sides, but sometimes failed to benefit from initial superiority. R. H. Hack, G. C. Francis and B. W. Hastilow were reliable batsmen, Hack especially enjoying an excellent season. G. P. R. Esdale and J. S. V. Davy were promising bowlers, but most consistent in attack was A. R. Henderson.

Much consolation to Marlborough College in a generally disappointing season came in winning their two most important fixtures, against Cheltenham and Rugby, the first time this "double" has been performed for over twenty years. I. P. H. Skeet and F. Hind were the most successful batsmen; F. Hind, who headed the bowling, badly needed the help of a good spin bowler.

So low was scoring in Merchant Taylors' School games that no opposing school made 100 runs, and the School only reached three figures twice. The side were stronger in bowling than for some years, R. A. Ellis, the captain, a fast-medium right-hander, being very dangerous with the new ball. D. W. Pearson, slow left-arm, and M. Goble, slow right-arm, also did well. D. G. S. Baker and T. D. R. Hockaday were best in a batting side which often disappointed.

Mill Hill School enjoyed a successful season under the captaincy of T. C. Jenner, a consistent all-rounder. Heading the bowling averages, he received sound support from B. Pigott and J. A. Smith, who, besides his good bowling, secured the best batting figures.

Rain so interfered with the practice of the Mount St. Mary's College eleven that no player distinguished himself, and in a poor season only one game was won as against four drawn and four lost.

Winning six of their eleven games, two being drawn and three lost, Newcastle Royal Grammar School enjoyed their most successful season for several years. Seven of the 1945 eleven were available. E. Gibson kept wicket well against an all-fast attack in which J. W. D. Hodgson was most dangerous; good support came from D. Gibbin and K. Taylor. G. R. Tiplady, an excellent cover-point, proved a free-scoring batsman.

The only two old Colours, J. G. Cooper, the captain, and N. Bateson, failed to produce as good batting as expected, and Oakham School failed to win a match. Of twelve played, eight were lost, three drawn, and one ended in a tie. Batting generally was weak, and the bowling, though steady, lacked hostility.

For Oundle School, who lost seven and won two of ten matches, only J. A. Holroyd showed any consistency with the bat, although D. L. D. Blackburn improved late in the season. Very steady, D. R. Gutteridge bore the brunt of the bowling; F. Halford swung the new ball well, but tired quickly.

The Perse School bowling, with W. D. L. Morris, fast-medium, and K. T. Pledger, slow right-arm, doing well, could usually be relied upon to dismiss opponents for a reasonable score, but the batting of a very young team was not strong. Two matches were won, one drawn, and nine lost. Morris, the captain, and six other old Colours return for 1947.

Bad weather, which ruined five of the first six matches, gave a young Radley College side little chance to settle down, but they did well in the latter half of the term, and in all four games were won against three lost, with eight drawn. C. S. Cheshire, a very good batsman on firm pitches, made over 400 runs in his last four innings, and M. J. D. Bower, only sixteen, batted with great promise. By far the steadiest bowler was C. R. T. Fletcher, medium right-arm.

Failing to discover a slow bowler, Reading College suffered from a moderate attack. Two matches were won, five drawn, and three lost. The batting, uncertain on wet pitches early in the season, improved with better weather. M. L. Duggins, the captain, G. H. Taylor and J. W. M. Smith fared best with the bat; G. D. Draper, left-arm, bore the brunt of the bowling.

Although the Repton School bowling and fielding reached a fair standard, weak batting resulted in a poor season being experienced. The most successful players were P. J. Scowsill, the captain, and W. A. S. Wesson, two all-rounders; R. W. Palfreyman showed batting promise.

Rugby School started with three defeats, but when W. M. McColl, the captain, a sound yet aggressive batsman, found his form the side improved greatly and on the season wins and losses were level at four each. C. S. Macphie and J. C. Marshall scored well, and P. J. R. Poncia achieved considerable success with off-spin bowling.

The Rydal School eleven did not shape as well as hoped, but won five games; five were lost and three drawn. At times the batting failed badly, only K. G. Morgan and A. B. Brooks showing consistency, but two younger players, B. J. Wilson and D. Stewart, advanced well. The bowling, mostly medium to fast, was not suited to the prevailing slow wickets. The School returns to its own premises for 1947, with better practice facilities.

E. M. Tarling, the St. Albans School captain, played some steady innings and improved greatly as a slow left-arm bowler, but most of the batting was inconsistent, although J. R. D. Harvey hit hard. R. E. Ashworth and P. D. Stratton were reliable opening bowlers.

St. Dunstan's College lost only four of twelve games in a strong fixture list, winning four and drawing four. J. H. Coleman and D. G. Belsten, fast-medium, were the best of a strong bowling side, but batting was unreliable. The captain, A. D. Foster, proved a good all-rounder.

Without J. E. Kitchen, the captain, St. Edward's School, Oxford, would have been a moderate side. Besides heading the batting figures, he took by far the most wickets. G. W. Hick showed sterling defence; M. C. P. Livingstone and M. J. Wood were good in stroke play. J. L. Lattey and D. G. Backhouse bowled well at times.

After a shaky start, St. Bees School eleven settled down well, eventually winning five matches against three lost, with one drawn. R. S. MacCaig, a good captain, and J. D. Heaton provided the mainstays of an attack accurate but lacking in variety, and these two, particularly Heaton, were also the best batsmen.

Though three of four school matches were won, St. John's School, Leatherhead, eleven disappointed, mainly because the batting lacked enterprise. J. W. Osborn, the most accomplished stroke player, deserved greater success. The brunt of the attack fell on P. J. Osborn and D. A. Brabyn, who both did very well.

After six years away, St. Paul's School were handicapped by the poor condition of their ground, makeshift net pitches having to be used. Although defeats outnumbered victories by three to one, the season was enjoyable. J. W. Runacres, captain wicket-keeper and much the best batsman, received good support from left-handers T. Q. Abell and J. D. Farrell.

The Sedbergh School eleven, well-balanced and above average, gained five victories, lost two matches and drew three. W. F. Banks, the captain, bowled very well, taking 45 wickets for just over 8 runs apiece, and he received such good support that in five school games the average score of the opposition was 72. W. I. McIndoe headed the averages in batting, which, if adequate, was never quite as good as expected.

Although Sherborne School, with a young side, found club teams too strong at the start of the season, they won their school matches through sustained attack and ability to recover from early disasters. J. S. W. Lush, captain, slow left-arm, P. H. Wakely, right-arm medium, and A. A. Hunter, right-arm slow off-break, were mainstays of a varied attack; D. S. Sheppard was much the most accomplished batsman.

With a useful side, Shrewsbury School won five games, drew five, and lost three. I. G. Cavan was best of a rather unreliable batting team, and with G. M. Cochrane bore the brunt of the attack, which was supported by keen fielding.

An inexperienced Solihull School eleven won only two matches. The best feature of the season was the development of A. E. Bannister, who gained a batting average of over 45 and, after good performances in Warwickshire Public School matches, made a sound debut as an opening batsman for the County Second XI.

Stamford School eleven won seven matches, lost three and drew five—a good record. J. W. Merrikin took 51 wickets at the low cost of 7.35 runs each, receiving good support from J. E. T. Bacon, a capable all-rounder. The captain, J. M. Guffick, headed the batting list.

Stonyhurst College enjoyed a successful season, winning eleven of seventeen matches, mainly because of keen, aggressive out-cricket. G. M. Archer, fast, and B. Rhodes, medium-fast, bowled well, and were backed up splendidly by the slow off-break deliveries of M. Goodfellow and C. Shepherd, while P. A. Kelly, fast, also did well sometimes. Kelly, B. G. Wellard and J. G. Hurst were the only consistent batsmen.

Of a weak Stowe School batting side only M. E. Fitzgerald, the captain, P. M. Young, and M. D. T. Loup scored runs often, but D. A. Connell became a useful all-rounder. Other good bowlers in an attack which generally managed to dismiss opponents cheaply were J. J. Crossley, P. M. Young, W. L. N. Brinson and C. A. Hancox.

With wet weather spoiling many matches, a promising Taunton School batting side failed to show their capabilities until harder wickets came late in the season. Then V. J. Lawrence and L. K. Lewis, a sound opening pair, were well supported by R. B. Dufty, T. Suter and D. Carr. The bowling, though steady, lacked aggression; J. D. Hughes, a young medium-paced bowler, kept an excellent length.

The remarkable form at the age of 13½ of M. C. Cowdrey overshadowed everything else in the Tonbridge School season. In the Clifton match at Lord's he scored 75 and 44, and altogether took 8 wickets for 117 with slow leg-breaks. Cowdrey headed the batting averages and was third in bowling; his future performances will be watched with great interest. D. S. Kemp, D. K. Horton and G. P. Bowler did well with the bat; C. MacNicol and J. F. McMillan were good bowlers.

University College School owed much to the varied in-swingers of their captain, P. B. Townsend, and the spin bowling of A. Thorogood; both took over 40 wickets in 13 matches, of which six were won, six lost and one drawn. The batting lacked confidence, only Townsend and P. J. Hughes displaying good form.

A strong Uppingham School side enjoyed a fair season despite adverse weather, winning six and losing two of eleven games. L. I. Holmes-Smith and B. Boobyer, the captain, were especially good in fine fielding, which gave much encouragement to the steady medium-paced bowling of D. D. Carter, E. J. Wimperis and D. C. Pull. Boobyer played several innings of high class, and D. D. Carter batted with considerable success.

Unlike most schools, Wellingborough School were rather stronger in batting, E. White, the captain, making two centuries and averaging 93. Other good batsmen were E. J. Belton and J. B. Riley; while Belton shared bowling honours with D. L. Miles, I. G. Home and R. K. Stoner. Only two matches were lost, five were won and five drawn.

Weak in both batting and bowling, Wellington College lost seven of eleven matches, three being won. P. A. S. Wollocombe was the most successful all-rounder; M. A. Bardsley, R. K. Guy, P. U. G. Sharp and M. I. Webb-Bowen also batted well at times; J. C. Marshall and C. J. Messer bowled steadily.

The Westminster School side showed promise in difficult circumstances on their return after evacuation for six years, although only two games were won. G. Ll. Law, left-handed batsman and medium-paced bowler, who went through a successful season, is captain for 1947.

Winchester College did not win a single game, losing six and drawing nine, but several finishes in a rain-ruined season were very close. D. R. Guard, the captain, was by far the most successful batsman, averaging nearly 50, and displaying a fine range of strokes. D. W. R. Evans, too, batted consistently. E. F. Studd, slow left-arm, proved a promising bowler, and A. F. Grundy and A. O. Goddard also did well occasionally.

Winning nine matches out of twelve, Worcester Royal Grammar School enjoyed another successful season. In his third year as captain, R. V. Kings, averaging nearly 63, received good support from P. J. Whitcombe. R. Baylis, medium right-arm, bowled a good length; B. Powlson, slow, and P. D. Mills helped to dismiss opponents for low scores. Whitcombe again kept wicket well.

Good bowling was a redeeming feature of the Worksop College season, in which only one of twelve games ended in victory. P. C. Garbutt, J. L. Gaunt and W. H. Gibson were prominent players. The captain, P. G. Clark, batted steadily, and Gaunt showed ability to score fast; but much of the batting was disappointing.

The bowling and fielding of Wrekin College exceeded expectations; four games were won, five lost, and four drawn in a far stiffer programme than during the war years. An excellent captain, J. Kenyon made plenty of runs, and another old Colour, G. F. Salt, displayed all-round ability. D. R. G. Baker, J. A. Tobin and J. B. Nicholls were promising newcomers.

Wyggeston Grammar School, Leicester, were led with marked skill by J. K. Shepherd, who also batted well and kept wicket in fine style. J. B. Ashton, top of the bowling averages and second in the batting list, enjoyed a splendid season, while A. J. Adams played some good innings and a newcomer, D. J. Gregory, took many wickets with slow left-arm deliveries.

SCOTTISH SCHOOLS

In a most disappointing season with a dearth of older boys owing to the war years, Edinburgh Academy lost eleven of fifteen games, won two and drew two. A good all-rounder, T. A. H. Symes, headed the batting averages and was second in bowling.

Fettes College won four and drew one of six school matches—a good performance. A. S. Hay and J. M. Smith, the captain, bore the brunt of the bowling, A. T. H. Ferguson proved the most successful batsman, and R. M. Davidson showed all-round ability.

After a poor start, (Trinity College) Glenalmond, improved, but their batting was always rather unreliable, although N. H. J. Ferguson showed consistency and attacking ability. S. M. Easton, the captain, R. W. Henderson and R. D. W. Miller, all fast-medium, bowled well, while C. E. McIntyre kept wicket excellently. A feature of the fielding was the phenomenal throwing of Miller, who broke the school record for "Throwing the Cricket Ball" by reaching 119 yards $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

Well captained by G. R. Donaldson, Merchiston Castle School enjoyed a good season, winning twelve and losing only one of thirteen games. They were fortunate in possessing a variety of bowling, backed by keen fielding, and two very useful batsmen in N. G. R. Mair and J. T. Nisbet, both available for 1947.

Failing to strike a winning vein, the young George Watson's College eleven, mostly available for 1947, gave hope of better performances. The captain, J. F. Cowan, batted steadily, with J. J. Carmichael, J. W. Everett and D. H. Philpot other reliable performers. No bowler was really hostile, but G. L. Walker and P. Everett, both left-arm, showed promise.

Although there were few noteworthy performances, Glasgow Academy went through a fairly good season, with strength in the bowling, particularly that of J. C. G. Thomson, the captain, and I. F. Colquhoun. These two also shared honours in batting, which on the whole was surprisingly weak.
