

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN 1950

By E. M. WELLINGS

For the second year in succession it is pleasant to be able to write in optimistic vein about Public Schools cricket. It would seem that there was something in the claim made by the schools that in the early years after the war they suffered from getting boys from the preparatory schools who had been given no solid grounding in the game during the war years. That is not, however, the whole story, for, if a boy has any natural ability, neglect before the age of 13 or 14 cannot long leave its mark, provided that the subsequent instruction is good. Perhaps criticism in Wisden has played some part in persuading games masters to aim at a higher standard.

That criticism drew an article from one of those masters, J. D. Eggar, in last year's Wisden. It was a most admirable and fair piece of writing, which set out the difficulties of those who teach cricket at the Public Schools and made excellent suggestions. In several directions it seemed to supplement criticisms made in these columns during the previous two years. It was particularly encouraging to find that the men responsible for turning out Public School cricketers are not satisfied that more cannot be done to improve the standard.

English cricket badly needs some body of players to lead a revival. The word revival is often loosely used to mean a move forward. I use it in its true sense to mean a restoration of something we had in the past. Our cricket to-day is at a low ebb not so much because players do not know how to handle their bats, how to bowl the ball or to pick it up in the field; though the standard in those particulars may leave something to be desired, the main weakness lies in the fact that they do not know how to make use of their ability to do those things.

As a race of cricketers to-day our basic knowledge is low. Young players do not even know enough in many cases to keep to the position in the field in which they have been placed by their captains. They do not know enough to pay attention so that their captains can move them into new positions without fuss and bother. This is not meant as a specific criticism of Public Schools cricket. This was written in the evening after seeing half the fielders near the wicket clapping their hands to help their captain to attract the attention of a young professional standing at long leg. The team in the field was the M.C.C. touring Australia, the ground was Sydney, and the man who did not know enough to pay attention was a Test match cricketer.

The lack of elementary knowledge shown by players of such eminence is proof positive of the need for revival. The Public Schools, armed with games masters and professionals who played their cricket when real knowledge of the game was common, can play a large part in such a revival. It is true that most from those schools cannot now go on to play much first-class cricket, but if they can take a thorough knowledge of the basic principles which govern the game into club cricket they can greatly help to improve the general standard.

Cricket cannot be learned in the nets. Batsmen can certainly be groomed in the nets, and bowlers can be taught how to deliver the ball in various ways. But without the knowledge of how to make full use of all they are taught in the nets they cannot become thorough cricketers. There have been distinct signs in the past two years that Public School coaches are turning out more knowledgeable players. The field placing is more intelligent than in the first three years after the war. The running between wickets is better. The backing-up in the field is more often done. All of which suggests that the Public Schools really are well fitted to play a leading part in the necessary revival.

Much can be done during practice games to instil thorough knowledge into young cricketers. My experience from playing in such games while at school is that they are merely matches which lack the keen edge of rivalry. The coach probably umpires at one end and does what coaching he can without interrupting the course of the game. But why should it not be interrupted? Would it not be better to stop the game as often as necessary so that the coach or games master can really instruct? It is surely much better that all on the field should learn from the experience of a fellow player than that only he should be quietly told, between overs perhaps, where he went wrong or how he could have improved on what he did.

I am persuaded that the way back for us in cricket lies in the acquiring of larger and wider knowledge of the game by what I have seen of Australian school cricket, little though I have seen of it. There is very much less coaching in the Australian schools as we know it. None of them employ professional coaches. Yet the Australian schoolboy cricketer seems to have a very solid knowledge of his game. He knows what it is all about. He appreciates his part in the general scheme. At first sight he is obviously not such an elegant-looking performer as his English counterpart. He has not been groomed in the niceties of the forward defensive stroke, but he does seem to understand more quickly what the bowler is trying to do to him, and he has enough knowledge to work out his own salvation in a reasonable way. Speaking generally, I should say that he has a more robust approach to the game. He has developed his play more naturally and appears to be less inhibited.

Happily it can truthfully be said that English Schools cricket is becoming more robust. I noted in 1949 the more aggressive spirit that was abroad, and it was so again in 1950. The representative side at Lord's was fortunate to have the leading batsman of the previous year still available. M. C. Cowdrey of Tonbridge was a fine player in 1949. He was an even better one in 1950, a stroke player of exceptional skill among schoolboys. It is usually a risky proceeding to take a youngster straight from Schools cricket and push him into his county side. That Kent could do this with Cowdrey without apparent risk to his future development fixes his status among boy cricketers.

We have now seen two unusually gifted schoolboy batsmen in the five post-war years. The other was P. B. H. May of Charterhouse, who was in the Cambridge side of 1950 and appealed to me as the University batsman likely to go furthest, though the Test selectors evidently preferred the look of G. H. G. Doggart, J. G. Dewes and D. S. Sheppard. I would not attempt to say who of May and Cowdrey was the better as a schoolboy batsman. They both had the makings of top-class players, and Cowdrey has the chance to go just as far as May. I only hope that, because he is such a fine batsman, he will not be persuaded to give up his leg-break bowling. There is no reason why he should not continue as an all-rounder.

Cowdrey was not the only good-looking batsman of 1950. Another who played in the two representative games in 1949, Stewart of Alleyn's, had also made notable progress. When he first played in those games—and played with considerable success—he was largely an off-side batsman. His stance was so ultra square that often he could not get himself round to the leg side ball in time to deal with it. In the intervening year he adjusted his stance and turned himself into an all-round-the-wicket player. He revealed good strokes in all directions, and his general skill was such that in several seasons he would have been considered the leading batsman of his year. Stewart should regard being second to such a fine batsman as Cowdrey a more honourable position than number one in a lean year.

Curiously, another who played at Lord's in both matches in 1949, Silk of Christ's Hospital, had also revised his game in the interval. Formerly his stance was directly opposed to Stewart's, for his left foot was withdrawn so far towards square leg that his position permitted him to employ no force at all on the off side. He gained his place in the Public Schools team against the Combined Services as a stone-walling opening batsman. He did not again win a place, but by August 1950 he was well on the way to becoming a stroke-making batsman, for he had closed his stance and was thinking in scoring terms instead of being concerned mainly with propping up an end.

Another young player who compelled attention at Lord's was Smith from Manchester. He was an all-rounder, though he appealed to me mostly as a bowler, for he certainly has the appearance of a coming fast bowler. His run to the wicket was strikingly similar to that of Pollard, whom he has surely studied often at Old Trafford. At the wicket the similarity ceased. He had his own action, and it was a good one. He was more square to the wicket at the moment his back foot landed behind the crease than was Pollard, and hence there is the possibility of greater speed when he fully develops his strength. For a boy he was emphatically fast in 1950, and it is greatly to be hoped that he will be able to continue his cricket in good company.

Space does not permit detailed analysis of the others who played in the representative games. They have their niche in the following pages. The standard generally was at least up to that of 1949, the year when the decline was arrested and the upward movement began. Some of those who were rejected for the final Public Schools team would have been greatly welcomed a couple of years earlier. In general terms the Southern Schools appeared stronger in batting and the opposition had more bowling strength with which to test them. There was also continuing improvement in the inter-School matches, and before leaving I must mention again the great job Jim Hammond, formerly the Sussex all-rounder, has continued to do at my old school, Cheltenham. He took over when they were in the dumps, immediately revived them, and in 1950 they again beat Haileybury most convincingly at Lord's. Hammond is one who is infusing robust spirit and genuine cricketing knowledge into boy players, and he is not alone in that western area, for Marlborough and Clifton cricket is also in a healthy state.

THE SCHOOLS

(Scottish Schools will be found at the end of this section.)

After losing their first two matches, Aldenham College developed into a well-balanced and effective combination and suffered only one more defeat. Many good victories were gained. J. G. Joel and J. L. Renwick nearly always gave the innings a good start and other forceful batsmen, T. J. Law and J. R. Heron, followed. Although the side possessed only three good bowlers—J. E. Kentish (off-spin), R. H. M. Arkell (slow left-arm) and J. M. Helder (fast left-arm)—their efforts were usually sufficient. Law, the captain, kept wicket well.

With six old colours, Alleyn's School again enjoyed a highly successful season, winning twelve and drawing five of nineteen matches. Although rain frequently brought difficult pitches, M. J. Stewart and J. F. Pretlove batted consistently well. Pretlove was also the spearhead of a well-balanced attack in which he received best support from D. A. Palastanga, also fast-medium. Stewart, in his second year as captain, set a grand example in the field and again earned a place in the Schools' side at Lord's.

The chief problem which confronted K. G. Hutchings, the Allhallows School captain, was to find a reliable partner with whom to open the innings. Not until the last match of the season, when Hutchings and W. P. Thurgood made 170 together, did the school begin with an encouraging partnership. Then, as on many other occasions, the subsequent batting collapsed completely, only one other batsman reaching double figures. The bowling, with K. F. Keightley and R. Taylor specially prominent, was more effective but the side would have benefited by the inclusion of a good new ball bowler. Four of the fourteen matches were won and three lost.

Ampleforth College again possessed a strong team and if the weather had been more lenient their victories would almost certainly have numbered over five. Of the remaining matches five were drawn and two lost. P. A. Mitchell, the captain, and M. J. Tate were the best of a penetrative attack and Tate distinguished himself at Lord's by taking seven Southern Schools wickets with slow spinners. Every member of the side was capable of making runs.

Beaumont College began indifferently with three draws and two defeats then struck their best form and won their next five games. Although P. A. Dingli, the captain, did not bat so consistently as in 1949 he made many valuable scores and he received plenty of spirited support. In A. B. Wallerstein the team possessed one of the best schoolboy bowlers of the year.

With a strong all-round team, Bedford School proved a match for any other school side. The main virtue of the eleven lay in the wholehearted fielding which supported the cleverly-handled spin attack of M. H. J. Allen and R. L. Cartwright. Allen, left-arm slow, represented Public Schools at Lord's and was invited to assist Bedfordshire during the holidays. Although there was no specially brilliant performer, the batting was solid and even the "tail" could be relied upon for runs. C. D. Miller and M. S. Meeson took chief honours.

The splendid batting of R. A. Gale provided the chief feature for Bedford Modern School who won four matches and drew the remaining six. Gale, a tall left-handed opening batsman with unbounded confidence, never failed to reach double figures and he maintained his form when chosen for Bedfordshire. Gale also excelled with cleverly-flighted off-spin bowling. The captain, P. G. Miller, made his runs convincingly and he too earned a place in the county side. Besides Gale, two fast-medium bowlers, M. G. Cave and K. Tait, bowled steadily. The fielding was often brilliant and always good.

Berkhamsted School possessed a better team than the record of two wins, five losses and six draws indicates. The school failed against strong club sides but might have won four matches that were left undecided through rain or lack of time. A. J. Birrell, a resourceful captain, batted confidently but apart from the opening pair, D. F. Severs and N. H. Mills, the remainder were unsound. The bowling of W. Wace and R. P. Denny was steady and reliable.

The Bishop's Stortford College record of two wins, six losses and five draws gives a false impression of their ability. Five of the undecided games were in favour of the College and after a discouraging start the side played bright and enterprising cricket. M. H. Bull handled his bowlers well and inspired a high standard of fielding. This lightened the task of D. T. Kilian and C. W. Nighy (medium-paced) and K. A. Bines. The batting did not come up to expectations although C. I. M. Jones and P. G. Collett were sound.

Although Bloxham School possessed only one really good batsman in their captain, R. F. De Lattre, the strength of their attack enabled the team to win four and draw three of the thirteen matches. D. J. Maisey (fast medium left-arm) and A. J. Lord both swung the new ball late and effectively and R. Law bowled left-arm slows intelligently. M. A. Scott-Smith proved more than adequate as a stock-bowler. The standard of fielding, low at first, improved steadily.

J. M. Bedford, the Blundell's School captain, proved one of the best for many years. Previously regarded only as a left-arm slow bowler, he converted himself into an opening batsman with such success that, in the absence through illness of D. J. Hollands for most of the season, he became the team's leading scorer. His handling of the side, both on and off the field, was exemplary. Another greatly improved batsman was R. J. Russell but T. R. Newell-Price was disappointing. When Hollands resumed, his slow leg-breaks added welcome variety in attack. Four matches were won, three lost and five drawn.

In their centenary year, Bradfield College fittingly enjoyed one of the most successful seasons in their history. In fifteen matches the side claimed seven victories, five honourable draws and three defeats—one by only seven runs. The leading personality was the captain, C. J. Lee, whose excellent all-round cricket won him a place in the Public Schools' XI at Lord's. Few schools managed to master the bowling of Lee and M. Blanford (medium-paced) and P. P. Short (off-breaks), and several were dismissed for very low totals. The fielders supported well and few chances were missed. Lee hit centuries against Radley and Stowe and was only eight short against St. Edwards. J. L. Quarrington and M. E. Taylor also batted consistently.

Due mainly to a reliable and assorted attack, Bradford Grammar School did well in winning five and drawing five of their eleven fixtures. A. S. Fox, the captain, set his colleagues a splendid example of keenness with the result that a side of average players developed into a really sound team. Fox and G. W. Moore carried the batting and the best bowlers were J. D. Waterhouse (off-spin) and B. Petyt (medium-paced).

Under the leadership of R. G. Sharpe, Brentwood School recovered so well after losing four matches in May that of the remaining twelve fixtures six were won and six drawn favourably. The batting was solid and apart from G. W. Horrex—a stylish opening bat—five others played at least one innings of 50 or over. Splendid work in the field made the attack more effective than it might have been for, until J. B. Meehan (fast-medium) came into the side in the last few matches, the bowling looked steady rather than hostile.

Brighton College had a successful season with wins over six other schools against a defeat by Lancing. The side also distinguished itself by holding an M.C.C. team, which included Denis Compton, until the last over of the day. A. B. D. Parsons was again the most promising batsman and I. J. Glassborow began the season in grand style. Most of the side were capable of making runs but the bowling depended too much upon the fast-medium pair, P. Kemp and J. S. Gibson. Kemp, in his fifth year in the eleven, played for Southern Schools at Lord's.

Bromsgrove School did not do themselves justice, admirable outcricket often going unrewarded because of uncertain batting. Yet, on other occasions, the batsmen showed that the talent was there by compiling impressive totals against good opposition. The main fault was lack of confidence and enterprise. N. T. Sisson, a lively opening bowler, handled his attack intelligently and achieved good results from his spinners, J. B. Wilson and J. C. East, and J. Faull (medium-paced). The fielding, generally, was very good. Four matches were won and six lost.

Bryanston School played thirteen fixtures of which one was drawn, one lost and eleven were won—two off the last possible ball of the day. Most credit for this excellent performance went to three all-rounders, T. J. Sankey, J. Harrison and the captain, J. W. Drawbell. Drawbell led his side enthusiastically and showed rare judgment in the field. Only three schools made over 100 against an accurate and varied attack and only twice was the team all out. With half the side available again, prospects for 1951 looked good.

P. B. C. Emby, the Canford School captain, began the season with only one old Colour beside himself and, although one or two promising players were found, the team lost six and drew five of their twelve matches. Curiously, they fared better against adult club teams than against other schools. B. L. G. Kenny batted consistently and M. A. Budd did most of the bowling.

Charterhouse School, under the captaincy of J. W. H. May, enjoyed a moderately successful season gaining four wins and three draws from twelve matches. Besides his capable leadership, May proved the leading batsman and a useful bowler. He hit two centuries. Other batsmen were inconsistent, though C. H. W. Robson and M. R. P. Young showed special promise. C. M. Chadwick and S. Stevenson bowled well.

After losing their first school match against St. Edwards, the experienced Cheltenham College team developed under the captaincy of D. M. Richards into one of the best of the year. Malvern, Repton, Clifton, M.C.C. and Haileybury—at Lord's—were among the sides beaten and the only other defeat came after a stirring struggle with Free Foresters. Rain again spoiled the Marlborough match. The formidable fast-medium trio of Richards, J. M. Blackburn and D. G. Mee received grand assistance from H. R. P. Thompson, who gained considerable success in his first season as an off-spinner. Apart from Richards, who was chosen for the trial match at Lord's, the batsmen lacked something in technique but this was offset by the determination and enterprise which characterised the team's work throughout.

D. R. W. Silk, the Christ's Hospital captain, again showed all-round ability far in excess of his colleagues and for the second successive year he was selected to play for the Schools at Lord's. With A. Joanes, another accomplished batsman, Silk shared in many prolific opening stands and his leg-break bowling brought him more wickets than all his team-mates combined. With so much dependent on Silk and Joanes, the team was unbalanced but three matches were won, three lost and three drawn. Silk will be at Cambridge in 1951.

On paper, the Clifton College team was the strongest for many years, yet their record of two school matches lost (against Cheltenham and Tonbridge), two won (Sherborne and Rugby) and one drawn (Marlborough), was only moderate. On both occasions when they were beaten, the batting, usually solid, broke down. R. V. Turner's leadership and stylish batting earned him the captaincy of The Rest at Lord's. M. B. Foyle, a left-hander, and R. P. Rankine, a very capable wicket-keeper, batted well but bowling was the main strength. A. J. Smith (leg-breaks) performed the feat of taking all ten wickets in an innings against Sherborne, and J. C. Rees (off-breaks) also excelled. The fielding was always good.

B. B. Moore led the well-balanced Cranbrook School team to victories in four of the eight inter-school fixtures and to a splendid five wickets win over M.C.C. B. H. Wardle (fast-medium) formed the spearhead of a good attack which was supported by some brilliant work in the field. The batting proved solid rather than spectacular. A. R. C. Galpin had six of the eleven available in 1951.

Such was the enterprising character of Cranleigh School cricket that the team was not concerned in a draw until rain ruined the last match of a successful season. Much of the credit for this was due to J. Inglis, a resourceful captain and wicket-keeper of above average skill. Two of the four defeats were suffered when Inglis was away injured. Seven games were won and one ended in a tie. N. A. Paul headed both sets of averages and J. W. Clements improved considerably with the bat.

A reverse in the last match of the season prevented Culford School from claiming an unbeaten record in inter-school fixtures. Nevertheless, the batting was not sufficiently enterprising to enable the side to fulfil expectations. A worthy successor to T. G. M. Keall, the 1949 captain, was found in D. A. S. Plastow who shared the batting honours with J. S. Hercock. F. N. Fenning and J. B. Kirch bowled particularly well on hard pitches and D. Beech showed promise as a spinner.

Dean Close School won three and lost two of their twelve fixtures—a satisfactory record considering the absence of reputable middle batsmen. The bowlers, particularly M. D. Moran, played their parts well and J. Stanley-Smith, the captain, set a good example in the field. The standard of cricket benefited considerably from the coaching of F. R. Santall, the former Warwickshire player, who died during the winter.

Rain interfered so seriously with the Denstone College fixture-list that only four of the ten matches were finished. Two were won and two lost. The side were fortunate to possess such a talented batsman as M. J. Amps who rarely failed to make a good score but the attack proved only moderate. D. E. Cook's bowling suffered through his trying to fill the double-role of new ball and spin bowler. The left-arm bowlers, W. G. Tobias and J. R. F. Curry, were steady.

The Dover College record of three wins and six defeats from eleven matches represented a considerable improvement compared with 1949. O. G. Haydock-Wilson led the side well but he was handicapped by the unreliability of his reputed batsmen. A new member of the team, R. R. Bairamian, enjoyed the distinction of heading both sets of averages and with six colours, including Haydock-Wilson, remaining the outlook for 1951 was brighter.

Although Downside School gained only two wins from ten games the side possessed three especially promising cricketers. They were R. St. J. Jackson and E. A. McGuire, both hard-hitting middle batsman, and R. J. Adamson, a polished batsman and good off-break bowler. Apart from Adamson the attack proved disappointing. Of the opening bowlers, M. L. Berger was often erratic and J. Lomas seldom beat the bat. Another spin bowler was needed.

Forced to find an almost entirely new team Dulwich College drew eight of their thirteen fixtures and won only two. The bowling was very weak but A. C. Warren showed remarkable improvement with the bat and he played several excellent innings. In the following autumn, G. Higgs, the captain, hovered between life and death after his neck was broken while playing rugby.

Durham School were unable to find a pair of reliable opening batsmen and as a result the side seldom made a good start. T. Bourn ran into form late in the season when he atoned for earlier failures with several splendid innings. In attack Durham depended mainly upon T. P. Mitcalfe, a promising medium-paced bowler. Five of the sixteen matches were won and six lost.

Eastbourne College felt keenly the lack of a reliable fast-medium bowler and sound middle batsmen and were unsuccessful in school matches. Nevertheless M.C.C. were beaten for the first time in thirty-three years. Two players showed distinct promise. They were I. G. Watt, a slow left-arm bowler who flighted and spun the ball cleverly, and C. J. G. Harding, a batsman with a wide range of strokes. Watt captains the side in 1951.

Slow scoring by younger members of Eltham College was responsible for many of the five drawn matches not being won. The team was successful in three of the remaining six fixtures. An injured left shoulder handicapped P. D. Bairstow, the captain, but his right-arm out-swing or off-spin bowling again brought him plenty of wickets.

Including three old colours, the young Epsom College team rarely did themselves justice and four matches were won, three drawn and six lost. The batting of D. A. Music and B. O. Walpole was particularly good but needed stronger support. D. A. J. Cartwright (leg-breaks) and D. A. Fenner (slow left-arm) both spun the ball and kept a useful length. The captain, J. S. Hall, provided pace.

Unbeaten in school matches, Eton College would have been a very good side but for a tendency to drop vital catches. The ground fielding was good and J. S. Guthrie placed the field intelligently yet too many chances failed to stick. The bowling depended mainly on the leg-breaks and googlies of R. V. C. Robins, son of the Middlesex captain, who dismissed several distinguished batsmen. He was best supported by Guthrie (off-breaks) and the opening pair, N. C. Wadham and P. L. Eckersley who might, however, have made more use of the new ball. After carrying the batting in the first few matches, A. C. D. Ingleby-Mackenzie and M. D. M. Sellar lost form to some extent. B. C. Gordon Lennox and D. C. Watney showed stamina and concentration and the side possessed fierce hitters in P. A. Metaxa, J. D. Montagu and Wadham. Altogether four matches were won, two lost and four drawn. The game against Marlborough ended in a tie.

Framlingham College bowlers lacked hostility and, though including five of the successful 1949 eleven, the team did not fulfill expectations. Five matches were won, six lost and three drawn. In school matches, however, they were unbeaten. There was no reliable pace bowler to support the spin of C. M. M. Ford, the captain, and M. N. Hawkes, though keen fielding helped to keep down runs. J. Ives showed enterprise with the bat.

Giggleswick School won only one match, drew five and lost three. Their chief weakness was the almost complete dependence in attack on two fast-medium bowlers, S. J. Hanscombe and G. A. Briggs, who did not receive the support they deserved in the slips. The batting was fairly strong. B. Parsons and B. Horn seldom lost their wickets cheaply and M. J. Hartley was a hard-hitting opening batsman. The captain, T. D. Wilson, performed splendidly in the field but his colleagues did not always profit by his example.

Despite reliable batting and smart fielding, Haileybury and I.S.C. could not overcome their bowling weakness and lost seven of their fourteen fixtures (five drawn). V. F. Browne, the captain, again showed all-round ability and D. H. Bicknell, a hard-hitting batsman, improved considerably as the season progressed. M. A. Thomas batted well and was often brilliant in the field but his bowling disappointed. P. J. C. Smallwood maintained his promise with the ball.

Harrow School enjoyed their best season for many years. Seven of the fourteen matches were won and the only defeat was by M.C.C. who won by one wicket on the stroke of time. The main strength of the side lay in the new ball attack of the captain, R. A. Jacques, and M. Kok who nearly always wrested the initiative from opposing batsmen. Between them they took over 100 wickets. Jacques, in his fourth year in the team, claimed 57 wickets at little over 11 runs apiece. J. W. E. Bleackley, captain in 1951, was the most consistent batsman. He possessed the determination needed to make full use of his wide range of strokes. J. D. Thicknesse, W. J. Foster and B. C. G. Wilenkin also batted well.

Under the captaincy of W. Knightley-Smith, Highgate School enjoyed a moderately good summer, winning four and losing six of their sixteen fixtures. Knightley-Smith, an attractive left-hand batsman, scored heavily and earned a place in the side against Combined Services at Lord's as well as inclusion in the Middlesex Second XI. R. M. Griffin, another left-hander, gave best support. J. C. Dare, a dependable off-break bowler, and I. E. M. Clifford worked hard in attack but the fielding was often disappointing.

G. L. Hill, the Hurstpierpoint College captain, devoted the early part of the season to team-building and match results were not impressive. Nevertheless, the side improved considerably and three games were won, seven lost and four drawn. Although he made no big scores, T. W. Palmer seldom failed completely with the bat and the team possessed useful bowlers in N. F. R. Marsh and R. M. James.

Although only two old colours remained, King's College, Taunton produced a promising team under the able leadership of P. A. B. Dean. Four matches were won, four lost, one tied and another drawn. D. B. Gosheron and J. Hunter-Watts gave solidity to the middle batting and twice shared in stands of over 100. Dean bowled off-breaks consistently well and N. S. Bathurst revealed talent as a leg-break bowler.

Winning seven of their ten matches, the well-balanced King's College School, Wimbledon, team enjoyed a more successful season than any since the war. The batting, with M. F. R. Curry prominent, was consistent and the out-cricket was usually of a high standard—although inclined to wilt under heavy punishment. J. Wood, the captain, and Curry were the best bowlers. Seven of the side remained for 1951.

King Edward's School, Birmingham, had an encouraging season considering their youth and performances generally augured well for 1951. Five matches were won, five lost and nine drawn. The sound batting of A. J. Homer, who headed the averages and scored a fine century at Solihull, and of P. A. Gough, was frequently negated by the uncertainty of the middle batsmen. The attack was steady if not formidable, with J. Hutchings (medium-paced off-breaks) and D. H. Benson (slow leg-breaks) always prominent. Fielding lapses lost advantages early in the season.

King Edward's School, Stourbridge, were indebted to a specially effective set of bowlers for their record of eight wins, three losses and a draw. B. F. Fieldhouse shouldered the main responsibility and he well deserved his impressive figures. The best batsman was E. Barrett.

With the majority of the successful 1949 eleven available, King's School, Canterbury were again too strong for most opponents. Six matches were won, five drawn and two lost. The batting was specially powerful. R. O. A. Norris, P. J. Walker and the captain, B. E. Lee, all scored freely and they received splendid support. The bowling was well-assorted, J. B. Phillips, a young seam bowler, again taking most wickets.

King's School, Ely, confounded all expectations. On previous form the bowling seemed strong and the batting poor, yet throughout the season the batsmen worked splendidly to offset the failures of their attack. M. H. Boorman, P. Leach, R. M. Ray and the captain, J. N. Wagstaff, were most consistent. Of the bowlers, only J. V. Gowler and P. Thorpe touched their form of the previous summer. Four matches were won, four lost and five drawn.

King's School, Rochester, were more successful than anticipated, winning four and losing two of the eight school matches. Most credit for this satisfactory record went to S. J. Robbie, who took nearly 50 wickets at moderate cost, and to the batting of the captain, G. R. T. Kingston, and J. D. Charlton. The fielding was better than during the past few years. Kingston improved his captaincy as the season progressed and used his bowlers with confidence. A general fault in the team was lack of footwork in playing spin bowling. Seven members of the eleven, including the captain, were available for 1951.

With ten old colours available, Kingswood School anticipated a highly successful season. In fact the side suffered only one defeat by a school but lost four club matches. Four games were won and three drawn. The team's three major weaknesses were the inconsistency of the batsmen, the inaccuracy of the quicker bowlers and erratic throwing-in. Nevertheless, they always played attractive cricket under the captaincy of K. J. H. Brown. N. F. Lockhart fully maintained his promise as a left-handed opening bat and J. G. Smith's leg-breaks were effective.

The most encouraging feature of the Lancing College team, who won five and lost five of their thirteen fixtures, was the consistently high standard of the fielding. In this respect, the captain, N. G. Williams, set a splendid example. The bowling, dependent mainly on Williams, was well-suited to soft pitches and in J. K. Hall the team possessed a fast bowler of great promise. Although the batting was patchy, the side usually made a respectable total. A. G. Cochrane was the leading scorer. S. Sydneysmith, captain in 1951, will be assisted by eight players with First XI experience.

Judged solely on results, Leeds Grammar School, with five wins, six losses and four draws, fared only moderately. The side was young, however, and several players showed real promise which should materialise when experience brings added confidence. T. A. Balmforth and S. G. Metcalfe showed themselves to be already polished batsmen and J. G. Raybould, a left-hander, hit the ball with refreshing vigour. D. B. Hufton handled his bowlers well. D. C. Duncan (fast-medium) and J. Boyd (left-arm medium-paced) were impressive.

Until L. S. Wilson was tried as a spin bowler, the Leighton Park School attack lacked variety, yet few opponents mastered it. Seven of the thirteen matches were won and three lost. Although erratic, J. A. Parry frequently produced a really good fast delivery and two medium-paced bowlers, D. H. Simmonds and C. N. M. Taylor, were reliable. For runs the side depended almost entirely on D. G. Taylor whose consistency was remarkable.

Leys School gained four wins and four draws from thirteen games, a considerable improvement compared with 1949. I. S. Governor and E. M. Blenkinsopp lent solidity to the batting and R. G. Owain-Jones and N. R. Nesbitt also played useful parts. Although varied, the attack was not really penetrative. D. J. W. Thomas was erratic with leg-breaks and googlies and M. T. Marsden did not maintain the form which brought him 19 wickets in the first three games.

Rain interrupted so many matches that the young Llandoverly College side failed to settle down properly and only one match was won out of thirteen. Nevertheless, four of the seven drawn games found the team in a commanding position at the close. D. H. Williams, a capable captain, and D. J. Harrett batted well, O. M. Howell played one excellent innings and P. J. Y. Scott showed great improvement. Williams and D. I. G. Taylor were hostile opening bowlers but the lack of effective spinners handicapped the attack.

Malvern College, with a very useful all-round side, would have earned a more impressive record if there had been more time and less rain in some of their games. As it was, six were drawn, four lost and only two won. The captain, A. A. Gregory, D. W. T. Brough and J. O. Rust formed the nucleus of a strong attack which was supported by keen work in the field. R. H. Chadder, a stylish opening batsman, was consistent but other promising batsmen, notably Rust and A. A. Dowdeswell, did not find their best form until July.

D. A. Whitworth, the Manchester Grammar School captain, tackled his team-building problems so successfully that the side gained twelve victories and was beaten only once. The chief concern was to replace the pair of opening bowlers who had been in the team for four years. A. B. Shelmerdine and A. J. Dover took over these duties with such efficiency that the attack again proved the main strength of the side. E. J. Cuerden was the best of the slower bowlers. The admirable team-spirit which Whitworth inspired was reflected in the batting which was consistent and not dependent upon any particular individual.

Although the Marlborough College record of two wins, and four defeats from fourteen games was unimpressive, the team went through the season unbeaten by a school side. They beat Winchester, played an exciting tie with Eton and drew with Wellington, Sherborne, Clifton, Cheltenham and Rugby. In each case Marlborough appeared to hold the initiative. The main weakness was the middle batting. O. P. Hudson and R. C. Keightley were a sound opening pair. N. M. Morgan and M. F. Pope made good use of the new ball and W. J. Pinney and J. A. Kidd were effective spinners.

Undefeated in inter-school games, Merchant Taylors' School, would have gained many more than four victories if they had been better favoured by the weather and had shown more aggression in all departments. J. G. K. Ingram, the captain, did well both as batsman and bowler but the main feature was the excellent batting of P. F. Jackson. R. C. Snelling, who came into the side late, immediately proved his worth as a leg-break bowler and he easily headed the averages.

Had Mercers' School bowling been as enterprising as the batting they would have won more than three of their fifteen games. No fewer than eleven were drawn. Useful totals, for which L. C. Johnson, R. V. Lord and M. H. Spink were mostly responsible, were too often followed by steady, but innocuous bowling. The fielding reached a high standard.

Under the capable leadership of J. Roberts, Mill Hill School met with moderate success claiming two wins and three defeats from ten games. Roberts took chief honours with both bat and ball and D. H. R. Salter played many valuable innings. M. G. Williams showed promise as an off-spin bowler and A. M. Micklem was unlucky not to take many more wickets. J. Grimberg, a useful wicket-keeper, leads the eleven in 1951.

The Mount St. Mary's College batsmen frequently disappointed but the side did well to win five and lose only two of eleven games. The opening pair, T. J. Bateson and J. H. E. Adams, excelled in a stand of 152 against Trent but they failed to reproduce this form and the captain, J. F. Power, seldom revealed his full talents as an attacking batsman. P. B. Wrigglesworth, with off-breaks, did most of the bowling and he was well supported by the new ball pair, M. D. Maxwell and J. P. F. Veys.

Newcastle Royal Grammar School again possessed a strong and well-varied attack but the batting was less reliable. The captain, D. R. Lowther, did not find runs so easy to obtain as in 1949 and of the remaining batsmen only W. B. Lowther and R. R. Pearson accomplished much. R. I. Franks (fast-medium), P. E. Forster (slow left-arm) and D. R. Lowther (medium-paced off-breaks) were the most successful bowlers.

Oakham School lacked the bowling strength to dismiss most opponents with the result that of the fifteen matches played seven were lost and the same number drawn. P. R. Forman displayed good all-round form and M. J. H. Williams frequently batted well but their support was negligible.

Although injuries kept one old Colour out of the Oundle School team throughout the summer and limited the appearances of A. J. P. Woodhouse to two, the team played as well as any since the war in winning four and drawing five of twelve matches. F. S. Price was again the mainstay of the batting which, however, lacked solidity. The chief strength lay in attack, A. R. Armitage and C. M. Lowe—both fast-medium—and J. M. Pickard (off-breaks) sharing the honours.

With better batting support for B. S. Adams, Perse School would have won more than seven of fifteen matches. Six were lost. Adams developed into an exceptionally reliable batsman and could be dogged or aggressive as the situation demanded. He was instrumental in three of the wins gained against declarations. The attack needed good spin bowlers but C. B. Gadsby and R. A. Neaves did well.

Particularly strong in batting, Radley College were again undefeated in school matches and altogether the side earned six victories and five draws compared with three losses. Most of the batsmen made their runs quickly, the best stroke-players being the captain, J. de C. Hughes, and J. R. M. Britten. Two young newcomers to the team, E. R. and J. D. Dexter, showed exceptional talent. In three years Radley have lost only one of eighteen inter-school fixtures.

Reading School often lacked ability to press home an initial advantage and did not fulfil the promise shown early in the season. Five matches were won, six lost and six drawn. J. C. Rudd, the captain, outshone his colleagues as a batsman and he received scant support. The need for a good pace bowler was often marked although Rudd and R. A. Bissolotti (slow left-arm) worked hard in attack. Both suffered from missed catches.

Although the Repton School record of two wins, five defeats and seven draws was unimpressive, the team played bright, enterprising cricket under the skilful leadership of A. C. W. Lewis. An admirable victory was gained over Shrewsbury but the Cheltenham match was lost and the other three school fixtures were undecided. Lewis was the best of a sound batting side in which D. H. Popham also did well. The bowlers, unreliable at first, improved steadily. Lewis and R. J. Howling formed an effective opening pair and were well supported by J. F. M. Walker and W. H. M. Pyne. The fielding, however, was not as good as in previous years. Lewis and seven of his side remained for 1951.

As in 1949, Rossall School were able to field probably the strongest side of any school in the country. Under the inspiring leadership of G. P. Marsland, they won eight of their fifteen matches and again were undefeated. Only once was this record endangered—when Shrewsbury were permitted to recover and gain the initiative after being led on the first innings. The strength of the batting could be judged by the fact that G. E. Smith, the No. 11 batsman, had only one innings throughout the summer. I. A. Rhodes, an aggressive left-hander, M. E. L. Melliush, a stylish No. 1, K. V. Holmes, his left-handed partner, and Marsland all played several excellent innings and the bowling was equally strong. Marsland, who played for The Rest at Lord's and led Young Amateurs of Surrey after term, opened the attack with B. R. Fox, an economical in-swing bowler, and could then call on S. L. Watson (off-breaks), M. J. M. Collinge (medium-paced), W. Nabb (leg-breaks) or Smith. Apart from the Shrewsbury match, few chances were missed in the field. Four colours remain for 1951 when Melliush will lead the side.

Rugby School possessed few recognised batsmen and were further handicapped by illness and injury which caused the absence of three bowlers during the season. In the circumstances it was not surprising that they won only one match and lost five of the remaining twelve. T. J. King, a stolid opening batsman, M. R. Ludlow and the captain, P. A. R. Greenstreet, played several good innings but the middle batting was unreliable. Greenstreet developed into a useful new-ball bowler and J. J. M. Barron spun the ball intelligently.

Because of batting weaknesses, Rydal School experienced one of their poorest seasons for many years and, of their seventeen fixtures, ten were lost and only three won. Most of the batsmen lacked scoring strokes and E. N. Dale-Jones, the most successful, often got himself out through impetuosity. The bowling gave more cause for satisfaction. P. W. Hughes, the captain, bowled at a fair pace and he would have done even better but for fielding lapses in the slips.

After a disastrous start, St. Alban's School improved considerably and of the ten matches played, three were won and four lost. H. A. F. Malden, the captain, began the season without any other old colours but his example in the field and intelligent handling of a well-varied attack did much to mould the team into a keen and effective band. Young players showed great promise, particularly L. J. Holt an off-spinner and attractive batsman. Malden, fast-medium, and G. Giffen, slow left-arm, also bowled well.

St. Bees School, capably led by T. W. Burgess, won three matches, lost four and drew four. Burgess alone stood out among the batsmen, but the bowling, particularly that of D. G. Holliday, commanded respect.

Bad fielding and a shortage of good batsmen cost St. Dunstan's College a better record than five wins, five draws and five losses. The captain, D. P. Thomas, his opening partner—D. E. Norman—and the wicket-keeper, R. J. Smith, were the only consistent run-getters. The attack was well-varied but lacked support.

St. Edward's School, Oxford, under the captaincy of D. S. Gilbert-Smith, gained three notable victories and only bad weather robbed them of more. Four games were lost. The unusual combination of three left-arm slow bowlers and two off-spinners successfully supported J. N. MacCaig (fast-medium) and J. D. Currey (left-arm) who headed the averages. A. Brockman and M. E. Thorne were the most dependable batsmen, though the batting of R. Lock showed great improvement. His bowling disappointed.

St. Paul's School batsmen lacked enterprise and confidence—a factor which was mainly responsible for the poor record of seven losses against two wins from sixteen matches. The bowling depended largely on R. O. C. Norman and A. M. Dougall both of whom had to work hard to offset the absence of bowlers of genuine pace. They were excellently supported in the field where the captain, G. Nolan, set an admirable example. J. Krieger and D. B. Tapley played some good innings but the later batsmen seldom offered much resistance.

St. Peter's School, York, enjoyed a highly satisfactory season, winning five and drawing seven of thirteen games. Rain was largely responsible for the high proportion of undecided games. The side was not beaten by a school and gained convincing wins over Durham, Giggleswick, Ampleforth and Leeds. Match-winning factors were the splendid bowling of J. J. Youll and the reliability of the batting. N. M. Hodd and W. H. N. Fairweather were specially successful.

Thanks mainly to the excellent bowling of P. Prodger, the captain, and S. G. Carmichael, Sevenoaks School enjoyed their best season for many years. Five matches were won, five drawn and two lost. Prodger and R. I. Briars batted confidently and the side gained at least one admirable victory against the clock.

Sedbergh School cricket, under the able leadership of P. B. Maxwell, gave much cause for satisfaction. One of the best features was the spirited manner in which the later batsmen usually responded to a crisis—though they collapsed badly against Stonyhurst. Of the eleven fixtures played, five were won and two lost. Maxwell and J. M. Hunter were a reliable opening pair and T. A. Good and W. J. Downey hit the ball hard. The attack proved steady but lacked a bowler of real pace. M. H. Ainley enjoyed many good spells and the introduction of J. F. Jackson (off-spin) late in the season was most successful.

Sherborne School possessed considerable batting strength, but the attack was not of the same standard and only two matches were won. Three were lost and six drawn. The captain, F. M. Anderton, R. K. Day, J. K. Walker and A. G. Stoughton-Harris played many delightful innings though the middle batting was unreliable. No bowler of real pace was found and P. A. Elliott provided the main contrast to the slow bowlers, Anderton (off-breaks) and P. T. I. Smith (leg-breaks). T. J. Horn kept wicket well.

The Shrewsbury School record of three wins, five defeats and six draws, did not give a true picture of the worth of the eleven—specially in comparison with other schools. Repton won by the narrowest possible margin—by one wicket off the last ball—and the games with Uppingham, Rossall and Malvern were well in hand when stumps were drawn. The season ended on a gratifying note when Free Foresters were beaten for the first time for many years. Whereas the bowling proved steady, the batting was uncertain and the order might have been reversed without noticeable effect. R. E. Strickland, the captain, and J. R. V. Woods, the leading all-rounder, were most successful. The fielding, particularly the wicket-keeping of C. J. S. Hill, was generally first-rate.

Solihull School went through a poor season, winning only one of their ten matches and losing five. More than once, however, rain interfered when victory seemed likely. The best feature was the forceful batting of C. B. Richards. R. Rushton was a talented leg-break bowler but the fielding left room for much improvement.

The main feature of Stamford School cricket was the splendid batting of the captain, M. J. K. Smith, who earned a place in the Rest XI at Lord's. His only worthwhile support came from G. S. Hopper, a useful all-rounder, and T. J. Guffick. The attack was better balanced. R. C. Smith, with left-arm leg-breaks, enjoyed marked success and D. G. Wood, another left-arm bowler, did well. Six matches were won, five lost and two drawn.

An epidemic of missed catches was largely responsible for the unimpressive Stonyhurst College record of two wins, four defeats and seven draws. Several members of the side, notably the captain, P. J. Leyden, possessed talent well above average. Leyden again proved the mainstay of the batting. His defence was particularly sound and nimble footwork did much to compensate for his limited range of scoring strokes. He could do well at Oxford. The best stroke-player was the youngest member—P. S. Delisle. Despite lack of fielding support, the bowlers were steady. P. G. Charnock bowled off-breaks with more guile than usual in a schoolboy and R. P. Godfrey (fast) enjoyed an exceptional spell in which he took five Sedbergh wickets without cost. The medium-paced bowlers, P. Finch and E. A. Morales, gave little away. Eight of the side remained for 1951.

Weak out-cricket was largely to blame for the depressing Stowe School record of one win and four defeats from fourteen matches. The batting was stronger than expected for H. J. Lloyd, the captain, and C. H. Lezard made runs consistently and several others played innings of merit. P. H. Molloy bowled particularly well early in the season and P. G. and B. C. Harris improved considerably. These three were all medium-paced, however, and more variety would have strengthened the attack. Although the catching was fairly reliable the ground fielding was slow and many runs were given away. Lloyd and three of his team remained for 1951.

The Sutton Valence record of three wins, eleven defeats and a draw was deceptive for all the victories were gained in inter-school matches and three of the defeats were against club sides after the school declared. A. J. Knight proved an able leader and his fast-medium bowling provided an effective contrast to the left-arm bowling of J. A. Roper. The most successful batsman was C. F. Smith.

With only one other old colour available, A. F. Dibble, the Taunton School captain, did not find a settled team until late in the season. The average age was fairly young but many of the players showed considerable talent. J. Baker again showed his worth as an all-rounder, W. G. Lewis batted well and Bibble provided most assistance in attack. Uncertain fielding gave runs away, otherwise the record of three victories, six defeats and six draws might have been better.

M. C. Cowdrey, in his fifth year in the Tonbridge School eleven, was again the dominant figure, claiming over 1,000 runs and nearly 50 wickets. His exceptional talents were recognised by Kent who included him in the county side towards the end of the summer. He also captained Public Schools at Lord's. Cowdrey received better support than in 1949, especially in the field where the standard was high. Six matches were won, seven lost and two drawn.

N. Armstrong, the captain, was the dominant personality in Trent College cricket. A forcing right-hand batsman he made many fine scores including 200 not out against Oakham—the last 120 in an hour. A. J. Radley and D. Snowdon were better batsmen than their figures suggested. Apart from F. W. Norton, a slow left-arm bowler who compensated for lack of spin by pitching the ball well up to the batsmen, the bowling was less impressive. Three matches were won, two lost and nine drawn.

Strength in attack enabled University College School to gain a moderately successful record. R. J. Lyon, P. J. Caston and C. J. Parry all bowled well and the captain, A. J. Drew, was the best of an unimpressive batting side.

The Uppingham School season was by no means as dull as the curious record of one defeat, one victory and ten draws (including all five school matches) suggested. The batting, with C. H. Maxwell, C. K. R. Vartan and D. H. Davies prominent, was stronger than for many years. Vartan handled his limited bowling resources well, but as the only genuinely quick bowler he had to do too much work himself. R. J. Bennett used off-spin cleverly but the bowling of R. N. Haygarth and C. H. Maxwell, though keen, did not provide sufficient contrast in spin.

Wellingborough School fared very much better against other schools than against club sides. Two games were won, three lost and eight drawn. P. Almond proved a keen leader and his batting showed remarkable improvement during the season. F. J. Cook, no stylist but difficult to dislodge, was the chief run-getter and B. Huckle (off-spin) headed the bowling.

Admirably led by P. D. Waghorn, Wellington College won six and lost three of twelve fixtures. The nucleus of a strong side was formed by R. O'Brien and J. H. E. Whittaker, both extremely capable batsmen and D. K. Fasken and P. R. Churchill, two splendid bowlers. Whittaker kept wicket consistently. Although the rest of the team often failed to provide the support expected, R. D. W. Norris did well enough with the bat and in the field to earn a place with Fasken in the Schools' Match at Lord's.

Bowling weakness prevented Westminster School from winning more than three of thirteen matches. C. C. P. Williams, a talented forcing batsman made nearly 700 runs in eight completed innings and, though overshadowed, C. J. H. Davies, D. H. Giggins and R. K. Pitamber batted well. R. T. Robinson, the captain, had a distressing summer with the bat and K. J. M. Kemp's fast-medium bowling was nothing like so effective as in 1949. The lack of a good spin bowler was often noticeable. Williams leads the side in 1951.

Under the captaincy of a good all-rounder in R. Subba Row, Whitgift School did very well to win nine and draw five of their sixteen games. M.C.C. were among the teams beaten. Subba Row's leg-breaks and googlies earned him some remarkable figures including nine wickets for nine runs against Hurstpierpoint and nine for 27 against Incogniti. G. Thompson gave his captain splendid assistance both as batsman and bowler but the bowling of R. N. Lewis declined. Subba Row goes to Cambridge.

The Winchester College batsmen failed to find their true form until very late in the season with the result that what was expected to be a really good side succeeded in winning only two matches. Six were lost and the same number drawn. The most reliable batsman was J. L. Bryson although more than once D. W. R. Bedford was forced to play a "captain's innings" to save the side. Against Harrow and Marlborough the batting gave cause for extreme disappointment, but thereafter it improved. M. R. Coulman made up for many inconsistent displays by hitting 200 out of 335 at Agar's Plough, thus maintaining his remarkable record against Eton. Coulman is captain in 1951. Unexpectedly, the bowling proved for much of the season to be appreciably stronger than the batting. I. H. McCausland was particularly effective with flighted off-breaks from round the wicket and Bedford gained some surprising successes. The fielding reached a high standard, M. D. Scott showing real promise behind the stumps.

Worcester Royal Grammar School won six matches and lost two—both by slender margins. This splendid record was due almost entirely to the efforts of three bowlers, B. White (fast-medium), R. G. Woodcock (slow left-arm) and M. A. Norman (off-spin) who between them dismissed 126 opponents. They received invaluable assistance from E. C. Clarke who stumped eighteen batsmen and caught three. The captain, D. R. Claytor, hit an excellent not out century against K.E.S., Birmingham, but the batting otherwise was rather unenterprising. Nine of the side will be available in 1951.

Against other schools, Worksop College did well to win three matches, draw two and lose only one, but club sides usually proved too strong. The season was memorable for two exciting finishes, particularly the one with Mount St. Mary's which was won with the last ball of the match. The batting was solid without being brilliant, S. K. Waddington, J. W. Jago and the captain, J. C. Wright, all playing good innings. In attack too much work fell on Wright, Waddington and R. D. E. Brunton although G. A. Cooke showed much talent with his slows.

Wrekin College showed appreciable improvement compared with 1949 and inter-school matches brought successes against Worksop and Liverpool. The side lost to Denstone and Bromsgrove. J. I. Gartside and B. P. Shaw both disappointed with the bat but the advance of R. Hatch and J. Heron offset this partially. I. B. J. Wilson (left-arm) shouldered the main burden of bowling though he was well supported. Gartside inspired a consistently high standard of fielding.

Wycliffe College cricket showed a return to something approaching pre-war standard. The team took time to gain confidence but despite a weakness on slow pitches they went through the season unbeaten. Four matches were won and eight drawn. The batting was strong and dependable with J. R. Maguire, P. Fisher and P. Michell the best. The absence of a fast or slow bowler of real quality was compensated by the staunch work of the medium-paced pair, J. Ganz and S. Mehta. M. H. Beard led the side keenly.

The Wyggeston Grammar School record of two wins, two losses and six draws showed some improvement on 1949 but left room for much more. The batting, apart from a few good innings by I. V. Slack and M. N. Cockayne, was unimpressive and the out-cricket lacked aggression.

SCOTTISH SCHOOLS

Edinburgh Academy, under the excellent leadership of J. M. Allan, won all six inter-school matches by convincing margins and were undefeated in club games. The captain enjoyed a splendid season both as a batsman and left-arm slow bowler and he earned a place in the Schools trial at Lord's. A. J. Grieve was the most accomplished of the remaining batsmen. N. J. Brow, medium-paced who took four Merchiston Castle wickets with successive balls, and H. J. L. Allan (right-arm slow) gave best support in attack.

Although Fettes College possessed three good batsmen in their captain, A. L. Gunn, D. S. Lowe and C. M. Parker, the attack was not strong enough to force more than three victories from twelve matches. Two games were lost and the remaining seven left drawn.

Loretto School did not have a particularly strong side and though the record against other schools was average, six of the ten club games were lost. Despite useful innings by the captain, H. D. Cochran, and H. J. Bennett, the batting was unreliable and the most likely-looking bowler, J. P. Stokoe, did not fulfil early promise. Bad weather, which ruined both two-day fixtures, and pitches of varying pace prevented the team from settling down. Cochran made a steady and thoughtful leader but he could have demanded and obtained more support from his team.

Merchiston Castle School drew with Fettes and Trinity but lost their other school matches against Watson's and Edinburgh Academy. The Loretto match was abandoned. Of the twelve other fixtures, two were won, six lost and two tied. The eleven was younger and generally weaker than in recent years. The captain, I. S. Taylor, and P. G. Smith headed the batting with almost identical figures and J. C. Mackenzie, captain in 1951, performed gallantly in attack.

George Watson's College, stronger in bowling than batting, won five and lost four of fifteen games. J. H. McDonald batted consistently and showed a sound defence but the later batsmen seldom made many runs. The bowling, opened by C. A. R. Cowan, was well varied.

Trinity College, Glenalmond, handicapped by the unexpected failures of their spin bowlers, won four and lost five of fifteen games. I. C. Burnett, in his third year as captain, fared better with the bat than in 1949 and M. R. Cornwall-Jones made a steady opener with a particularly effective cover-drive. E. R. Paton (fast-medium) carried the attack for most of the season until L. B. Parker struck form.

ETON v. WINCHESTER

At Eton, June 30, July 1. Drawn. Coulman again played a leading part for Winchester in the annual match with Eton. His scores of 28 and 200 followed innings of 47, 27 not out, 55 and 102 not out against the Eton bowlers in the previous two years. On a perfect pitch, Bedford and Burr began with a stand of 83 for Winchester, but the later batsmen did not rise to the occasion. Eton also collapsed after a good start, and from 70 for none the score went to 119 for five. Metaxa and Wadham checked the breakdown by spirited hitting, and the remaining batsmen all played well. Little prospect remained of a definite result when Winchester batted again. Robins, only 15 years old, bowled leg-breaks well without much luck.

DOWNSIDE v. BLUNDELL'S

At Downside, July 8. Blundell's won by 44 runs. Put in to bat on a wet pitch, Blundell's began satisfactorily. After lunch, however, the turf dried and Adamson finished off the innings with a spell of six for 11 in seven overs. Cummings and Nicholson began with 32 for Downside, but the remaining batsmen showed little confidence against the leg-breaks of Hollands (eight for 43).
