

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN 1957

By E. M. WELLINGS

After years of complaint about the unworthy standard of Public Schools fielding the 1957 season at last gave us solid reason to applaud the boys in that vital branch of the game. Not only were there outstanding individuals in the representative matches at Lord's, but the general level was appreciably higher than in previous seasons. Moreover the reports which arrived from cricket masters about their individual school teams were more than usually concerned with fielding.

The improvement was general; ground fielding, catching and throwing which in many recent representative games has been wild enough to exhaust the good temper of the most placid wicket-keeper. For six years Surrey have been winning the County Championship primarily by deadly fielding in support of their magnificent attack. With a certain time lag Public Schools cricket follows the trends in county cricket. And now, when surely the fielding standard in the county game is higher than ever, the boys have profited from the men's example.

The first boy mentioned this year, then, shall be G. Atkins of Dr. Challoner's Grammar School, for on the four days of the representative games he never failed to impress on all his skill as a fielder. Atkins arrived at Lord's well recommended by the runs he had scored for the Club Cricket Conference against M.C.C.. He was anything but a disappointment as a left-handed batsman, but he made a much more lasting impression by his brilliant fielding at cover. If Atkins set the standard the others followed him ably, and not all the fielding skill was concentrated among the eleven who were chosen against Combined Services. P. J. Kippax (Bedford Modern) was a reserve who fielded particularly well in the first of the two matches. If he had extended either of his two highly promising innings as an opening batsman by a few runs, he must have won selection for the second game.

Not only in fielding but in bowling also, recent trends in county cricket left their mark on schoolboy cricket. It is not so long ago that the emphasis in English first-class cricket was placed on pace bowling, following the successes against England of Lindwall, Miller and Johnston. The result has been the fast bowling era of Trueman, Statham, Tyson, Loader, Moss and others. Allowing for the time-lag it was, then, not surprising that the leading school bowlers of 1957 were almost exclusively those of some pace who used the new ball.

There was little spin bowling of class in the sides for the Lord's games. But reports from the schools frequently mentioned promising spinners of ages qualifying them still for the Under 16.

Colts teams. The influence of Lock, Laker and Wardle has reached the younger boys and we may expect a change of bowling emphasis among the selected boys at Lord's in the next year or two.

In the absence of spin it was not surprising that, for once, the batting was clearly superior to the bowling. It was a good year for school batting despite the road accident early in June that put H. C. Blofeld (Eton) out of the game for the rest of the term. Until that event Blofeld was most people's bet as the best schoolboy batsman of the year, and his loss was a grave misfortune not only to Eton.

Happily there were worthy players to offer themselves as candidates for top position in his stead. The two most prominent were C. D. Drybrough, a games player and athlete of wide interests and ability from Highgate, and D. Kirby of St. Peter's, York. Drybrough did most of his good things in the first of the two games at Lord's. His 128, starting when the Southern Schools were 15 for three, was a magnificent piece of sensibly aggressive cricket. By the time he had driven the bowlers of The Rest straight and hard while advancing to 50 in no more than sixty-five minutes the game was turned. If he was stronger on the front foot than the back, Drybrough looked a most excellent school batsman. He had the same aggressive attitude towards batting as did E. R. Dexter while a schoolboy, and he may well develop in the same successful way.

Kirby was a consistently good scorer during the four days. His most attractive stroke was the cover drive, and generally he played in a manner to make comparison between him and Drybrough invidious. Together they may have been the leaders, but they did not leave their fellows far behind. At the youthful age of 16 the Nawab of Pataudi, having spent the term scoring freely for Winchester, made an immediate mark at Lord's, where there was just time at the end of the second day for him to play himself into the representative XI. He had failed in the first innings, and if his second had started half an hour later he might not have been given the chance to play his splendid innings of 71 against Combined Services.

At one time only County Championship matches were arranged so that stumps could be drawn on the last day at 6 p.m., the final half-hour until 6.30 being used only if necessary to obtain a result. Of late years the practice has spread to all manner of matches, in which the players are not similarly pressed for time in the catching of trains to their next playing engagement. It is with some indignation, having probably been deprived of some good cricket, that I ask why the practice has been extended quite unnecessarily to a School trial game at Lord's, in which the result has no significance. That the game started on the second day at 11 a.m. is no argument in favour of stopping half an hour early on a perfect summer's evening, when spectators and batsman alike were enjoying Pataudi's innings. He himself at 27 not out looked appealingly at his team's balcony in the vain hope that someone would decide that the final half-hour was necessary.

A two-day game is all too short to sift the material before choosing the representative side. To sacrifice half an hour needlessly may be unfair to the boys. Two members of the side whose fielding on this occasion was thus cut short have particular cause for complaint. A. W. M. Bain (Fettes) accordingly bowled only nine overs in the match and M. K. S. Shatrushalsinhji only eight. As the latter, a nephew of K. S. Duleepsinhji, came to Lord's as an all-rounder and had no reasonable time for batting in either innings he must have felt that the trial game was much too short.

Having played in two Oxford sides with his father, I was asked how the present holder of the title compared with the first cricketing Nawab of Pataudi. Except that they both were endowed with natural talent and ball sense they are not comparable. The father was physically frail and was essentially a batsman of finesse rather than force, though he was also a fast scorer. His son is built more strongly, and if he shows the delicate touch of his father in the cut strokes, which he plays with obvious relish, he is clearly a more robust batsman. As yet his bat is not so straight as his father's and he takes more chances. In August he played three times for Sussex promisingly, and reports from Hove of his good fielding were particularly pleasing.

Although J. R. Bernard (Clifton) failed in the trial game after an earlier triumph at Lord's against Tonbridge, there were three strong batting candidates for the two opening positions, R. A. C. Luckin (Felsted), Kippax and G. J. Sharman (Lancing). Kippax was perhaps the one who appeared to promise most, and he was the most vigorous batsman of the three. He was also the one who had to be omitted, for the other two scored more heavily. The soundness of Luckin and the undaunted patience of Sharman gained the positions.

At the time I recall muttering unkind things whilst Sharman was taking nearly an hour to reach double figures. But Sharman had his place and his role among the more eager stroke-making batsmen. He himself was a reluctant stroke-maker and largely concealed his ability in that direction, but he was wonderfully patient and watchful. With Atkins the Schools had already six batsmen, and all-rounders considerably extended their batting.

Their stumper, H. S. Cook (Warwick), won his place from I. P. Morton, a neat wicket-keeper from Christ's Hospital, mainly on his superior batting. He was the second player of the same name from Warwick in recent years to represent the Public Schools. Like the earlier one, who was largely a bowler, H. S. Cook batted left-handed. He had the left-hander's typical strokes past cover and to leg, where he was particularly strong, and he scored heavily in both the games at Lord's. Bowlers A. T. C. Allom (Charterhouse) and D. M. Green (Manchester Grammar School) were also batsmen of considerable merit and value.

Of the batsmen who did not win selection against the Services Kippax, who has been already mentioned, and A. R. Day of Aldenham looked the best. Day was miserably unlucky in being run out in his first innings through no fault of his own. In the second innings he was among the first four southerners who fell for 47 on a fast and fiery pitch to some equally fiery bowling.

That pitch was not unlike the one on which the Second Test match two months earlier had come to a distressingly early finish. It knocked up badly on the second day to give the pace bowlers a tremendous advantage. If M.C.C. wish to encourage boy cricketers to bowl spinners, they will not do so by giving them pitches of that sort.

The Rest had just the bowlers for those conditions, and the Southern batsmen were fiercely assailed. C. D. R. Barker (The King's School, Macclesfield) brought the ball round their ribs, and H. G. Owen-Hughes (Shrewsbury) mowed them down at the other end. Owen-Hughes was one of those unusual players who bowl off the wrong foot and whose peculiar action inevitably produces leg cut. On that very responsive pitch he was bowling fast leg-breaks, and until he and Barker began to tire the Southern batsmen were in sore trouble.

In the event Barker was not in the final XI, though he was in the dozen from whom that side was chosen on the morning of the match. I would have been reluctant to leave him out, but in addition to Owen-Hughes both Allom and I. C. Potter (King's School, Canterbury) staked strong claims to inclusion. Potter was the steadiest of the four as well as being the smallest. The others were all tall. Allom was only two inches short of seven feet. He bowled at medium pace, a lively medium, and from his vast height made the ball bounce awkwardly. He may be said to have overcome the disadvantage of excessive height by keeping his pace down. Like Pataudi, Allom is the son of a distinguished father. M. J. C. Allom was one of the best medium-fast bowlers between the wars and bowled for England in Test cricket.

Barker also made good use of his height, and if he was mainly an inswing bowler he showed himself to be a decidedly good one of his type. Taken together the pace bowlers were more than adequate and toiled hard to cover the shortage of good spin. Potentially the best spinner was Drybrough, for he was a left-hander with considerable ability to impart spin, but as yet his bowling lacked variety. The attack was completed in its main ingredients by Green, who had established himself as the pick of the off-spinners.

In a year when the spin was so moderate it was perhaps surprising that A. W. Allen, who had a highly successful season as a slow left-hander at Repton, was not tried at Lord's. But selection of these sides is an uncommonly difficult task and must depend largely on recommendations from the schools. The great need is a preliminary trial, from which, say, the dozen most obvious selections for the Southern Schools v. The Rest match would be excluded. This could be done by cutting out some of the inter-schools matches at Lord's. Though writing as an old boy of a school which would lose its match at Lord's, I must confess to seeing no good reason for any inter-schools match being played there except Eton v. Harrow. I believe that Public Schools cricket would benefit from having more representative and less inter-schools cricket on show.

Two of the best sides of the year were among those who played at Lord's, Clifton with success but Haileybury arriving only to suffer a surprise defeat by Cheltenham. After a depressing start to the season Clifton rallied to become one of the schools' best teams—and a fine fielding one—and played their last ten matches without defeat. For Cheltenham, playing above themselves, the win at Lord's was compensation for disappointing displays in other inter-schools matches. For Haileybury it was anti-climax at the end of a season which had marked them as being among the leaders of Public School cricket. Yet, even in defeat they shaped in the manner of cricketers entitled to success and continually looked worth more than they actually achieved at Lord's.

Of all the year's team performances the best was perhaps that of Winchester. Although they began the season with only two old Colours and habitually meet stronger opposition than the majority, they were unbeaten for the second year running. The Nawab of Pataudi's 851 runs at an average of 65.47 was among the best two or three batting performances on paper at any of the bigger schools. It stood with Drybrough's 706 at 78.44 for Highgate. The next best average at Highgate was only 17.4 and the second aggregate merely 273. As Drybrough's 32 wickets were also the school's highest total his tremendous influence on his team's cricket was obvious.

In the West, Downside, who suffered their only defeat and that by a very narrow margin in the final match, rivalled Clifton. With three bowlers aged 15 taking 103 out of 123 wickets they could contemplate the future with more relish than most. The leading side in the north would seem to have been St. Peter's, York. They, too, with Kirby heading the batsmen, lost only once and won seven of the other 13 games. If Winchester are given first position among the powerful group of Southern Schools, they had obvious rivals in Charterhouse and Haileybury. King's, Canterbury, were another strong and successful side. Eton's season was disrupted by Blofeld's misfortune, and Harrow were no more than an ordinary side worried by slender bowling resources.

Douai went through 1957 unbeaten, and there were others beaten only once, but several of them drew an excessive number of their games even making allowance for ill luck with the weather. Repton were among the single losers. They drew 11 out of 18 games. Radley drew 9 of 15, Rossall 7 of 11, and Malvern also lost only once but drew often.

In East Anglia, Leys began, like Winchester, with only two old Colours and yet developed their players so well that they won six inter-schools matches. They must be counted among the team successes of the summer, and it is clear that there were a number of good sides. It was clear, too, that attention paid to fielding played a notable part in their development.

Every school season produces remarkable individual performances when set against the modest deeds of others in the same sides. The year 1957 was no exception. A. H. Jinnah dominated Epsom cricket in the manner of Drybrough at Highgate with 590 runs for an average of 65.56 and 38 wickets at 10.57 runs each. At Aldenham, Day's average of 49.4 against a next best of 20.87 is support for the impression that he was a player good enough to make a big impression at Lord's with reasonable luck. Kippax had similar success at Bedford Modern, where his 49.5 average was nearly twice as good as that of his nearest rival. Bedford Modern's season was also notable for J. S. Orpin taking 25 wickets at 11.8, for he was only 14 and one of a considerable number of very young left-arm spinners who did well during the summer.

R. M. Prideaux (Tonbridge) was another who dominated his side's batting with an average twice as large as the next one. Even more so did G. Neil-Dwyer prop up the Ruthin batting. His 593 runs gave him an average of 53.9, while none of the others was able to reach 20 an innings.

The heavy scoring of the first four Lancing batsmen, whose total was 2,449, recalls similar scoring at Radley when E. R. Dexter and A. C. Walton were their leading batsmen. No round-up of the season would be complete without mention of a tremendous partnership at Bloxham. Playing against the XL Club, D. N. Adey and C. C. W. Rodgers put on 287 together. And finally there was M. G. Waller's 59 wickets at under 11 runs each for Uppingham. As that is the greatest number ever taken for the School it is a good item on which to end discussion of a decidedly encouraging season.

THE SCHOOLS

* Signifies not out. † Indicates captain.

ALDENHAM SCHOOL

Although an inexperienced side, Aldenham had a successful season against other schools. They had wins against Highgate, Beaumont and Mill Hill to set against defeats by Felsted and Merchant Taylor's. Their captain, A. R. Day, enjoyed a particularly good season and repeatedly carried his side.

ALLHALLOWS SCHOOL

The season at Allhallows was interrupted by a period of quarantine at a time when the team was developing promisingly. The batting generally was thin and the bowling more steady than dangerous. Palmer, the captain, and Rowe were splendid all-rounders.

AMPLEFORTH COLLEGE

At their best Ampleforth were a strong side. The bowling was always good, particularly the left-arm spinners of R. Lorimer, but the batsmen, with the exception of Morris, were unreliable. The side started badly as fielders but reached a high standard before the end of the term, and W. Sparling was outstandingly good.

BEAUMONT COLLEGE

After a disappointing start, when the experienced batsmen were failing, Beaumont improved steadily and became a well-balanced side. The bowlers, headed by Baker and Stevens, were always good and the fielding excellent.

BEDFORD MODERN SCHOOL

Their results were a pleasant surprise to Bedford Modern, for the side was young and generally inexperienced. They played attractive cricket and developed well under an exceptionally good captain in Brannan. While Kippax stood out among the batsmen the leading bowler was Orpin, a left-arm spinner who was only 14.

An inexperienced team were well led by Eldridge who headed the batting and bowling and captained the Rest against Southern Schools at Lord's. The bowling depended mainly on the accurate off-spinners of Eldridge and the excellent leg-break bowling of Cooper, being splendidly supported by lively and dependable fielding.

BISHOP'S STORTFORD COLLEGE

A young side, ably led by Thorogood and often inspired by their opening batsmen, Davies and Hickling, enjoyed a more successful season than in 1956. Hickling is developing into the best left-handed batsman the school has had since the war.

BLOXHAM SCHOOL

Two of the Bloxham defeats followed declarations. The batting was good, especially that of two young players, Adey and Rodgers, who had a record partnership of 287 against the XL Club. The bowling, apart from Carter and Rodgers, was moderate and the catching at times deplorable.

BLUNDELL'S SCHOOL

A powerful batting side at Blundell's lost only to St. Luke's College. With Clarke and Tarrant scoring heavily there were four partnerships of over 100 during the season. In the later matches Harvey won his place in the side at the age of 15 and formed a splendid opening partnership with Tarrant. Though Taylor was effective with his leg-breaks the strength of the bowling did not match that of the batting.

BRIGHTON COLLEGE

The team failed to emulate the unbeaten eleven of 1956 by losing surprisingly to Hurstpierpoint and the Old Brightonians. The most remarkable game was with Christ's Hospital since 556 runs were scored in the day. Lewis, an aggressive left-hander, was again the leading batsman, and Pickering's off-spinners showed great promise.

Canford's season proved that batting alone cannot win matches when the bowling is weak. Outstanding in a strong batting side were Palin and Bown, a powerful striker who hit fourteen 6's for the side.

CHARTERHOUSE SCHOOL

The main strength during a successful season lay in the all-round form of Allom, who bowled accurately at medium pace, was a powerful stroke-player and a fine slip-field. Comer and Sutton were also successful batsmen, and 15-year-old Craig showed much promise. The fielding was good and Levy was a wicket-keeper of great possibilities.

CHELTENHAM COLLEGE

Against club sides the form of the Cheltenham team was consistently good, but the record was marred by disappointing displays in three away school matches. Stutchbury, the leading scorer, was a fine stroke-player, and Prain a particularly promising young batsman. Benke, the captain, who took 48 wickets with off-breaks, was prominent in a good fielding side whose throwing was excellent.

Played 13, Won 4, Lost 6, Drawn 3

CLIFTON COLLEGE

After losing their first five matches, four of them narrowly, Clifton settled down to become probably their best side for several years, with wins against Marlborough, Cheltenham and Tonbridge. Their strength lay in fielding, which greatly helped an accurate slow bowling attack, of which Mathias was the most successful with leg-breaks. Bernard, who captained the side well, was outstanding with the bat and received good support.

CRANBROOK SCHOOL

Cranbrook's team was better than the results, several of which were close, would suggest. If the batting was unreliable with the exception of Fagg, the bowlers allowed no opponents a total of 200 and Barham, a young leg-spinner, did particularly well.

CRANLEIGH SCHOOL

Considering Cranleigh had six old Colours the season proved disappointing with only one win. Overall, the batting lacked determination and the opening bowlers, Hutchins and Hunter, well as they performed, were overworked in an attack lacking a spinner. Missed catches proved costly.

DOWNSIDE SCHOOL

In one of their most successful years Downside's only defeat was by one wicket in the last over of the game. The leading batsman, Kavanagh, passed 50 five times and twice went on beyond 100, while the attacking batting of their captain, Chignell, set the side a splendid example. The three leading bowlers, Pearson who is fast, and spinners Sadler and Fletcher, were all aged 15. The fielding was good.

THE EDINBURGH ACADEMY

The Edinburgh Academy had a successful season. Most of the side could make runs, six bowlers shared the wickets, and the fielding was safe. Wins were recorded over Fettes, Loretto, Strathallan and Watson's, and each of the defeats was by a narrow margin—seven runs by Glenalmond and two wickets, following a declaration, by a club side. The centenary match with Merchiston was unfortunately ruined by rain. This, the oldest inter-school match in Scotland, has been a regular fixture since 1857. For some years it was played twice each season and the number of matches which have taken place is 122. Of these the Academy have won 50, Merchiston 41, and 31 have been drawn.

ETON COLLEGE

An accident on June 7 deprived Eton of their captain and outstanding cricketer, H. C. Blofeld. E. J. Lane-Fox took over the captaincy and J. Baskervyle-Glegg kept wicket respectably well. But Blofeld's loss affected the team's morale in June. The batting was strong, and Clegg made a notable advance as an opener to support Lane-Fox, while Burrows, Leonard and Baring all played usefully. The bowling depended too much on the fast-medium out-swingers of Scott, and the off-spin of the 15-year-old Fellowes. The fielding was good, Dunning, Burrows, Ayer and Goodier being outstanding.

HABERDASHERS' ASKE'S SCHOOL

For the first time in many seasons the school enjoyed reliable batting, but an opening bowling weakness kept the side from genuine success. English was a promising young medium pacer, and late in the season the attack was strengthened when Scofield found his form with leg-breaks and googlies.

HAILEYBURY AND I.S.C.

Not until their last game, against Cheltenham at Lord's, was an inter-school match lost. Previously Tonbridge, Bedford and Uppingham had been beaten in the course of a splendid season. The ingredients of success were the enthusiastic leadership of Lofting, the willingness of the batsmen to attack and an admirable fighting spirit. It was a team without any outstanding players whose fielding was always keen and their throwing above average.

HARROW SCHOOL

For Harrow 1957 was a season of team building, complicated by lack of form of various old "flannels," and the side was a long time settling down. The batting possibilities were never quite fulfilled. Vargas, naturally a fine aggressive player, took a long time to get going after breaking a leg in the football season. Lockett compensated for lack of strokes by becoming sheet anchor in an inexperienced side. Nicholson looked a good player when on the attack on a fast wicket but had limitations of technique. Foster showed considerable promise and verve for the future. The bowling depended greatly upon Champniss's leg-breaks and googlies but he never acquired accuracy.

HEREFORD CATHEDRAL SCHOOL

Form in the first six matches was disappointing; but, thanks to the fine batting of Brown, and to an effective fast attack, the side gained confidence and won six of their last seven matches.

HIGHGATE SCHOOL

After a good start Highgate were disappointing in inter-schools matches, though their defeats were by narrow margins. Drybrough was outstanding as batsman and also the best bowler, while Webster, son of the former Cambridge Blue and Middlesex batsman, was a promising medium-paced bowler. The season was notable for the splendid throwing in the field. Garner made superb catches, and Drybrough, Plummer and Holland were outstandingly good fielders.

HURSTPIERPOINT COLLEGE

Hurstpierpoint had an improved season with a young side. The batting was generally more consistent than in recent years, and the opening bowlers, Pollock and Williams, were a very good pair, though the rest of the attack was thin.

KING'S SCHOOL, BRUTON

The team's strength lay in the bowling, a good opening attack by Tucker and Maffey being well supported by varied spin-bowling, particularly that of Pinco, who was perhaps the most promising off-spin bowler the School has had for years. The main burden of the batting was carried by Gifford and Maffey, a 14-year-old left-handed all-rounder.

KING'S SCHOOL, ROCHESTER

King's School, Rochester, were unbeaten by other schools, winning six and drawing two of the eight school matches. The batting of Reader, the captain, and Burren was impressive both by virtue of its power and consistence. Aided by alert, competent fielding, the bowlers, especially Spyer, a fast right-hander, were equal to their task. The wicket-keeping of Webster, the vice-captain, was often outstandingly good. Six old Colours remain as the nucleus of the 1958 side.

The team played well together and owed much to the captaincy of Bevan. The bowling was steady and better than results suggested, but the batting was uncertain.

MALVERN COLLEGE

Malvern were at their best when set to score against the clock. Davies led his side well and set an excellent example in the field. The batting feature was the steady improvement of Wilcox, while Shatrushalyasinhji, a nephew of K. S. Duleepsinhji, made good use of his ability to bowl off-breaks at an unusually speedy pace.

MANCHESTER GRAMMAR SCHOOL

With only three regular members of the 1956 side available, Manchester Grammar School experienced a moderate season. Green was the most accomplished and successful batsman. Humphries and Hamner, the opening bowlers, worked hard and Green and Hambleton gave most support as change bowlers.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE

Weak bowling, for which good fielding and throwing could not compensate, largely accounted for a disappointing season. If the batting did not come up to expectations Morris and Pyemont shaped well on occasions, and Goodfellow played attractively. Goodfellow, the off-spinner, was the leading bowler, and at the end of the season S. H. Compton, a late arrival in the side who took nine wickets for 157, strengthened the opening attack.

OUNDLE SCHOOL

Oundle began badly by losing their first three matches on wet pitches. Minney, the best batsman, scored two early centuries and received steady support from Reddaway. Stephens showed promise in his first year. Saul (the captain), medium-paced left-arm, was the spearhead of the attack in which Crabbe was useful with the new ball and Wilson bowled leg-breaks skilfully.

REPTON SCHOOL

In the 400th year of the school, Repton lost only one match, by three wickets to the Derbyshire Club and Ground. Vaughan led a particularly young side admirably. The batting was somewhat brittle, but Warner's last four innings brought him 300 runs and Vaughan made runs when wanted, though on the whole he had a disappointing year. The bowling, supported by excellent fielding, was invariably accurate. Allen, left-arm slow, was the most successful and has two more years in the side.

ROSSALL SCHOOL

A strong batting side was not dismissed entirely until the last match against Sedbergh, but the bowling depended too much on Reece. In his fifth year in the team Reece bowled his in-swingers untiringly and economically.

RUGBY SCHOOL

After a slow start Rugby developed into a good side in July. T. B. L. Coghlan had a disappointing season, and Colville had a lean time between his good start and good finish to the term. Cuthbertson was a highly promising all-rounder at the age of 15.

RYDAL SCHOOL

Rydal ended their season with a great win by ten wickets against the M.C.C. The medium-pace Thomas with seven for 22 had the M.C.C. out for 70, and the captain, C. D. Pighills, and Fish hit off the runs. Throughout the season Dale batted with great resolution and obvious signs of class.

ST. BEES SCHOOL

Results tended to flatter St. Bees. There was inadequate batting support for the Hewitson brothers, who scored nearly half the runs, and the spin bowlers, Bell and Boulter, suffered in the same way, while the fielding fell below the standard of previous years.

The team failed on several occasions to exploit a favourable position. Matten scored consistently throughout the season, his 102 not out against Wilson's at The Oval being a particularly fine performance.

ST. EDWARD'S SCHOOL, OXFORD

Some of the most promising cricketers in the side will still be available in 1958, including Trotman, the most likely batsman, Davis, a left-arm slow bowler, Appleby and Tyacke. Dale was not only a good captain but also a fielder in a class on his own.

ST. LAWRENCE COLLEGE

The two most talented batsmen, de Saram and Prior, in a well-balanced side remain for next season. Both were essentially attacking players though as yet with defensive flaws. Thomas led the side well and made good use of his left-arm googly type bowling. Hodder's defensive batting was of much value to the side.

ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL

Although Neate and Sperryn laid the foundation for numerous good scores, the bowling was not good enough to support their excellent efforts. Francis, who was quick and persevering, was the only class bowler. Both Neate and Francis remain for next season, when there is the prospect of a better record.

SHERBORNE SCHOOL

A young, inexperienced side had a poor season. The batting relied too much on Brookes, who had a fine record, and the bowling on the left-arm spin of Curtis and the off-breaks of Yeldham. Pegg kept wicket excellently.

SHREWSBURY SCHOOL

Weak batting inevitably produced a sorry record. It fell away badly after a promising start to the term, and the individual batsmen lost confidence in themselves. Happily the fielding was excellent and the opening bowling of Owen-Hughes was outstanding. His 50 wickets represented a high-class performance. Macaulay and Holden gave him good support.

SOLIHULL SCHOOL

The captain, Stratford, and Lea usually gave Solihull a good start, but the middle batting was unreliable. The bowling was fair and was supported by keen fielding, but the side lacked an opener of real pace.

TONBRIDGE SCHOOL

With better batting support for Prideaux, Tonbridge would have had a really good side. Time and again a balanced attack gave the batsmen chances which they did not take. Meredith at medium-pace and Hudson, a leg-spinner, bowled particularly well. Prideaux, a mature player, made runs consistently.

TRENT SCHOOL

Trent's record barely did them justice, for they narrowly failed to win four of the drawn games. Norgrove, a stylish and aggressive opener, was particularly noticeable as a newcomer to the side. The batting generally was good, and Blakeley, fast and accurate, was the spearpoint of a useful attack.

TRINITY COLLEGE, GLENALMOND

On hard wickets the eleven were unbeaten until June 18, but on the softer pitches later the batting became unsound. The spin bowling was effective, particularly that of Macpherson, the fielding and throwing uniformly good, and the wicket-keeping of C. H. Kennedy excellent. He caught 11 and stumped 11.

Wallasey had their best post-war season. Two left-handers, Brown and Watkins, headed the batting. Watkins was also an outstanding cover-point, and at the wicket Brown had more than 20 successes. ## WELLINGTON COLLEGE

A team of all-round ability, in which seven batsmen played innings of more than 60, performed admirably after recovering from the shock of losing the first two matches. The old colours, Yeldham, Robertson, Pavey and Stephenson, all did well, and among the wins was one by 15 runs against Eton.

Spry, the captain of whom much was hoped as a left-handed batsman and off-break bowler, had a disappointing season, and his team lacked confidence in themselves. ## WINCHESTER COLLEGE

Though starting with only two members of the 1956 side, Winchester went through a second season unbeaten. The outstanding player was the Nawab of Pataudi with his 851 runs, and Jefferson was the find of the season. At 15 he made 135 in his first inter-school match. The bowling became more and more steady as the season progressed, and Charlton's leg-breaks were particularly successful against other schools. The side was well led by Dunlop. Four out of five inter-school matches were won.

SHREWSBURY v. UPPINGHAM

At Shrewsbury, June 11, 12. Shrewsbury won by 18 runs. Except for a brief period on the first afternoon, the pitch gave little help to bowlers. Yet so rife were batting failures that forty wickets fell for an aggregate of 274 runs. Ker played pluckily in both innings for Shrewsbury, as did Kenyon for Uppingham.

WINCHESTER v. ETON

At Winchester, June 28, 29. Drawn. Set 156 to get in an hour and a half, Eton did not attempt the task. Winchester began by losing half their wickets for 67. Then Jefferson and Woolley began a recovery by adding 57 and Wright and Charlton hit freely in an eighth wicket stand of 68. Eton batted carefully but consistently, but not till the last pair were together did they establish a lead of 10 runs. Charlton bowled leg-breaks cleverly. Efforts to force the pace cost Winchester wickets in the second innings, but an unbroken partnership of 76 by Woolley and Wright enabled them to declare.
