

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN 1963

By E. M. WELLINGS

We should neither be surprised nor dismayed that 1963 was not a vintage year for Public Schools cricket. Booms do not last for ever. Four years, I am told, is a good period for a boom on the Stock Exchange. The slump that follows is habitually of briefer duration. We may confidently hope that a similar cycle will govern Public Schools cricket. Recent years were particularly good, and perhaps the falling-off noticed in 1963 was serious only by comparison with their lofty standard. At least, if the batting and bowling were less notable, the fielding was excellent. Every failing in the play of the young is readily excused if the fielding standard is high. Looking back to the lean years following the war, I recall much slovenly fielding. There was none of that at Lord's this year when the representative players were paraded.

The match between the Southern Schools and The Rest was still in its infancy, The Rest total merely in the sixties, and already R. M. C. Gilliat of Charterhouse, B. H. White of King's, Taunton, and T. A. Peirce of Oratory had made splendid catches. Gilliat's was an amazing left handed catch as he pelted from mid-off to extra cover to remove J. N. Sands of Edinburgh Academy. Peirce later was himself victim of splendid fielding, when D. Bailey (Malvern) ran him out from mid-off. In the individual School sides also the fielding standard was high. Most reports from the cricket masters, though brief, contained references to good work in the field. A headline from The Times read "Magnificent Fielding an Aid to Uppingham Success".

The batting standard was lower than during the past few years. Much of the bowling was decidedly ordinary. But none who appreciate the value and importance of good fielding will dismiss the season as a failure. Perhaps the batting standard would not so clearly have been seen to have dropped, if some of the more notable players had played as anticipated at Lord's. Gilliat, who had been an accomplished batsman in the representative games a year earlier, made only six runs in three innings. Yet, he had batted well enough for Charterhouse, scoring 560 runs for an average of 40 and leading the outstanding side of the year.

Charterhouse won eight and lost only two matches. That was a superb record for a School with such a powerful fixture list. Only one of their illustrious opponents scored as many as 200 against them, and against School opposition they were murderous. Eton were bowled out for 109, Winchester for 84 and Bradfield for 67.

Harrow might have been dismissed even more cheaply, for they were saved by time at 48 for 7. The chief executioner was A. H. Barker, the slow left-hander, who had already in 1962 won a Public Schools cap. Nagging accuracy and flight were his main weapons. He was still too open chested to be a vicious spinner, but if he could overcome that handicap he could become an uncommonly good slow left-hander. Wilfred Rhodes might not have approved altogether of his action, but he would have welcomed his field setting. In these days of split fields it was grand to watch a left arm spinner attacking the off stump accurately and bowling strictly to seven fielders on that side of the wicket.

Barker took 55 wickets for Charterhouse at 12.09 each, a splendid performance not to be belittled in any measure by the generally damp pitches of a miserably wet summer, which furnished an obvious reason for the slow development of players and teams generally. Another Carthusian who contributed greatly to their splendid season was R. M. Illingworth by his all-round play. He scored 549 runs with an average of 54.9, and his fast bowling, despite slow pitches, landed him in top position among the bowlers also. His 14 wickets cost only 11.78 runs each. Charterhouse successfully assailed their wretched victims with both fast and slow bowling.

Gilliat might have been expected to reveal himself as the number one batsman of the year at Lord's. Failing him I would not like to venture into the difficulties of picking that player. Certainly the most exhilarating performance was that of N. C. Pretzlik, an Etonian who was chosen mainly for his pace bowling. Though he bowled from a promisingly good action, it was with the bat that he shone, and brightly, in the big matches. His average for Eton had been merely 21.58, and he batted number 8 for the Southern Schools. The total was merely 63 when he arrived, and the 134 of The Rest was looking unexpectedly formidable. Pretzlik, who bowled right and batted left-handed, did what few others had done that day; he recognised a half-volley and knew what to do with it. His hitting, not slogging by any means, was splendid as he thumped his uninhibited way to 52 out of 70, hitting a couple of 6's on the way. Altogether he hit 64 out of 86 and put genuine excitement into the game and into the spectators. His partners were G. R. J. Roope, the young Bradfield all-rounder, and Barker, who made 41 and looked much better than a number 9.

It was fitting that Barker should play a considerable part in putting The Rest's total in something approaching its true perspective, for he was the main bowling cause of it by taking 7 for 43. As a batsman his defence looked sound, and he did not lack strokes. He was particularly strong on the leg side, where he hit two 6's, but he could also drive straight. He and Pretzlik carried on by batting well for the chosen Schools side against Combined Services. Pretzlik trounced the adult bowling as severely as the schoolboy attack of The Rest. Again he had to rescue his side, who were 123 for 5, and he did so in partnership with R. J. Pelham (Harrow) in the same robust manner. He spent only ninety-five minutes scoring 90 not out, and he clouted seventeen 4's. Not many innings as good have been played in these matches. Barker did not bat in that innings, but his 24 in the second was the second highest score, and without it the Schools, who had tumbled to 103 for 7, would surely not have held the Services to a draw. Thus he added a second important innings to the 15 wickets he took in the four days. Barker and Pretzlik were the outstanding school performers of the representative matches.

Pelham, too, was successful, more so than was apparently expected by some Harrovians, who were perhaps put off by his crouching style. Here was a tall fellow who bent himself almost double over his bat. But there was much merit in his stolid and seemingly imperturbable play. His bat was very straight, his head was well over the line of the ball, and he drove particularly well to the on. He played two sound innings to win his Public Schools place and then was the bulwark that made Pretzlik's act of violent rescue possible against the Services. His 95, ending with a stand of 85 in partnership with Pretzlik, held a faltering Schools innings together.

It is rare for a boy from a Scottish School to win a place in the final XI. In 1963, J. N. Sands of Edinburgh Academy, for whom he made 835 runs and averaged 64.23, gained that distinction deservedly. He was sound and patient and possessed one of the straightest back lifts I have ever seen. His bat just about came up over the middle and leg stumps, as the text books advise, though that advice has rarely been followed, even by Hobbs and Bradman. From a straight pick-up Sands certainly prospered at Lord's with three successful innings out of four.

One of the batsmen I fancied particularly, N. J. Chapman of Felsted, was not chosen for the Schools XI, but I retained my liking for his cricket. He was a powerfully built player who, like Pretzlik, batted left and bowled right-handed. His batting looked as cultured as that of anyone on The Rest side in the first innings when he and Sands were the only players to reach 30. J. D. Smith, the other representative of a successful Felsted team and also an all-rounder who bowled left-handed at medium pace, had an unhappy batting match. Perhaps he was overcome by the occasion, for his batting was suspicious and pawky, as though he did not expect to receive any ball that he could punish. For their School side, whose record was nine wins against three defeats, they performed splendidly.

They were responsible for nearly 1,300 runs and 77 wickets at modest cost.

D. Bailey did comparatively little with the bat in the two matches, but his method and intentions were admirable. He was a strong front foot player, his footwork good, and he was more than ready to advance down the pitch to challenge a slow bowler. However, he was in the final XI, and perhaps his beautiful ground fielding was a deciding factor in his choice. D. A. Ashworth, who made 653 including two centuries and averaged 54.41 for Uppingham and was well regarded in the Middlesex second XI, was to be somewhat disappointing. He played the hook stroke particularly well, but in playing other strokes, when he should have been swinging the bat straight, he had a dangerous bias towards the leg side. He was not alone in this, and here we see yet another bad habit seeping down from the higher realms of English cricket to infect the young. Playing across the line of the ball, fatal so often against the West Indies bowling, was surely the worst fault of our first-class batting in 1963. It was noteworthy that most runs were made during the four days at Lord's by three boys whose virtues were traditional—or, as some would have it now, old fashioned. Pelham and Sands kept their heads down and played straight. Pretzlik pushed his front leg towards the pitch of the ball and swung his bat truly through the half-volleys. Many more such deliveries are bowled than most batsmen will admit.

G. R. J. Roope, of Bradfield, promised more with his good looking off side strokes than he actually achieved, but he was obviously a well groomed cricketer. Apart from Chapman, P. A. Baker (Cheltenham) appeared the most polished batsman who did not win through to the second game. His front foot play was admirable, and his school record in an unsuccessful side suggested that he was worth a position higher than seventh and eighth in the two innings of a Rest team of moderate strength. He averaged 100 with an aggregate of 700. T. B. Russell of Brentwood was a smooth left handed opener, possessing attractive strokes which were played on this occasion too gently to be effective. He, like Sands whom he partnered, needed to pay more attention to running between wickets. A. P. de Freitas (Stonyhurst) was a curious mixture at Lord's, clumsily awkward in defence and yet revealing one or two pleasing scoring strokes. Peirce had not revealed his quality when he was brilliantly run out, and D. F. Toft (Tonbridge) only briefly indicated his sound batting method. For once the Channel Islands were represented, by P. V. Sarre of Guernsey. If there were weaknesses in his play here and there, he certainly recognised a half-volley and swung his considerable weight against it.

Sarre was also a medium-paced bowler with a goodish action, one of numerous all-rounders on show. One of the most interesting was White. On the first day I made a note about him which read "diminutive off-spinner, slow, high and erratic". A day later, when he had conquered his tendency to be erratic, he bowled four overs for two runs and four wickets and brought the second innings of The Rest to an abrupt end by doing the hat-trick. White then shared an unfinished opening partnership of 88 with Pelham and completed the defeat of The Rest. His batting was neat and studious, and at times there was surprising force in his front foot strokes. As yet he did not appear to hook or cut to any extent, and for a small man those strokes are essential to keep his score moving at a fair rate against bowlers who know their job. If he intends to rely on strokes played off the front foot, he must add several inches to his height.

Pretzlik, Barker, Chapman, Smith, Bailey, Peirce, Sarre, Roope, J. L. Hutton (Repton) and, though he batted number 11 for the South, P. R. Goodwin (Lancing) were other all-rounders. Bailey had more success with his off breaks—5 for 50 for the Rest—than his batting, but, Barker apart, the spin bowling generally was relatively as weak as it has become in first-class cricket under the much-to-be-deplored modern conditions. Pitches excessively grassed have put the emphasis on seam bowling and are, in my view, at the root of most ills from which the game is suffering.

There were ample seamers among the boy bowlers, though they also were as a whole of modest calibre. The best of them was Goodwin, whose 45 wickets for Lancing had cost only 11 runs each. To that he added a batting average of 32, but in his solitary innings at Lord's his only partner succumbed before he could make his mark. His bowling was curious. According to the book his action was entirely wrong. His chest was fully exposed to the batsman at the moment of delivery, and as he skipped to the line he bowled almost off the wrong foot. Yet wrong foot bowlers, particularly on first encounter, have something peculiarly disturbing to batsmen. There is an element of surprise, but beyond that such bowlers are apt to bring the ball off the pitch more quickly than the batsman expects. They also tend to make it nip back from the off. In the four days Goodwin by such effective methods took 11 wickets, a total exceeded only by Barker.

Roope's action was good, but after a good start he became erratic. He left Lord's having given an impression more of promise for the future than of present achievement, though during the term he made 582 runs and took 33 wickets for Bradfield. The only bowler with no pretensions to being an all-rounder was a second representative of Brentwood, I. R. Acfield. For his effects he relied solely on his steady medium paced inswingers, for honesty compels the admission that he was the one boy on view whose fielding looked in need of grooming. Sooner or later it was to be expected that he would be followed to Lord's by a younger brother, D. L. Acfield who bowls off breaks and is reputed to bat and field more effectively than I. R. The two brothers and the two Russells helped Brentwood to a most successful season, during which 12 wins were set against a single defeat. The Acfields shared 104 wickets cheaply, of which the elder had 58 at 8.28 each. The Russells were unrelated.

Many school sides in 1963 found the going rough and difficult. One cricket master expressed a wish to "draw a veil over the season". Yet Charterhouse, Brentwood and Felsted were not alone in finding success in the chill damp of the 1963 summer. Eton, whose bowling averages were headed by the latest googly version of the Robins family, won six times and lost only twice. They could thus regard the Charterhouse tragedy as one of those things that happen in the best organised families. Unlike his father and brother G. R. V. Robins bowled left-handed, but like them he used unorthodox spin, chinamen and googlies, and his bag was 25 wickets, average 14. Hurstpierpoint claimed their best school side for years, winning seven and losing three games, and Blundell's were unbeaten in 14 matches. They thrived on the all-round cricket of P. R. Price and R. S. Davis, who together made more than 1,300 runs and took 48 wickets. The King's School, Canterbury, also went through the term unbeaten. Bolton School, for whom D. W. Brett took 65 wickets, won 10 times and lost on only two occasions.

Even more impressive were Millfield, who did not lose at all and won 13 of their 18 games. R. K. Paull scored 1,009 runs in ten completed and eight unfinished innings. Yet another successful team were Tonbridge, who have long since recovered from the slump that followed the departure of Colin Cowdrey. They lost only once, and for the fourth year running they were unbeaten by any school side. Their only conquerors were the South African touring party. D. R. Aers and Toft had batting averages close to 50, and Aers with left arm spin further took 36 wickets. Their cricket was superior by far to the work of the mathematician who assembled their figures. Most of the Tonbridge averages submitted to Wisden were wrong, patently wrong to the merest glance on occasions, as when 22 wickets for 237 runs emerged as an average of 15.3. Alas, the maths of many schools in this context continue faulty, except in the Grammar Schools, who seldom fail to do their long division sums accurately.

In Scotland, Strathallan stood out on their own with what they consider the best side in the School's history. They played ten inter-school matches and won nine of them. Only Loretto managed to hold them to a draw. It took a county side, Perthshire, to inflict on them their only defeat. Quite obviously they played some stirring cricket, for twice A. J. Harvey-Walker hit a century before lunch. His contribution was considerable, 605 runs average 55 and 32 wickets average 9.18, and A. J. Fleming's 62 wickets constituted a School record.

Along with good fielding in the schools went good wicket-keeping. Of the two boys at Lord's, A. W. Dyer of Mill Hill established himself as the better against I. E. Ferris of Rydal, who had already enjoyed experience in Minor County cricket. Ferris began well but became ragged, as though suddenly afflicted by staleness. Many thought D. W. W. Norris of Harrow better than either, but he was perhaps set aside for another year, being younger than Dyer, who was also commended by his batting. Dyer's 364 runs represented more than one-third of Mill Hill's aggregate. On figures the most impressive stumper was C. S. J. Coley, the Cheltenham captain, who helped to dismiss 28 batsmen in 10 games.

There were other notable features of a school season which was not altogether beaten by the weather. A match between St. Dunstan's and Surrey Colts produced 522 runs in a single day's play and a win for the school. A remarkable contrast occurred in the match between Royal Grammar School, Newcastle, and Sir William Turner's School, Coatham. On a soft, dead pitch Newcastle made 131 in two hours, thirty-five minutes and allowed Coatham's batsmen two hours, twenty-five minutes. In that long time they amassed only 14 runs and lost eight wickets! Two bowlers had remarkable figures—H. M. Dyson 5 for 1 in 18 overs, A. J. Coulson 2 for 1 in 15 overs. Sir William's pupils successfully concealed their spirit of enterprise.

Three more individual performances by players not selected for the matches at Lord's deserve attention. C. P. Marks hit four centuries and averaged 74.9 in 10 completed innings for Worksop, who gave Philip Sharpe to the representative Schools team and later to Yorkshire and England. Pocklington, who have also sent good players to Lord's recently, had a boy aged 15, C. Johnson, at the top of both their batting and bowling averages. Johnson was a bowler of leg breaks and googlies. For Radley, R. G. M. Finn scored 747 runs and also headed the bowling figures with his 26 wickets.

Mention must also be made of the enterprise shown by Millfield and Nottingham High School in sending their teams to tour against schools outside their area. One way and another there was quite a lot of good to be said about 1963. The weather may have been discouraging, the standard of play below that of recent years, and the maths horrible, but a school term which produces 522 runs in a day's play does not deserve to have a veil drawn entirely over it.

CHARTERHOUSE SCHOOL

Powerful bowling, against which only one side scored as many as 200, was the main factor in an outstandingly successful season, containing convincing wins against Eton, Winchester, Bradfield and Westminster. Barker's 55 wickets was a school record, and with R. M. C. Gilliat and R. M. Illingworth he formed the foundation of the successes.

Played 13, Won 8, Lost 2, Drawn 3, Abandoned 2

DOWNSIDE SCHOOL

Downside owed much to the off-spin bowling of R. M. Michell and the fast out-swingers of R. F. Thompson. Though pitches were mostly too slow to encourage him, Thompson bowled with consistent success and took eight for 17 in 17 overs against Kingswood School.

THE EDINBURGH ACADEMY

No batsmen has scored so many runs for Edinburgh Academy as J. N. Sands, whose aggregate in four years is almost 2,000. His 835 total in 1963 has only once been exceeded in a season, by K. W. Marshall in the thirties.

EPSOM COLLEGE

Epsom were unbeaten in School matches. Their strength lay in consistent batting far down the order and splendid fielding. W. G. Campbell played two particularly good attacking innings, including a century hit before lunch.

ETON COLLEGE

Had the weather not prevented Eton from exploiting their apparently unassailable positions against Winchester and Harrow, their record would have been impressive, even if it included a heavy defeat by Charterhouse. A strong team owed most to the batting of D. Calvert-Smith and M. V. C. Williams, the left arm googly bowling of G. R. V. Robins and the opening bowling of N. C. Pretzlik.

Played 16, Won 6, Lost 2, Drawn 8

KING'S SCHOOL, CANTERBURY

A well-balanced side was not only unbeaten, but it finished all its drawn matches favourably placed to win. At fifteen J. R. Kilbee headed the batting averages. In the field the pace of S. S. Barker and R. P. S. Masterton-Smith and the leg spin of P. J. Catrall were so effective that only one total as high as 200 was scored against them. Masterton-Smith took six for 12 in 21 overs against St. Lawrence College and seven for 22, including a hat-trick against Highgate.

STRATHALLAN SCHOOL

Strathallan's captain, A. J. Harvey-Walker, contributed largely to the School's best ever season. While scoring 139 against Merchiston and 179 not out against Glenalmond he reached 100 before lunch on each occasion. Of ten inter-school matches nine were won and the other, against Loretto, was drawn. A. J. Fleming's 62 wickets were a school record.

TONBRIDGE SCHOOL

Although starting with only three old colours Tonbridge were unbeaten by any other school for the fourth year running. Strong batting, conspicuously from D. P. Toft and D. R. Aers, was unexpectedly well supported by good bowling. Two young spinners, the left handed Aers and F. J. Whidborne, a leg spinner, were the basis of that strength.

CHARTERHOUSE v. ETON

At Charterhouse, June 11. Charterhouse won by 184 runs. The match was remarkable for a fine innings by Illingworth, whose 167 not out revived memories of the 183 not out made by P. B. H. May and the 173 not out by E. J. Craig, also against Eton in previous games. Barker caused a surprising collapse by Eton after they had been 63 for one.

HARROW v. WINCHESTER

At Harrow, June 11. Drawn. After capturing three Winchester wickets for 35 in an hour, the Harrow attack faded. Poor ground fielding and several missed catches helped Kingsbury and Craig in their task of recovery. Pilbrow aided Winchester's cause with some hard hitting after the fourth wicket partnership had been broken and Scott declared at 240 for five. Left two and three-quarter hours in which to win, Harrow were given a grand start by Pelham, but once he was out the innings slumped and the match ended quietly in a draw.

WINCHESTER v. ETON

At Winchester, June 28, 29. Drawn, rain ending the match at lunch on the second day. Winchester, sent in, reached the 70's for the loss of only two wickets but collapsed after rain had enlivened the pitch. Robins, left arm slow, caused most trouble and finished with seven wickets for 31 in only 59 deliveries. Eton, too, had their worries, but Braithwaite and Richardson added 56 runs without being parted on the second morning before the Eton captain declared. Then a storm swept the ground.

SOUTH AFRICAN SCHOOLS IN ENGLAND

By CHARLES BURTON

The first South African Schools side to visit England, sponsored by the South African Nuffield Schools Overseas Cricket Fund, to which Cricket enthusiasts in South Africa and Rhodesia had generously subscribed enjoyed a most successful tour during June and July. The fact that of 21 matches played, ten were won, nine drawn and two lost did scant justice to so formidable a side. Inclement weather was responsible for the drawn games while the two defeats were by the Forty Club, captained by P. B. H. May who had with him four other Test players, R. Benaud, W. R. Endean, D. J. McGlew and A. R. Gover and by a strong Oxford Authentics side in the first match of the tour, played in most dismal weather conditions.

On the other hand, clear cut victories were gained over five Public Schools, Charterhouse, who had trounced Eton the previous week, after declaring at 293 for five, were dismissed for 101 and beaten by six wickets on a drying pitch; Tonbridge were dismissed for 124 and beaten by six wickets; Radley went down by 92 runs after the South Africans had declared 254 for five; Malvern were dismissed for 73 in reply to the South Africans' 222 for eight declared; Wellington, put out for 108, were beaten by six wickets, and, most devastating of all, Winchester were dismissed for 36 and 131 against which the South Africans scored 200 for one—all in one day's cricket! The Canadian Schools were also ruthlessly dealt with at Lord's, being put out for 106 after the South Africans had declared at 274 for five.

In other matches, one particularly impressive performance was against a strong side raised by Mr. R. J. O. Meyer, Headmaster of Millfield School, with H. Gimblett, former England and Somerset batsman as captain and including R. Gilchrist, the West Indian fast bowler. Meyer's side declared at 225 for seven, leaving the South Africans just under three hours to get the runs. Yet the runs were obtained with four wickets and twenty-five minutes to spare. In four matches against County Second Elevens, Hampshire, Lancashire, Warwickshire and Nottinghamshire the South Africans were also seen to good advantage and came near to winning all four. They also had the better of a game against a strong side raised by the Commandant of the Duke of York's Royal Military School, Dover, which included D. J. McGlew and W. R. Endean, and also R. White, the Cambridge Blue.

The touring side proved a well balanced one and moreover had a purposeful approach to the game. The batsmen were always looking for runs, the captain, B. A. Richards (Durban High School) who had already earned high praise for his brilliant performances in South Africa the previous winter, was almost in a class of his own, two memorable innings being 106 (one 6 and nine 4's) in an hour and fifty-one minutes against Eton, and 79 (one 6 and eleven 4's) in seventy-six minutes against Hampshire II. The vice-captain, 16-year-old M. J. Proctor (Hilton College), also looked a batsman with a big future, being at his best when his side were in trouble (a rare occasion). Thus against Radley, going in with four wickets down for only 46 runs, he hit 148 (100 of which were in boundaries) in two and quarter hours, while against Notts II at Trent Bridge, with the first three wickets down for only 9, Proctor proceeded to score 130 not including twenty 4's in three hours, ten minutes. Most of the others players were good batsmen while G. Watson (Potchefstroom Boys H.S.) proved himself a powerful hitter. He sent three balls out of the ground against the M.C.C. Young Professionals, and finished the match against Meyer's XI with three 6's into the adjoining tennis courts.

There was no lack of variety in the bowling, with Watson, M. J. Smythman (Michaelhouse), A. G. Van Wyk (St. Andrew's Coll.), and K. I. Deutchmann (Dale Coll.) providing the pace and G. N. Ridley (Milton School), R. E. T. Morris (Rondebosch Boys H.S.), M. B. Heath (Durban H.S.) and H. M. Ackerman (Dale Coll.) the spin. Ridley, who had proved most successful as slow left-hander with the Rhodesian Fawns in England the previous summer, was seen at his best against Winchester (four for 9), Charterhouse (five for 29), Malvern (six for 22) and the Canadian Schools (six for 30). Morris (who was only 16) was most impressive with his off spinners. Against Notts II he took five for 23 and four for 60 and against Charterhouse five for 21.

The side brought three good wicket keepers, B. V. T. Surtees (St. Andrew's Grahamstown), T. D. Cullinan (St. Andrew's Coll.), and Richards, while the fielding, particularly the throwing-in, was of a very high standard. A marked weakness, and a costly one at times, was the running between the wickets. Finally the boys were fortunate in being under an able administrator and organiser as Mr. L. C. W. Theobald, Cricket Master at Durban High School. They also profited from the shrewd counsels of D. J. McGlew who assisted in the tour Management.

WINCHESTER COLLEGE v. SOUTH AFRICAN SCHOOLS

At Winchester, July 4. South Africans won by an innings and 33 runs. This, the last fixture against schools, was certainly the most successful. Sent in to bat, Winchester collapsed against some hostile bowling by Watson followed by accurate spin bowling from Ridley and Heath and the whole side were out for 36—Winchester's lowest score for over fifty years. Ackerman and Smithyman, normally five and six in the South Africans' side, opened on this occasion, and batted with such confidence that they made 196 in two and a quarter hours before Smithyman was bowled. Four runs later, when Ackerman reached his hundred, which included one 6 and thirteen 4's, the South Africans declared. Starting their second innings 164 runs behind, Winchester lost their first six wickets for 51 to the spin bowling of Heath, and though Craig and Maclagan shared a stand of 62 the rest of the side again collapsed against the varied attack of Watson and Heath.
