PUBLIC SCHOOL CRICKET IN 1897.

By W. J. FORD.

THERE seems to be little in the public school Cricket of the year that calls for special comment, especially as I have had a chance during the two previous years of airing my little fads and theories; but there is one pleasant duty which must be performed early, and that is to offer the heartiest thanks to many kind friends at different schools, who have not only furnished the necessary materials for this article, but also for the chapter on Public Schools in K. S. Ranjitsinhji's book. I shall not be suspected of "puffing" a book which requires neither the "puff direct" nor the "puff collateral," when I ask those who are interested in the organisation of school cricket to consider the systems there described as pursued in the different schools. Many of them are so complete and so excellent that they fairly took one by surprise, and as long as "colts" are so carefully trained, there is no fear of any decadence in the quality of our amateurs.

The only real point that seems to require a note, is the question of the frequent "draws" in the Eton v. Harrow match. Various reasons have been assigned to account for the difficulty experienced in finishing this match, and various remedies have been suggested, the most drastic being the addition of a third day to the time allotted. This however has been negatived by the authorities. The sequence of draws however, only amounts to four, and this, in my opinion, may be attributed to fortune's freaks, and not, as has been suggested, either to the superiority of the bat over the ball, or to the "society function." As a matter of fact, Harrow had in Dowson an almost phenomenal boy-bowler, yet the Eton boys kept up their wickets against him and against time—itself a most depressing game to be compelled to play—for four hours, and thereby saved the match, so that the failure to finish the game can only be attributed to batting good enough to withstand the assaults of a really good bowler. Nor am I forgetting that Dowson had played a long innings in the morning; doubtless this took some of the sting out of his bowling, but he bowled long enough and well enough to show that his exertions had not told very heavily on him, and he also professed to have no great sensation of fatigue at the end. Acting thus on my theory, that the sequence of draws is due to a freak of fortune, I have looked up some figures, believed to be accurate, and find that in 72 matches, these schools have played 15 drawn games, or about one-fifth of the total; yet Cheltenham has drawn about one-fourth of its matches with Marlborough and Clifton, and Repton about one-third in its games against Malvern and Uppingham, while one-fourth is again the figure for the Wellington v. Haileybury engagement. Other figures, I grant, tell largely against this average, for instance only four "draws" between Eton and Winchester; but on the whole the per-centage of unfinished matches in the big contest more. The Harrow averages were also better than those of the Etonians, and their fielding seemed somewhat smarter. Cole's score of 142 was the second highest ever recorded in this match. The Harrovians had, on the season, a remarkably even eleven, which was never fairly dispcsed of till the last man was out, and as the batsmen were all of the dashing type, the hot weather and hard wickets exactly suited them, and their fielding, weak at one time, owed much to the energy of Maw, the captain. Dowson succeeds him in this post, and should have a brilliant career before him in every department of the game. Winchester had a very level and dependable side, and their failure to win more than one match—that with Eton—may be put down to the wonderfully good wickets provided, which gave school bowlers no chance. The win may be attributed to some spirited hitting on the part of Noel and Lewin, which practically turned the scale. Comparing the three schools and the news that comes from them, I am disposed to rank Harrow as quite the flower of the flock, and to give Winchester a slight preponderance over Eton. Very good reports come to hand of two of the wicket-keepers, Robertson (Harrow) and Reynolds (Winchester), and of Stevens, the Winchester slow bowler. Winchester, by the way, will have eight of its side, including the bowlers, available for next year. The Eton eleven was to have a soft thing on hand, and remembered their performance of getting 130 in fifty-five minutes to win the Cheltenham match. Cheltenham lost to Haileybury also; they struck me as the more taking side to the eye, but were deficient in solidity, whereas the Haileyburians were determined, if rough, hitters. In Du Boulay, Cheltenham had a fine batsman, (well backed up by Collett and Luce), and one who may be heard of someday in the Kent eleven, as he can bowl as well as bat. Clifton, by the way, had to succumb to Cheltenham, but it is not quite clear that the better side won, and the majority (33 runs) in a match of fairly high scoring, was not great. The position of Rugby must now be considered. They beat Uppingham in a small scoring match, and had to yield to Marlborough by three wickets. Wilson was a fine cricketer all round, as patient with the bat as with the ball, and he certainly struck me as having a very old head on his shoulders, when he tempted the Marlborough boys to their ruin with his curly slows. Cobb was by repute a still finer batsman, but he unhappily selected the Marlborough match as the one game in which to fail after a series of successes; hinc illæ lacrimæ. Spencer was a fast and useful, if erratic bowler, but Gowers seemed to make a mistake in standing up to the wicket when he was bowling. Haileybury appeared to be a good fielding side, and rough but useful with the bat. Jupp was a promising and judicious bowler, not blessed with luck, and Swayne was erratic, but apt to bowl a difficult ball, in which latter view I was confirmed by personal experience later in the season. Having plenty of useful bats, the Haileybury side, without being very scientific, was certainly quite dangerous. Clifton remains to be considered, and though Cheltenham beat them, I am inclined to think this was hardly true form, as the Clifton batting is spoken of very highly; Noton (the captain) was an excellent wicket-keeper, and the bowling was of quite a useful nature, Verrall having the excellent average of $11\frac{1}{2}$ per wicket on such a perfect ground as the College provides. Raw too, if a little erratic in length, had a knack of getting people out.

At this point I am going to make an order, founded on report and personal observation, and I propose to put Harrow first, largely on the strength of Dowson's bowling, Winchester and Marlborough second (equal), and Eton and Rugby fourth. I hardly know how to place Haileybury, Cheltenham and Clifton, but as this is the order which figures appear to give, so let it remain, but I record my opinion that, from what I have heard, Clifton was better than Cheltenham, and from what I have seen Cheltenham was as good as Haileybury, but perhaps it is wise not to go behind the figures, so Haileybury may stand sixth, Cheltenham seventh, and Clifton eighth.

Having settled No. 1 Company, we may pass to No. 2, though the classification is one of convenience and not merit. So we will "fall in," Haileybury, Wellington, Westminster, Charterhouse, Uppingham and Marlborough, and put beneath their facions. Through Uppingham and Haileybury, who had each a skirmish with some one in No. 1, we may get a line as to their merits—Uppingham having met Rugby, and Haileybury Cheltenham. We find on inspection that Westminster beat Charterhouse, Charterhouse beat Wellington, and Wellington had a little the best of the draw with Haileybury, and also that all the finishes were quite close. Now Haileybury beat Cheltenham easily at Lord's, so that on these data Westminster should take a high place in the general list, and, from information received, had in Blaker and More a batsman and bowler of a really high class, whose almost invariable success pulled an otherwise moderate side to the front. Blaker indeed is spoken of in the highest terms, and as he returns next year with seven of this year's colleagues, the "pinks" should have a good side in 1898. Charterhouse were not a very strong lot, though their captain, Ryder, headed both lists of averages (his batting average being very good) and was a capital all-round cricketer and leader. Fielding, however, seems to have been a weak point in the side, though Crosdale kept wicket well, and with quite moderate batting the side was not very dangerous. However, it just beat Wellington, a fair side, with two really promising cricketers in Turner (brother of A. J. Turner of Essex) and Goldie who, though only 14, has an average of 30, with a best score of 57. This is promising indeed, as he can bowl and field as well. Turner had, not only an average of 47, but was also a good and steady bowler. But as at Westminster, after the "stars" there was not much talent, except Warburton who bowled well, but did not relish a hard hitter. The catching was good, the fielding moderate, and the wicket-keeper (Crofton) quite above the average. Now for Uppingham, whose champions had all a double-figure average for batting, six topping 30, and one, Hind, reaching 47. I should be tempted to attribute the very high figures to the well-known easiness of the Uppingham ground, were it not that of the three top bowlers, who practically got all the wickets, the worst average is 18 wickets for 21 runs, Hind being at the head of this list also. Clearly then, if the batting averages are due to the excellence of the pitch, the bowling must have been of real good quality. Indeed, the side is spoken of as "exceptionally strong," and the all-round fielding as excellent.

Yet this side was beaten, though only by 14 runs, by Rugby, in an extemporised one-day match, Rugby being also minus its captain. The other matches gave but a slight clue to the strength of the Rutlanders, as Repton got a dreadful beating from them, as well as from Malvern. Hence, I think Uppingham may follow Rugby on the list, and that Malvern may be bracketed with them, for of this school, too, good reports are to hand. All cricketers will recall the performance of S. H. Day, the captain of the side, in getting over 100 in his first county match, and he certainly is an excellent bat; Wyatt, unluckily absent from illness during most of the term, was, however, considered to be but little inferior, and the whole team summed up capitally, though much weakened in bowling by Wyatt's absence. As he and Day will return next year, Malvern should have a great season.

At this point a sharp line can apparently be drawn to separate the first and the second class, and on passing to the latter, I must say that any differentiation is impossible, so they shall be dealt with in the order in which they come to hand, without any attempt at classification. Repton had a bad season, owing to weakness in bowling and a want of experience on the part of the captain. Bigg, though over-eager, was the best bat on the side, with an average of 26, but good fielding was discounted by erratic catching, though in Blackburn the Reptonians had a most promising stumper. Radley was very moderate, with weak and young representatives, who were naturally nervous; however, as nine of the side return for next season, increasing skill may be expected with advancing years. Rossall, too, had but a weak eleven, and was easily beaten by Shrewsbury, though they drew with Loretto. Cowell's bowling (34 wickets for 14.6), and Jacob's batting were, with the fielding, the redeeming features of the team. Sherborne crops up next, and the Shirburnian "cannot truthfully say that we werestrong in any department," condemning also the loose fielding, and congratulating its editorial self on the gradual improvement of the side as the season wore on. However, the school had the worst of the game with Bradfield, and was hopelessly beaten by St. Paul's. The brothers Stanger-Leathes headed the batting and bowling lists, but Prichard, not often available, was not only the captain, but probably the best all-round cricketer. Tonbridge, who just beat Dulwich, and morally beat Merchant Taylors', had a very useful all-round side, though bad fielding threw away a couple of matches. Hutchings and Power were really good bats, and Mason a good but unlucky bowler, who can bowl even when fielding is weak. The Tonbridgians play such strong sides that their high averages are very creditable, and they ask me to re-echo their cry of last year, that they would like to play some of the higher class schools. Could Wellington, Charterhouse, or Westminster oblige? The geographical difficulties are not great, and from what I hear I may safely promise them a tough match. J. W. F. A. Crawford had a most successful season for Merchant Taylors', heading both batting and bowling averages, with 38 runs per innings and an aggregate of 88 wickets for 9.5 apiece. This form should bring him close to a "blue"—he is going to Oxford—but as he was head-and-shoulders above his comrades, the results of the season were not remarkable, though three school matches were won, to one lost and three drawn. Bradfield beat Radley, and morally beat Sherborne, and having some useful bowlers proved quite a respectable side, though not above the average. Brighton College beat St. Paul's and Lancing handsomely, and succumbing to Dulwich, but the batting seems to have been good, and the bowling capital. In C. L. A. Smith, they had a fine all-round cricketer, and the general fielding of the side is very highly commended. At Lancing cricket is really looking up, though the eleven for the Jubilee year was unlucky in its school matches. In Follett, they had a really useful bowler and good bat, and as most of the side is staying on, they hope for the good time coming. Brighton and St. Paul's beat them, but they wreaked their vengeance on Hurst. St. Paul's is a school in which I have been able to take a little personal interest, so it was pleasant to find that after a bad start, the team pulled itself together and had on the whole a really capital season. They lost to Brighton, Bedford Grammar School and Surrey Club and Ground, but won all their other matches; total, seven to three. Dodd's bowling (51 wickets for 15.2), was the main factor in the strength of the side, and he may be heard of next year at Oxford. He had some good aides-de-camp in Hunt and Carlile; the fielding was capital; the batting was consistent. Consequently "it was agreed that it was the best all-round team the school had ever had." From Bedford Grammar School I have only statistics, so that it is hard to criticise the side, which must have been pretty good, I fancy, as it beat St. Paul's and Merchant Taylors' easily, though it lost to Dulwich. Joyce, who goes to Oxford, must have played well to have an average of 44, and the three best bowlers, Hogg, Cameron and Hudson, have excellent records. Bedford Modern School was weak in fielding and bowling—two very grave defects; and as the batting averages ruled low, with the exception of Philbrick's 32, the side was clearly weak, and was lucky to lose only one of the four school matches.

Shrewsbury had a capital bowler in Humphreys, who was head-and-shoulders above the rest of the attacking brigade; and in Druce and Skelton (who is a promising wicket-keeper), two useful bats. The fielding seems to have been a strong point, and the school's victory over Rossall was very decisive. Dulwich had a variable side, but a strong attack, headed by Gilson (very fast), and Knox (very slow), with a good reserve in Dolbey. The batting however, was distinctly weak, with only one average (Knox $21\frac{1}{2}$), over 20, hence results were but mediocre in inter-school matches, viz: two wins and two losses. Whitgift did not lose a single school match, but their opponents were not of the strongest, and in Crawford (V.F.S.), who goes to Oxford, and Sandell, had two excellent bowlers. Crawford's average (79.72) is phenomenal, and as he has been tried in good company, should have a fine chance of a "blue." Good judges also speak very highly of Sandell as both bowler and batsman.

In the series of Championship matches among the Scotch schools, Fettes came out first, with Loretto second, Edinburgh third, Blair Lodge and Merchiston Castle equal fourth, and Glenalmond sixth. A friend of mine, who is a good judge of the game, writes to me that this result was unexpected, as Blair Lodge and Loretto were "spotted" as the two best schools, while Edinburgh was to be nowhere. However, cricket is proverbially uncertain, and the given results must hold good. It is nice to hear, from the same correspondent, that "cricket thrives among the high-class schools, and they hold their own with the better clubs; that is a good, healthy sign, showing that not only is there a good nursery for Scotch cricket, but also that the cricket played at the Scotch schools is of excellent quality." Of the batsmen, Elborough (Blair Lodge), had an average of 45, and is a really fine performer, a head-and-shoulders above the rest of his side, while Campbell and Turner of Fettes have capital records; indeed, Campbell has a higher average than Elborough. Cambridge may find him a useful recruit next season. The Fettes bowlers, Lumsden and Lindsay, had capital results to show for their year's work, and Lumsden accompanies Campbell to the classic Cam. From Glenalmond, I have news of a good bowler, in the person of Hill, but the batting was not strong. Logan, of Blair Lodge, was the best school bowler, with an average of 7.8 for 59 wickets; his school had clearly some bad luck in being unable to stand higher than fourth, when two such consistent performers as Logan and Elborough were to be found on the side. No answers have reached me from Loretto and Edinburgh Academy in time for publication.

ETON v. HARROW.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 9, 10.—For the fourth time in succession and for the eleventh time since 1874, the Eton and Harrow match had to be left drawn. The fact of the game having been again unfinished led to a great deal of discussion. A number of Old Etonians signed a petition asking that a third day might be allotted to the match, and the subject gave rise to quite a lengthy controversy in the columns of the Times. The Rev. J. E. C. Welldon, the Head-Master at Harrow, favoured the change and was supported by the M.C.C. Committee and several well-known cricketers, notably Mr. I. D. Walker. The decision remained with Dr. Warre, the Head-Master at Eton, who, after the close of the cricket season, said that he did not feel justified in departing from the existing arrangements. In 1898 therefore, the Eton and Harrow match will as before be restricted to two days. In his article on Public School cricket in the present issue of this ALMANACK, Mr. W. J. Ford makes light of the number of drawn matches between Eton and Harrow, but he has perhaps not taken sufficiently into account the fact that there were no unfinished games before 1860. Since then the proportion of draws has certainly been very large. We cannot believe that scholastic work at Eton would suffer through a third day being given up to the match and, though there is no present hope of reform, we trust that Dr. Warre will reconsider his decision. The quality of the cricket would certainly gain if the hours were shortened and, except in very bad weather, there would be no fear of the game remaining unfinished. The contest under notice was one of considerable interest, the play in two or three instances being indeed of exceptional merit. Not for many years has a bowler so good as Dowson been seen in the Schools' match, the nearest approach to him in skill in recent seasons being the present Oxford bowler, F. H. E. Cunliffe. In Eton's first innings Dowson was seen at his very best. With the ground in perfect order he took six wickets—all bowled down—at a cost of only 51 runs. That he was less successful in the second innings may have been partly due to the fact that before going on to bowl he was batting for over two hours and Cole during their partnership putting on no fewer than 200 runs. Cole's innings of 142 is the second highest ever hit in the Eton and Harrow matches, being only inferior to the 152 obtained by Emilius Bayley for Eton in 1841. Cole was only at the wickets two hours and twenty minutes, the freedom with which he punished the very weak bowling of Eton being delightful. His great innings comprised sixteen 4's, four 3's, seven 2's and fifty-two singles. Cole and Dowson had improved enormously in batting since 1895, when, as very small boys, they gained their colours entirely for bowling. Eton had an anxious time in the closing stage of the game, as in order to avoid defeat they had to keep up their wickets nearly four hours. They succeeded in their task, but time was nearly up before they were out of danger, seven wickets being down with twenty minutes left for cricket. Johnson and Cadogan, however, rose superior to all Dowson's devices and were together at the finish. H. C. Pilkington played in beautiful form on the first day, but from Eton's point of view the feature of the game was the bowling of F. H. Mitchell, who took eleven wickets for 156 runs. Giving up after a little time on Friday the lobs which had served him so well in 1896, he bowled for the rest of the game round-arm slows. His success was the more remarkable as he had taken to his new style within a fortnight of the match. It was curious to notice the number of famous names in the two elevens. F. H. Mitchell is a son of Mr. R. A. H. Mitchell; Dowson, as everyone knows, is a son of the old Surrey cricketer, Mr. E. Dowson; Lubbock is a son of Mr. Alfred Lubbock; Marsham, of the Rev. C. D. Marsham—once the best amateur bowler in England; Studd is related to the famous Eton and Cambridge cricketers of the same name; and Penn is a son of Mr. William Penn.

Seventy-two matches have been played, of which Eton have won twenty-eight, Harrow twenty-nine, and fifteen have been drawn. This is the generally published record, but Harrow men object very strongly to the game in 1805 being treated as a regular contest between the two schools, contending that it is no more correct to count that than the fixture in 1857 for boys under twenty, which has been rejected. T. G. O. Cole's 142 in 1897 was the thirteenth three-figure innings in the matches between the schools and the highest but one in the whole series. The previous great scorers have been E. Bayley 152 in 1841; A. K. Watson 135 in 1885; A. W. Ridley 117 in 1871; C. P. Foley 114 in 1886; W. F. Forbes 113 in 1876; A. W. T. Daniel 112 not out in 1860; C. J. Ottaway 108 in 1867; E. Crawley 100 in 1885; R. B. Hoare 108 in 1888; J. H. Stogdon 124 in 1895; and H. C. Pilkington 101 and B. J. T. Bosanquet 120, both in 1896.

RUGBY v. MARLBOROUGH.

Played at LORD'S, Wednesday, Thursday, July 28, 29.—Some capital all-round cricket was shown in this match, and Marlborough, by their superiority in bowling, gained a victory by three wickets. Collins bore off the batting honours for Marlborough, but Gibson, a clever little left-handed bowler, who varied his pace with much judgment, had perhaps the great est share in his School's triumph. For Rugby, Rogers did wonderfully well and Wilson, a right-handed bowler with a capital length, met with a good deal of success.

CHELTENHAM v. HAILEYBURY.

Played at Lord's, Friday, Saturday, July 30, 31.—Up to the end of an innings on each side, there was not a great deal to choose, but afterwards the Haileybury boys out-playing their opponents at all points, gained a handsome victory by 238 runs. Spooner, Fergus, and Jupp in batting, and Swaine and Fergus in bowling had most to do with Haileybury's success.
