

PUBLIC SCHOOL CRICKET IN 1926.

By H. S. ALTHAM.

1926 was a great year for English cricket and, in the enthusiasm and activity that marked its course, Public School cricket had a generous share. It is true that May was rather a wretched month, and that, apart from the weather, the general strike inevitably involved the cancellation of many of the earlier club fixtures or, by robbing the visitors of all previous practice, deprived their opposition of much of its value. But from June onwards the sun shone and school cricket proceeded in a steady crescendo of prosperity until its record climax in early August at Lord's. For sixteen consecutive playing days the headquarters of the game was monopolised by school cricket, and on the last two a representative fifteen of the schools for the first time in history met the Australian's eleven. The fixture excited very keen interest—over 3,000 people watched the cricket on the second day—but of its practical value I am not, I am afraid, altogether convinced. Public School cricket is already attended with so much publicity that objection on this score is not really considerable, but cricket, if it is to ring true, must be a contest rather than an exhibition, and I doubt whether, even with the handicap advantage of numbers, the Public Schools can put an Australian eleven to any serious test. I know that a similar fixture has for some time been included in the programme of our touring elevens overseas, but, by common consent of those qualified to judge, the Australian school batsman is much more mature in physique and temperament than his English contemporary. There is, of course, the argument that such fixtures are valuable in the same sense as Test Trial matches in that they discover the young player who has the 'morale' for the big occasion. But between the one game and the other there is a very big gap, and before any of our school cricketers can be serious candidates for the highest honours, there is a long cursum honorum to be run and many opportunities in our domestic programme of showing their mettle.

One further point: in the laudable desire to leave nothing undone in order to discover the best available talent for the great match, the M.C.C. devised two new trial games, each of two days. In the first of these two the Young Amateurs eleven was composed of boys who had not yet received a trial, but with that exception some of the leading school cricketers were playing continuously for eight days, and that too in an arduous and inevitably competitive atmosphere—for personal success meant so much—and at the end of a strenuous school season. Under such conditions it was not, perhaps, surprising that some reputations were not realised or that in the Australian match the players, for all their obvious keenness, failed in many instances to show their true form. I hope I am not being too critical, but there is no harm in criticism, if the intention is honest, and the M.C.C. authorities, to whom school cricket owes so deep a debt, may be relied upon to give it just so much—or so little—attention as it deserves.

And now for a few comments on the representative games at Lords. The Rest once again defeated the Lord's Schools and handsomely too. The latter had a markedly long tail to their batting, but bowling that on paper looked rather better than their rivals'. As things turned out their batsmen failed—indeed with the exception of Crawley's 79 and Tegner's 50, there was no score of over 30 in either innings—whilst their bowling was gradually worn down by a masterly innings of Killick's who went in No. 4 and was undefeated at the close for 137. Forbes, by this time very stale, was quite ineffective, Leeham-Green very expensive, and the burden had to rest mainly on Whittaker's capable shoulders. All through his long bowl Whittaker, with his length and flight, kept the batsmen playing, looking—what indeed he was—a bowler of a different class from anyone else in the match. Of the Rest bowlers, Hay in both innings, Taylor in the first, and McIntosh in the second all justified their reputations. Killick's innings naturally dwarfed the rest of the batting, but Tegner played well for his 50 and Crawley's second innings recalled his own splendid form three weeks earlier against Eton. On the other side Valentine played quite brilliantly, if only for 32, Kingsley looked a batsman, and May and Taylor, with Bradshaw of Rugby, proved their value as all-rounders.

The selection of the team to meet the Army was a difficult business, reputations having as ever to be carefully weighed against contemporarily-disclosed form, but the side eventually picked looked strong enough to give a good account of itself, even if the batting tailed off rather earlier than usual. The result, however, was a sad disappointment. For the third year in four the schools' batting broke down badly, and they suffered a heavy defeat. For their collapse the school batsmen had really no-one but themselves to blame: the wicket, though not 'plumb,' was never difficult, the extra pace of Captains Burrows and Joy, which might have been disconcerting, played, as things happened, small part in the result, and most of the damage was done by Major Fink's leg-breaks and Captain Pank's left-hand slows. Both the soldiers bowled quite well, but the measure of their success was really unaccountable. The stout-hearted and successful hitting of Hay and McIntosh for the last wicket in each innings showed up in strong relief the failure of the earlier school batsmen, of whom only Kingsley and Killick did themselves any real justice. Nor was the out-cricket very much more convincing, though Whittaker and McIntosh stuck to their work well. In short the form of the schools was manifestly too bad to be true, so let us leave it at that.

There now followed the first of the two new trial games in which a fresh Young Amateur XI met a team of young professionals attached to the ground staff at Lord's. This was a fixture of real interest, as affording some grounds for comparison between the public school cricketer and his contemporary who, lacking the advantages of good wickets and good coaching in the preparatory school age, is, on the other hand, able to concentrate on the game all day and has the additional spur of professional ambition. The play, though much spoilt by rain on the first day, showed the amateurs well able to hold their own, particularly in bowling where one might rather have suspected them to be outclassed: no batting on the other hand was quite so good as the innings of Beet, the professionals' very efficient stumper. Both Fleming and Rimbault hit finely for the schools' side and Doggart showed himself a very useful all-rounder.

The Schools XI that played the next XV in the last of the trials was the same as that defeated by the Army except that Rimbault and Le Marchand replaced Valentine and McIntosh of the next XV. Cazalet, Block, and Kempster had played for the Lord's Schools; Fleming, Andreae, Doggart, and Wilson for the young Amateurs, and the remaining eight were fresh experiments. The 'Possibles, a strong batting side, made a bad start, but recovered and were at the wickets all day for 377 runs: before the afternoon was very far advanced it was obvious that the 'Probables' bowlers were beginning to feel the effects of all their previous work and that it was a very good thing that the toss had gone the way it had and so assured them of the better part of a day's rest before the Australian match. Whittaker and Hay stuck grimly to their jobs and never got really loose, but they had not much life: May just bowled himself into the side, and so into immortality, and no-one did better than Le Marchand. The 'Possibles' batting was interesting, and for the most part distinctly enterprising: Miller was rather sedate, though he played a valuable part in the recovery from a bad start, but Ford hit well after lunch, Andreae played good cricket for 67, and the "tail" wagged most vigorously, particularly Fleming. On the next day the 'Probables' had to bat on a wicket none too easy and, with fifteen men in the field against them and Doggart and Wilson bowling very well, they found run-getting a very difficult business. Indeed, with Crawley injured and unable to bat, and Killick caught at the wicket as soon as he went in, only two players made a real fight of it. Tegner, for some time, contented himself with stubborn and most watchful defence, but when the end came in sight he hit hard and courageously and his 83 was worth a good deal more than 100 under ordinary conditions. Kingsley's 56 was in every way a first-class innings, remarkable for its quickness of foot work, judgment in placing the ball and admirable self-restraint. As a result of all the trials, the selectors were now left with a rather bewildering puzzle, and it says much for their efforts that I heard very little criticism of the side ultimately selected. Certainly there were several good batsmen whom one would have liked to have seen get their chance, but the only way of 'making a match of it' was to strengthen the bowling as much as possible and trust to the support given by the extra four fieldsmen.

As everyone knows it looked at one time as if that extra help was not to be forthcoming: Collins objected to the fifteen fieldsmen, so I understand, on two grounds, first that it was not the custom in his country, and second that it was more instructive for the boys to watch the Australians make runs with a normal field; the first objection seemed to be simply nihil ad rem, the second to lose sight of the fundamental fact that the extra help in the field was essential if the game was to be in any real sense a cricket match at all. However all was well that ended well and when, after the sad disappointment of an almost blank first day, Ponsford and Woodfull were making runs next morning at the rate of well over 100 an hour, Collins must have felt really relieved that he had yielded the point. It was not to be expected that, where our best bowlers had often failed, school cricketers would give these two gentlemen very serious trouble, but it must be admitted that, with the exception of Whittaker—and even he after a time seemed rather to give up hope—the schools' bowling looked singularly undistinguished: it was not that the two Australians did outrageous things, they batted very well of course, but they had not to work for their runs—far too many were given to them. The fielding of the schools never relaxed, and Killick did many fine things at extra cover, though it was pity that here, as all through these matches, he persisted in standing several yards too deep. With the bowlers making the cardinal mistake of attacking the middle and leg stumps when Woodfull and Ponsford were batting, better use might well have been made of the extra fieldsmen in shutting up the on-side gaps. And then, when the spectators were speculating upon just how much batting practice Collins would ordain, May was given the new ball and the thing happened. Cricket balls last season varied immensely, but this one must have suited May to perfection: in seven overs he took five wickets for 24 runs and that, not as he modestly described it himself, by a fluke, but by downright good bowling which by the pace at which the ball cut back off the pitch genuinely defeated batsmen who wanted to make runs.

Certainly Oldfield did something to steady our emotions, but as we watched the Australians file into the field it was still with the hope that some of the school batsmen would emulate May in defying the probabilities. In a quarter of an hour this ardour was severely damped, for Everett, bowling fast and making the ball swing late up the hill, had shot out three of the best school batsmen for fifteen runs: he was taken off and Killick and Tegner then treated us to some admirable batting. It was no mean achievement to defy the rest of the Australian bowlers for an hour and a half on a wicket that, if never difficult, certainly helped the ball to turn. Tegner's solid straight-batted defence, patience, and good judgment were of a high order, but though his was the longer innings, criticism was agreed in rating Killick's just a little higher. Of the latter I can only say that I have seen few boys play in more convincing style. Strictly orthodox in method, he was wisely content to wait for occasional opportunities to score, but when they came he moved his feet into the right place and hit the ball as a man should hit it: indeed there was about his batting a certain maturity surprising in a cricketer of his age.

Thanks to these two heroes the hundred went up with only six wickets down, but then ensued a dreadful collapse, and the next eight wickets fell for fourteen runs: Ryder and Grimmett did the damage, but the batting was a sorry business. It was generous of Collins to take the field again, but the generosity would have been more appreciated had he maintained the rigour of the game to the end. Everyone must have enjoyed Wilson's impudent and keen-eyed hitting, but the cricket in the last hour of the day was not dignified nor can it have contributed to what was presumably the object of the game.

So much then for the long schools' festival, and I have very little more to say before sounding the 'fall-in' for the march past of the sides. The trial matches at Lord's render superfluous any attempt to catalogue the leading players of the year, but in so vast a field many good men must unavoidably be passed over and of those who, for one reason or another, were not seen at Lord's, I am inclined to select the following, naming them, I need hardly say, in no order of merit:—amongst batsmen Stewart (Haileybury), Oseroft (Uppingham), Moore (Shrewsbury), Olliff (St. Paul's), Barnard (Brighton), Human (Repton), and though he was not strikingly successful, Catlow (Haileybury); amongst bowlers Raphael (Harrow) Scott and Townsend (Winchester), Bradshaw (Malvern), Wilkinson (Uppingham), Moberley (Sherborne), Bovill (Bedford), Brearley (Wrekin), and, particularly, Garland-Wells (St. Paul's): whilst of all-round cricketers I would mention Green (Brighton), Hughman (Dulwich), Brown and Roper (Leys), and Black and Hasler (Christ's Hospital).

I am not going to attempt any selection of the best school side, but in a 'regional championship' Eton and Harrow might have had to play their best to wrest from St. Paul's the honour of representing the London area, Winchester and Tonbridge would have championed the South, the West would, I fancy, have been rather weaker than usual, whilst in the Midland group, though one sound critic plumps for Uppingham, nothing short of an all-v.-all cup fight could have satisfactorily settled the issue.

One other striking feature of the past season occurs to me, the extensive success of slow leg-break bowlers, no fewer than a dozen gentlemen of this variety having done really important service to their sides. Can it be that at last spin is coming into its own again? Let us hope so. And so, with the happy acknowledgement of many reports of good fielding and zealous enthusiasm for the game, we will, at all too long last, ring up the curtain.

At the end of May Eton were reported to be the best side seen on Upper Club for years and they were almost certainly at that time the best school team in England. The bowling of Forbes and Whittaker, the resource and enterprise of their forcing batsmen were excellently suited to the wickets that prevailed, and when after four decisive wins they had a good deal the better of their match with a strong Eton Rambler side, their prospects against Winchester and Harrow seemed bright indeed. As things turned out, however, though undefeated to the end, they never again tasted the sweets of victory, for after the M.C.C. and Foresters matches had been abandoned the five remaining games were all drawn. Another ten minutes at Winchester would surely have seen them victorious and few school sides could, I believe, have recovered so finely from their devastating batting collapse on the first morning. But from very early on the second morning at Lord's it was obvious that for the fifth year in succession the match was to be drawn. That event not unnaturally revived the agitation for the match to be extended to three days, but I fancy that the arguments with which Dr. Warre met the original proposal a quarter of a century ago will still commend themselves to the authorities. Two days—and such days—ought to be enough for any school match, unless the bowling on both sides is hopelessly weak, but I admit that, as long as the wickets at Lord's continue to be as immorally easy as they now are, both sides must go all out for a win if they are often to secure a finish.

In last year's game the Eton batsmen played up to form and scored well enough never to be in any danger of defeat: if one saw rather less than usual of the straight bat and the left shoulder. De Zoete played his natural hitter's game very brilliantly and Ward and Capel-Cure also batted well, whilst Cazalet in the second innings, when things might conceivably have gone wrong, made a versatile and convincing hundred. But when it came to attack, Eton were fairly and squarely held: Crawley's batting was so superlatively good that it perhaps provides no argument, but the later Harrow batsmen all played the bowling confidently and indeed gave the impression of enjoying themselves a good deal. Whittaker did wonders—five for 99 in fifty-six overs—but even he could get nothing from the wicket: had the match been played six weeks earlier I believe the Harrowians would have found Forbes a thorn in their side, for I have plenty of good evidence that on the turning wickets at the start of the year he was a really fine bowler, quite quick, if not genuinely fast, and combining a late swing with the power to break the ball back sharply from the off: against Winchester at the end of June he was still a good bowler, particularly with the new ball, but by 'Lord's' his long spell of hard work had told its tale, and after his first few overs he was neither accurate nor really lively. Hill-Wood, with his curious action, plugged away vigorously and sometimes made the ball come off the ground very quick, but Ward, a left-hander who had done quite well earlier in the summer, was expensive. And so on a fast wicket Eton had not the artillery to force the win which a month before would, I believe, have been well within their compass, and, unbeaten though they were throughout the year, their form in their two big games must rank them as a good—definitely good—but not a great side.

Of their batsmen Cazalet was at once the most successful and the best: he has the quickness of foot and the nicety of timing that one expects in a good racket player, but his defence was also good and he was clever at forcing the ball to the on. Hope, the captain, for a long time could get no runs, but with admirable tenacity fought through his troubles, and, while losing much of his attack, became a most serviceable opening batsman on quieter lines. De Zoete was the greatest fun to watch, and for one who went for the ball so consistently he really did very well: he has a fine eye and good wrists, and if he does not always get to the pitch of the ball he was often making splendid hits—and who doesn't enjoy seeing long and really high driving? Ceil made an invaluable hundred against Winchester and got runs at Lord's: he never looked sound outside the off-stump, but he does watch the ball, and he does mean business: in fact he flatters the opposition only to deceive. The Eton fielding was good, especially on the offside where their captain, Hope, set them a splendid example. Whittaker, who succeeds him on the leadership this season, with Ward and Capel-Cure in support, was, I believe, the best of the season's bowlers. He has a beautiful action, strongly reminiscent of Rhodes, and can bowl all day without getting loose: if the wicket helped him, he was capable of running through a side, and even on the truest pitch his subtle variations of pace and flight always made him dangerous.

There seems still to be in some quarters a sort of tacit conspiracy to speak of Harrow cricket as under a cloud. For such a view I can find no adequate evidence. It is true that it is now a long time since they have actually defeated Eton, but only once in the last five matches have they had definitely the worst of the balance—and then they made a gallant recovery—whilst in the same period against Winchester they have won twice and they had as much the better of the 1924 draw as their opponents had of the following game. Last season Harrow were only once defeated in their dozen fixtures: they swamped Charterhouse, saw rain put an end to a low-scoring game with Winchester when it was in a very interesting situation, whilst at Lord's there was at one time just a remote chance that Eton might for the third year running find themselves with their backs to the wall.

In this game the Harrow batsmen were at their best, whilst their bowlers disappointed—a precise contrast with last year's play. I am sorry to say that I did not see Crawley's innings, but many experienced critics were united in describing it as the best batting seen in the match for a very long time: rather out of luck in several of the trial games Crawley only showed his best form on three occasions, at Lord's, at Charterhouse (96) and in one century on the Harrow ground. He is a beautiful player to watch with his correct footwork, long true swing, and flashing acceleration from the wrists; I am told that his defence is better than was his cousin's or brother's, but as yet he lacks consistency. Andreae for some time could not get going, but struck form suddenly and thereafter hardly knew what it was to fail: he batted excellently at Lord's, as did Carlisle whose delightful off-driving must have warmed the heart of at least one old Oxford captain. Ford, though never convincing against slow bowling, made a great many useful scores—often when they were wanted—and was a most popular captain, whilst Clover-Brown's stubborn defence was very hard to defeat. When we add that Lindsay—a first-rate wicket-keeper—made a very good century in one of their matches, and that three out of their four stock bowlers collected 107 runs between them by excellent cricket at Lord's, it is obvious that the consistency of the Harrow batting was quite out of the ordinary, indeed on their showing in the big match I am inclined to rate them as the strongest batting side of all the schools.

Their bowling was not so good: Raphael, a bowler with a nice action and a late swing, bowled really well against Charterhouse (seven for 45) but as the season wore on he could not keep his life for long after the shine was gone, and at Lord's he was steady and no more. Pennefather has an excellent method and can spin the ball, but the Lord's wicket proved too much for him too. Rome is a young all-rounder of considerable promise, whilst Robinson, not very well treated by his field in London, flighted his slows well and has plenty of courage.

With seven of last year's side still available this summer, it will be surprising if Harrow do not turn out a formidable eleven. Clover-Brown will be captain.

Winchester were a good side and were only once defeated—by the M.C.C. in an exciting finish. Had Tew been able to reproduce his 1925 form, their attack would have been exceptionally strong, but he had constant trouble with his back, and though generally steady, was only spasmodically dangerous. The bulk of the work thus fell upon Townsend and Scott and very well they met its demands. Townsend's record for a young cricketer in his first year in the eleven is really rather remarkable; and I fancy he was just about as good as any of the great crop of leg-spinners which the year produced. He keeps, for a bowler of his type, a good length, turns the ball very sharply either way (the googly is well disguised) and does not in the least mind being hit: he has not the suppleness and rhythm of his father's delivery nor is his flight particularly difficult, but I shall be surprised, as well as disappointed, if he does not get a great many wickets in the two more years left to him at Winchester.

Scott was, to some extent, a bowler of days, but, when in the vein, he took a lot of playing: very well built for his trade—strong about the loins and back—he bowled quick medium and could make the ball race off the pitch at a great pace: he could bowl the off-spinner, but I think his most dangerous ball to the good batsman was the one that ran away at the very end of its flight: with plenty of heart he would bowl for long spells without losing his life. The change bowling was useful and no more: Milligan, though always steady, was plainer than last year, but Cadogan improved as a fastish bowler and was at his best against Eton. The Wykehamists' fielding was for some time a long way below standard, but by the end of the season it had become, with one or two exceptions, at least adequate. King and Coates were active on the offside, Fleming a good catcher in the deep, and Kingsley a really fine slip field who caught some superlative catches against Eton.

In batting Winchester were not quite convincing: the net wickets in 'Riddings' did not get really fast until the middle of June, and another fortnight's net practice before their big match might have made a considerable difference: as it was, with Bonham-Carter injured and forced to stand down, there was not enough body to the batting order, and far too much depended upon the opening pair, Kingsley and Fleming. As a pair they were not successful, but as individuals they did very well, Fleming being in wonderful form in May and Kingsley, after a quiet start, finding his game against Marlborough and playing really well for the rest of the year. Together they conferred on their school the unique distinction of being doubly represented against the Australians, and though contemporary form was naturally to some extent a matter of luck, I do not think the distinction was undeserved. Kingsley, stronger and more resourceful than in 1925, is full of strokes and very quick on his feet: he should develop into a first-class player. Fleming is at first sight less convincing, but he is a really powerful driver and hooker and has the great merit of watching the ball most closely and meeting it with the full face of the bat. The rest of the batting was, as I have suggested, not too reliable, but Milligan played many sound and useful innings in an unobtrusive way, King could hit finely on the off-side, and Coates, who came into the side late, was a much better player than his average suggests.

Winchester drew all four of their school matches: the games with Harrow and Charterhouse were both spoilt by the weather, but in each the Wykehamists' bowling was good. Kingsley, helped by mistakes in the field, made a very attractive century against Marlborough: his rival captain, Block, countered with a splendid innings, but, once he had left, the Winchester bowlers, Townsend in particular, always seemed to have the match in hand until Neilson found a courageous partner in No. 11 and by capital batting they just "held the fort" till time. "Eton match" was most remarkable: certainly there had been a heavy dew overnight, and with some grass on the wicket the ball sometimes did unexpected things, but there was nothing whatever in the pitch to account for two such sides being dismissed for 76 and 63: it was just a case of really good bowling and the run of luck setting consistently against the batsmen all the way through. For a long time in their second innings Eton, despite a good start, could not really get their heads in front, but on the second morning Cecil (125) and Hill-Wood (58), aided by some good fortune but batting on the whole very well, gradually pulled the game round, and in the end the Wykehamists had to bat over 4½ hours to save the game. Kingsley played a captain's innings, but at tea defeat stared Winchester in the face: then King, who off-drove splendidly, and Coates made a fine stand for an hour and with Cadogan and the young wicket-keeper, Walker, doing really more than could reasonably be expected of them, it was not until the stroke of time that the ninth wicket fell. It is only fair to record that Forbes had to be off the field for an hour and a half on the last afternoon to do an Army paper, and his absence may very probably have just turned the scale, but though Eton deserved to win, there was plenty of credit for the side that battled so stoutly and successfully to save the match. The feature of the game was undoubtedly the bowling of Whittaker, Forbes, Scott, Townsend, and Tew, who on the first day, was in something like his best form. But when there was much good fielding by both sides, Kingsley's slip-catching stood out by itself. With the last named again captain, Fleming, Townsend, Tew and two other old colours still at school, Winchester are not without hope for 1927.

Rugby gained, I believe, only two victories in their season, but inasmuch as two of their defeats in club fixtures were by the margin of one run and their great match with Marlborough was well and deservedly won, they cannot complain of lack of incident in their summer, or look back to it without a good deal of satisfaction. The game at Lord's furnished another striking instance—if any were ever needed to drive home what is almost a platitude—of the supreme value of a good leg-spin bowler in school cricket. Whether or not Leedham-Green was as good a bowler of his type as Wilson of Repton or Townsend of Winchester I am not at all certain: bowling of this sort, unless it is of the highest class, seems to depend to some extent upon the "atmosphere" of a "needle" match or upon certain limitations in the opposing batsmen, and when I saw the Rugbeian at Lord's in the week after his great triumph, he did not seem to offer great difficulty to the picked batsmen opposed to him. But after all no man can do more than bowl unchanged through two innings, and refuse to be rattled on the rare occasions when the enemy looked like taking his measure, take fifteen wickets for 135 runs—nine in the last innings—and practically win with his own right arm the great match of his school's year: whatever success may await him in the future, Leedham-Green is sure of a very special niche in the shrine of Rugby cricket.

Though naturally the mainstay of the attack, he was far from being unsupported, for Bradshaw, the captain, and a capital cricketer, was a steady and hard-working bowler of medium pace. Connolly, another leg-breaker, often got useful wickets, and Dawson's pace also contributed. The Rugby batting was not particularly distinguished, but most of the side were good for some runs, and Monkhouse and Agnew, who in their different rôles of defender and attacker made most runs during the season, showed their mettle by being at their very best at Lord's. Pearson, who got into the side late, is described as distinctly promising. The fielding was good and Roberts clearly one of the best wicket-keepers of the year. Of their other two school fixtures the Clifton match was ruined by rain, but Uppingham, in their best form, won somewhat easily. Only three old colours remain at Rugby for the coming season. Monkhouse will be captain.

I am not inclined to rate Marlborough so high as in some recent years. That there was plenty of cricket in the side goes without saying, for the game is very much alive in the Wiltshire school, and their elevens always strike me as playing it with an invigorating vitality and zest. Once again more than half the eleven could bowl, but though there was variety in the attack, it rather lacked distinction and sting. It is manifestly unfair to judge any eleven by its form in one match, even in what is admittedly the 'Test' match of their year, and the Marlborough batting against Leedham-Green's googlies at Lord's was really too bad to be true; but, considering the beautiful wickets that prevail on their ground, their collective batting figures are not impressive and too much depended upon their captain, Block. Though he "failed" at Lord's—and that this word should be applied to scores of 31 and 27, lends point to my last remark, he can look back to a splendid season's record—an average of over 50 for an aggregate of just on 700 runs. In the representative games in the holidays he struck one of those patches that come the way of every cricketer, but his unhappy experience then cannot efface my memory of his grand innings against Winchester, which showed him a batsman of courage, resource, and a most powerful and attractive method. Against the M.C.C. he narrowly escaped the distinction of scoring a century in each innings. As he is a fine short slip, a superb thrower from any position, a bowler who often gets a wicket, and withal a really splendid physical specimen, I do not fancy that the authorities at Cambridge are likely to lose sight of him.

Finch, his opening partner, was a useful batsman, and Neilson, whose bat is very straight and nerve of the stoutest, showed a great advance in this department, but, as I have suggested, there was not quite so much 'body' to the batting as usual. Of the bowlers, Marley, a left-hander who was very steady and could exploit a baffling swerve, was the most successful. Thornton was another left-hander of faster pace, Morton a third and Page comes out with quite a good record as a leg-spinner. The Marlborough fielding was always good—their throwing is generally the best that I see in school cricket—and reached its zenith at Lord's when by common consent it was particularly brilliant. In their other school games Marlborough easily defeated Wellington, had their Cheltenham fixture ruined by rain, and played the exciting draw with Winchester, to which I have referred above. Neilson will captain Marlborough this year, and, with five other old choices available, prospects must be considered good.

Cheltenham were unlucky in the fact that rain interfered with all three of their school matches and prevented a result in games that might well have been fought out to a really interesting finish. The Marlborough fixture was limited to about three hours cricket, but I fancy the two sides might have proved well balanced: against Clifton the Cheltonian batsmen made a really good recovery in scoring 348 in their second innings after being 100 behind on the first and at the finish had none the worse of the argument. The game with Haileybury at Lord's produced a capital 'soldier's battle' on a wicket never difficult but generally offering the bowlers a certain amount of help. Baker, Kempster, and Wellings all batted well and the Cheltenham fielding, which earlier in the year had been somewhat sluggish, was at its best. In their club games the school's most notable performance was their smashing victory over the "O.C.'s," when Alston took twelve wickets for some seven runs apiece. A medium-paced bowler, he could keep a really good length and make the ball 'run' with his arm, but he cannot afford to increase his weight. Colbeck also did very well with his leg-breaks, though his action is not very lively, but the best bowler—indeed the best all-round cricketer on the side, was Wellings. He could spin the ball back from the off, had a 'flight' as well, and varied his pace intelligently.

Of the batsmen Kempster was the best, his bat is very straight, he watches the ball, and he is not afraid of hitting the half volley. Against Haileybury his aggregate of 100 was much the highest in the match and his form rightly won for him a place in the Lords' Schools XI. Baker was an excellent man to go in first, sound and imperturbable, strong on the leg-side. Woollatt was a most uncertain performer, but if he can improve his defence and settle down, his natural gifts of eye and wrist must bring him to the front. Dick Cunyngnam was an aggressive, courageous player who welcomed a situation. Wellings may easily develop into a really good batsman. Martin, an excellent wicket-keeper, whose form at Lord's won general approval, also showed promise with the bat. The Cheltenham captain, Edwards, met with modest success himself, but the side owed much to his leadership, personality, and inspiring example in the field at mid-off. This year he will be succeeded in the captaincy by Kempster, and with five other old colours, including Wellings, Alston, and Martin, Cheltenham have the prospect of a very useful team.

Of their thirteen matches Haileybury only won three, but the fact that they were only twice defeated in so heavy a programme certainly bears out my correspondent's contention that they were a difficult side to beat. Given one bowler of class and I would have written them down as the equal of most schools last year, for their attack had variety and figures suggest that it was commendably steady. Harvey, a left-hander, did the most work and his is a good record: Wennink had trouble with his back and hardly fulfilled his last year's promise, but on his day he was a good bowler, whilst Eastwood's quicker pace was useful and there were three other change bowlers.

The Haileybury batting was distinctly above the average and extended right down the side, though of last year's promising young batsmen only Stewart trained on into quite what was hoped. It is somewhat disturbing to hear that he prefers Lawn Tennis, and that after a summer in which he scored over 500 runs and averaged 40! Wordsworth was an attractive and resolute player, strong on the offside, Heywood, though an uncertain starter, had strokes and liked the half-volley, Wright was more useful than stylish; Barber sound and promising. Catlow, the captain and a zealous one too, seems to have had the run of luck rather against him all the summer, and I do not think his figures represent his powers. I have not seen him myself, but more than one good judge has told me that in "posse," if not in "esse," he is a class batsman.

All three of Haileybury's school fixtures were drawn : the first day at Uppingham was a blank, and on the second the home side had a good deal the better of it. The home fixture with Wellington produced some high scoring and with the Haileybury bowling rather mediocre, it fell to Wordsworth and Stewart to do most for their side in a fairly even draw. Heywood will lead the eleven this year, and Wennink, Stewart, and two other old colours will support him.

Turning now to the Midland group we find Repton, Uppingham, and Shrewsbury all coming out with distinctly creditable records, and, after considerable searchings of heart, I am not going to try to adjudicate between them. Uppingham, who defeated Marlborough's conquerors, Rugby, had the best of their draw with Shrewsbury, the latter equally the better of the argument with Repton, but inasmuch as Repton did defeat Uppingham, though only after a hair-raising finish, I shall consider Repton's resources first. Valentine in 1925 promised to be a batsman quite out of the ordinary in his last year at school, but two serious operations in the spring seriously undermined his strength and coming back late, he never found any consistency of form. From personal observation last summer I know him to be capable of playing beautiful cricket, orthodox in method yet with that indefinable something which is beyond the compass of the ordinary batsman, but on performance he was no more than useful and his loss of form prevents me from rating the Repton batting as more than serviceable—serviceable it certainly was, with almost all the eleven capable of getting runs. Human being the soundest and by some way, the most consistent of them.

The bowling was of a higher order. Sharpley and Piper were two medium-pace bowlers, rarely collared and thoroughly reliable, without being mechanical—I have seen Sharpley bowl with real life and enterprise. Both Peck and Human were useful changes. Wilson was a definitely match winning bowler. A googly bowler of slightly faster than ordinary pace, he could turn the ball sharply both ways. I am assured, collaterally from Uppingham and Shrewsbury, as well as direct from Repton, that he could be really difficult, and was always consistently hard to drive. His record of forty-six wickets for 13 each speaks for itself, and his bowling played a big part in the Uppingham match, whilst it proved altogether too much for Malvern.

A word must be said about this Uppingham game: at the end of the first day Repton were right on top, thanks to Wilson and some stout-hearted batting by their tail-enders, but next morning a heavy dew to some extent immobilised the bowlers. Castle played an invaluable innings for Uppingham and Repton needed 147 runs to win. For some time things went by no means well for them, but Wilson and Sharpley pulled the game round and got to within six of the required figure. Then they were both out, and the last pair had to fight through two maiden overs before getting past the post. Of Repton's other two school fixtures I shall speak shortly elsewhere, and shall here leave them with the verdict that they were a school side well up to, if not rather above, the average, with an excellent habit of making the best of their resources, always difficult to beat, and when things went Wilson's way, difficult to hold. Human is captain elect, but he will have to build up almost a new side.

Uppingham had a good season and were a good side, indeed my correspondent ranks them as the best eleven turned out by the school for several years. Their batting was sound and reliable all the way down: Ocroft and Thornley, an opening pair of excellent method, Enderby, if not quite so spectacular as of old, still a most attractive player to watch with his fine wrists and aggressive spirit. Perkins, though not altogether consistent, often played very good cricket, and five more of the side averaged over 17 each, so there was little or nothing of a tail.

But satisfactory as such figures are, it was in the out-cricket that the main strength of the eleven lay. Uppingham is a beautiful ground to field on and most of the side seem to have done justice to it: Enderby was a really fine "slipper," Christopherson above the average in the same position, Waring a short-leg specialist who made a number of fine catches, and Castle a wicket-keeper who improved steadily all through the season: when I add that the catching was generally reliable, it is obvious that the bowlers were very well supported.

But the wickets on "The Upper" are proverbially easy-paced, and when we find three bowlers taking 92 wickets between them at an average of about  $12\frac{1}{2}$  a wicket, it is clear that there must have been a good deal of intrinsic merit in the attack. Perkins' supplemented his useful batting by bowling out swingers very steadily: Wilkinson proved a real 'find': he has a first-rate action and distinct pace; in the drawn game against the very strong Oxford eleven brought by J. V. Richardson he took seven for 68, and he may be worth watching by the Cambridge authorities. But the backbone of the attack was, of course, supplied by McIntosh, and I fancy that one must go a long way back in Uppingham records to find a bowler with better figures. When I saw him bowl for the Rest at Lord's, he looked rather plain in the first innings, but in the second he bowled with much life and admirable accuracy: he runs up to the wicket well, brings his arm over very high, and every now and then makes the ball do something quickly and distinctly late. Like all bowlers of his type, who rely on 'cut' rather than spin, he needs a fast wicket to be at his best, and this makes his figures on the very easy-paced Uppingham ground all the more noteworthy. Given improved health—he is not, I am sorry to say, very strong as yet—he should do really well : in any case he can look back to his season's captaincy with great satisfaction.

In their school matches Uppingham, as we have seen, were just defeated by Repton, but their bowling proved too much for both Rugby and Haileybury. The Shrewsbury match was spoilt by rain on the first day, but in the time remaining Uppingham, with the best of the wicket, established themselves in a commanding position. It is noticeable that in the four school fixtures 165 was the highest total against them : had their attack been reinforced by a spin bowler of merit, I should have been inclined to back Uppingham against almost any other school eleven. Perkins is next year's captain, and five other old choices remain.

Shrewsbury's record of five wins against one loss in a dozen games is satisfactory enough, but with a little more time available for the draws must have been victories, and very few schools could then have pointed to better figures. Their strength, like that of their rivals, Uppingham and Repton, was collective, though Moore, who is still quite young, fully realised his early promise and was the best of their batsmen, in fact the most successful of all batsmen in the Midland group. Longrigg and Leach were a good opening pair and in the middle of the side Stow made runs in a taking style, besides fielding very well at cover. The bowlers were dogged by ill-luck in the form of disabling strains, and in none of the inter-school matches was the attack at full strength. Nevertheless their figures make pretty good reading. Snow, the captain, was the best of them, not very convincing, perhaps, to watch from the ring but I am told by those who should know that he could swing the ball very late from leg and flight an off-break too : Staples and Duke were very useful all-rounders, and Mutter's fastish bowling met with much success. With fielding and catching described as distinctly good, four regular bowlers of fully average class, and almost every one of their batsmen capable of scoring fifty runs in a match (seven of them did so), Shrewsbury were clearly a side to be reckoned with.

Their three school matches were all drawn : against Uppingham, as we have seen, they had the worst of the wicket, but their batting was more convincing than Repton's in the one-day fixture at home, and if the luck rather ran their way, only time robbed them of victory. In the two-day game with Rossall they secured a big lead, only to lose it again owing partly to a brilliant innings by the Rossall captain, but also to unusual weakness in the field. Staples will captain Shrewsbury this year, and he is likely to find Moore's batting a great stand-by.

Malvern once again were not a strong side, but their paper record with five wins to be set against three losses is not so bad.

True the losses included a very heavy defeat at the hands of Repton, for whom Wilson was at his best and proved altogether too much for the Malvern batsmen. Malvern's victims included Westminster, they only went down to the Foresters in a gallant rear-guard fight by 20 runs, and drew creditably with a strong O.M. eleven. Their out-cricketer seems to have been reasonably competent, for the fielding was keen, and if the attack was distinctly limited, both Bradshaw and Wedd come out with creditable records, indeed, considering the proverbial excellence of the Malvern wickets, Bradshaw's figures are really good. But the batting was weak and not for many years can the averages have made such modest reading. Parry, a late discovery, played some sound cricket and Acheson-Gray was very useful, but though most of the side could get runs, the batting as a whole lacked both confidence and class. This year Bradshaw, who, by the way, had a great match against Westminster, will captain the eleven, and two, or possibly three, old colours remain.

From Rossall I have little information, but their figures certainly suggest that the young eleven of 1925 trained on into a distinctly useful side. Their bowlers, Lambert, Smith, and especially Roncoroni all did well. There was batting most of the way down the team with Whitcroft and Beattie some way ahead of their fellows. Whitcroft played a brilliant innings of 161 not out to save the Shrewsbury match, in which Beattie also batted very well, and if I add that against the Old Rossallians the school actually hit off the 97 runs required in half an hour and so won the match with three minutes to spare, it is clear that there can have been very little wrong in the spirit in which Rossall played the game last summer.

From the far north we will now drop down to the Sussex coast and see what fortune attended the efforts of Brighton, whose cricket standard has for some years been really high. Once again the Brightonians seem to have been a thoroughly useful side, rather dependent, perhaps, on the prowess of a few champions, but managing to give a very good account of themselves in a long programme of fourteen matches. Their seven wins included the school games with Lancing and Epsom, whilst, if the Dulwich match might ultimately have gone against them, time alone saved Christ's Hospital from falling to their account. Their bowling was somewhat limited, too much work being thrown upon Green and Evans, but both shouldered the burden manfully, and if the hard wickets of the latter half of the season discounted some of the danger of the former's left-hand spinners, they suited Evans' pace. Generally to be relied on to bowl a length, Evans had some really good days, notably against Lancing where he took eight wickets for 43 runs.

Green, incidentally a very capable captain, reinforced his bowling with some very sound batting and only needs greater strength to be really good, but the heaviest scorer in the team was Barnard who if still somewhat cramped in style, was most solid in defence with improved power of stroke-play. Lawrence has yet to learn real discretion, but was a punishing, attractive player and made over 400 runs. The rest of the batting was rather immature and unreliable. The fielding throughout the year was good, sometimes brilliant, and in Levett the school had a brilliant wicket-keeper who had the honour of being picked against both the Army and the Australians. Green will lead Brighton again, but with only two old choices remaining he will have to build up a virtually new side.

Eastbourne did not win one of their thirteen engagements. Their bowling was weak, and yet my correspondent there is inclined to rate them above the 1925 eleven. Certainly theirs is a strong fixture list, and four out of the five drawn games might possibly have been victories. The fielding, as usual at Eastbourne, was always keen, occasionally brilliant, and I gather that the batting was stronger than the averages suggest, but the absence of spin-bowling was too heavy a handicap for any side to carry. In their school matches they had the best of a rain-spoilt game with Christ's Hospital : against Lancing their opening batsmen made a fine start, but after a 'soldier's battle,' the enemy just got home by two runs; the fixture with King's School, Canterbury, was scratched owing to persistent rain. Of individuals Binge seems to stand out some way above the rest : a useful bowler and dashing field, he showed a great advance with the bat and played some high-class innings. His form this year, when he captains the side, will be carefully watched. Corrie was another very useful all-rounder, and Whitty, though, it seems, a shaky starter, batted very well at times. Skinner generally kept wicket well and captained the side with enthusiasm.

From Christ's Hospital comes a very cheery report. The side was quite definitely above the average : they had an inspiring captain in Osborne, the son of a famous old Oxford footballer; the fielding, thanks to his practice and precept, became really good; the batting was stronger than for year past, and the bowling, if rather limited in quantity, was at least strong enough to win five of the last seven matches played, after five of the first six had been drawn. In school fixtures Christ's Hospital won close victories over Cranleigh and Leatherhead, annihilated Epsom, were robbed by time of a big win over Merchant Taylors, and played interesting draws with Eastbourne and Brighton. In bowling Done did really well with his leg-breaks, and Hasler and Black, who also spun the ball, stuck well to their heavy work, but the lack of a bowler of pace was seriously felt when the real summer set in.

The batting was strong, practically every member of the side could bat, though some of them, owing to the prowess of their leaders, got few opportunities of showing their form.

The captain, Osborne, batted consistently well all through the season, and Black and Hasler were of equal service with the bat as with the ball : sound and patient players they made a capital opening pair. Their partnership of 206 against Epsom is a record for the school. With the same leader and five other old colours available this season Christ's Hospital should turn out another formidable eleven.

Clifton are not an easy team to place. Their bowling was weak, only Tilly, a young cricketer of promise, being at all reliable : in batting they were subjects to disastrous collapses, and clearly lacked solidity in the body of the team, whilst their fielding, with one or two exceptions is described as slow, their throwing as poor, and their stumper as indifferent. So far this is not a cheering picture ; yet the fact remains that in all their school games they led on the first innings, and though both Cheltenham and Rugby pulled the game round on the second day, honours were fairly easy at the finish. At Lord's, where a blank first day made inevitable a draw for the fourth year in succession, Clifton held a decided advantage.

For this measure of success the explanation is not far to seek : the team included one, and only one, really reliable batsman, and in the three big games he gave of his very best with scores of 73, 12, 64, 51, and 113. When I was up at Lord's at the beginning of the Representative games in August, I found opinion somewhat divided as to Tegner's class, some critics being inclined to question his early selection for the School's side against the Army. But before the ten days were over Tegner had effectually silenced this criticism, for, though he failed against the soldiers, he made 83 runs against the Next XV (all fielding), and then batted nearly two hours against the Australians for a really good innings of 45. Like most left-handers Tegner does not always look very convincing, especially outside the off-stump, but his defence is good and beautifully straight, and when he plays forward, which he does a great deal, he makes admirable use of his reach. That he can also hit the ball extremely hard the "Next XV" would surely testify. Tegner, though not fast in the field, is a very good catcher, especially in the slips, and he bowls leg-breaks, so that I do not suppose that the authorities at Cambridge are likely to lose sight of him.

Tegner apart, the Clifton batting was somewhat sketchy ; the Carrs maintained their character as brilliant, but reckless, hitters ; Barnard showed promise, and White and Walker were useful ; but if their one star failed, the side were always liable to be outed for a small score by anything like good bowling. All the more credit to them, then, for doing so well in the three school matches.

Four old colours are left, but the name of the new captain has not reached me.

Tonbridge were decidedly one of the stronger sides last summer; they began the season indifferently, losing three out of their first five matches, but from the beginning of June until the end of their last season they were undefeated and actually won seven of their last ten games. At Lord's—when will the weather relent and give us a fine Clifton and Tonbridge match again?—they played like a rather stale side—not surprising perhaps at the end of so arduous a programme—but the form they showed in defeating such strong teams as Eton Ramblers and Free Foresters was really good. The greatest match-winning force in the side was, of course, the bowling of Tucker and his record of sixty-three wickets for 13·76 each compares favourably with any in the year's school cricket, especially when we remember the proverbial ease of run-getting on the Tonbridge ground. By the time he came up to Lord's he had not unannaturally lost some of his 'nip,' but even then, without knowing his record, I marked him down as a bowler of parts: his action is admirable, for his arm comes over very high and there is an elasticity about the movement that suggests life off the pitch. I am told by those best qualified to judge that all through the year his length was very steady and that, given any help from the wicket, he could spin the ball sharply. Clearly he was good enough for most of the school batsmen opposed to him: witness his "bags" of twelve for 45 against Lancing, nine for 53 against Sherborne, and five for 97 at Lord's. Nor was he by any means unsupported in attack, for Baiss was a useful leg-breaker, and Holman and Smith both bowled at a good pace and at times were decidedly effective: add the fact that the Tonbridge fielding was first-rate, and an explanation of much of their success is already clear.

In batting they had no star of Tucker's magnitude, but there was run-getting all down the side and they were a difficult lot to bowl out. Miller has shed much of his earlier brilliance, but has gained greatly in soundness and an average of 31 with a highest score of 50 in sixteen innings is consistency itself. Holman, besides his bowling and fine fielding, was a capital batsman who scored the only century hit for the school last year, and Baiss was also a most useful all-rounder. There must be something in a man who can hit his first ball in a school match at Lord's for 6, and I am not surprised to hear that Rowan was a "hitter of the very best." With Tucker as captain, Baiss, Smith, and probably three other old choices available this summer, Tonbridge should surely continue in the path of prosperity.

My Sherborne correspondent writes: The side was a useful one, though it was very young: we expected a "building-up" year, and hope for good things next season,—a very sensible attitude towards a record which, though modest enough, is not without promise for the future. I have always been a strong advocate of the policy of playing young cricketers in their school elevens: indeed

I believe that except at such schools as Eton with their vast resources, strong sides will be the exception on any other policy, but, of course, experience has got to be bought, and unfortunately the lack of it is apt to tell most when most store is set upon victory. So it was with Sherborne last year. In their club games—and the opposition down in the West is not always very formidable,—the eleven did very well, but when it came to their two big school matches the batsmen could not rise to the occasion. On a sticky wicket Tucker of Tonbridge did almost what he liked and Sherborne went down by an innings. The Westminster match, owing to rain, had to be converted into a one-day game, and after Moberley and Payne had done well to dismiss the London school for 155, the batting collapsed, only Hodgkinson showing any real form.

Some consolation, however, was forthcoming from the other two school fixtures, Downside being defeated by 84 runs and a narrow margin of time and Blundell's being quite outplayed though just managing to 'save their bacon.' In this game Eglington, Moberley, and Hodgkinson scored 272 between them, and they were clearly the three best cricketers on the side. Eglington, the captain, a sound batsman, averaged over 50 for the year. Moberley's bowling figures of thirty-nine wickets for 11 apiece are excellent, and Hodgkinson is described as a young batsman and wicket-keeper of high promise. Kreyer and Payne made up quite a useful attack, but the fielding showed little life. No doubt Eglington, who is again captain, will tackle this problem with the energy which it demands, and with six other old choices to hand, I shall expect to see Sherborne give a much better account of themselves in 1927.

And now from the far West let us turn back towards London, stopping on our way at Wellington. For some years past cricket here has been at rather a low ebb, and it is therefore really good news that a young side should have trained on steadily all through the season, and at the end of it should have been able to look back to a record that is, I think, Wellington's best for the last five years. In this success their own keenness and May's captaincy played a large part. May, the best all-round cricketer in the eleven, had a capital season: tall, well-built and stout-hearted, he liked to put the bat up against the ball and his driving and leg-hitting, which I saw at Lord's, were really quite refreshing. Playing consistently all through the year he did more than a captain's share in the school matches, scoring over fifty four times in the five games and bowling very well against Charterhouse. Of course, his great performance against the Australians will go down to history, but, without wishing to detract for a moment from its merit, I feel that, like many bowlers of his type—the 'cut' as opposed to the 'spin' variety—he was a bowler of days, and cannot therefore be ranked quite on a level with a consistent performer like Whitaker.

Of the other Wellington bowlers P. J. Garthwaite did extremely well with his leg-breaks, especially in the school games, and with a little more steadiness he may become really good, whilst his brother's swerves and Hamilton's pace contributed useful variety. Had the fielding been better, the attack might be written down as above the average. In batting the team took a long time to settle down, but at the end of the season they were going strong and were quite a difficult side to dismiss. Wood and Benn did quite well as an opening pair, and were in great form against Haileybury. C. C. Garthwaite has sound defence and Dashwood, who is young and very large, has only to improve his to be a good player.

Perhaps the best performance of Wellington was their victory over the M.C.C. Their batting was at its best against Haileybury and the Foresters, (who just forced a win against a sporting declaration), and several of their fixtures produced exciting fights. Garthwaite's leg-breaks outed Westminster for 78, whereupon Wellington lost five wickets for 32, only to be shepherded to victory by a capital innings of 53 not out by Hamilton. Some very low scoring in their home match with Charterhouse saw them winners by 17 runs. Earlier in the year Marlborough had defeated them easily, two dropped catches and some indifferent batting settling the issue, but against Bradfield in July they had a terrific game. At lunch time Bradfield had scored 184 for four and seemed well on top; then Garthwaite did the 'hat-trick,' and the last six wickets fell for 9 runs. Thanks to May, who was at his best with 78, Wellington got to within five of the required total when the last man came in, and just on time they got their nose past the post. With the majority of last year's eleven remaining and the feeling that the tide is at last turning, Wellington should be looking forward to next season with some confidence.

From Wellington it seems a natural stage to Bradfield where the averages are designedly not kept—a policy no doubt excellent in intention, but surely unnecessary at a public school. If only as a permanent record, the yearly tables in Wisden are at least desirable. For the first time the school played on their new ground which promises, I am told, to be very good: last summer it had not quite settled down and perhaps this may in part account for the fact that the Bradfield batting, though it looked well in the nets, failed to come up to expectation in the middle: the batsmen rather lacked confidence and resolution. The attack, on the other hand, was well-varied and distinctly strong, had a wholly commendable belief in the value of 'spin,' and generally managed to dispose of the opposition for well under 200. With the fielding keen and the catching safe the ultimate record of five wins to six defeats would have been a good deal better, if only the batting had been a little more reliable.

Crouch, a zealous captain, was a good all-round cricketer, and the same may be said of Shaw and Wells, whilst Breton's bowling, particularly in the earlier matches, was invaluable. Shenen, out of luck and so losing confidence, did not do as well as his abilities warranted. Both Shaw and Crouch made over 50 in the match against Wellington, of which I have spoken already, and Crouch, with seven for 68, had a big hand in his side's thrilling win by one wicket against Radley. Hunt, an improved wicket-keeper, will captain this year's team, and has three old choices to support him.

Radley were rather a disappointing side: slow to get into form they looked for a short time likely to develop well, but flattered only to deceive. My correspondent describes them as 'distinctly patchy,' a verdict which their match scores certainly sustains. With Green again a goodish bowler, Osborne-Smith fastish and, though erratic, dangerous, and three other fair changes, their attack was up to the average, and indeed generally dismissed the opposition for a reasonably small score, but the batting was very unreliable and subject to devastating collapses. Far too much depended upon Adams and Stampa and, well though they did in their different rôles of hitter and sticer, they could not carry the team. Adams still lacks judgment and rather wants the ball to come straight on to the bat, but he played some fine cricket, and, with two years still to run at school, he may, if he will remedy his weaknesses, develop into a really good batsman. Narrowly defeated by Bradfield, Radley were outplayed by Westminster and saw their two-day match with Sherborne limited to a miserable three hours. Adams and Osborne-Smith form a very useful, but small, nucleus for this summer's side.

So we come to London itself and if, as a royal foundation, Westminster is here generally given precedence, it must this year at least yield pride of place to St Paul's. Decidedly one of the best school sides in the country the Paulines had a really splendid season. They led off with six consecutive wins in five weeks—to which, I admit, the effects of the strike may have to some extent contributed. They then played five draws in three of which victory must have been theirs, beat Dulwich, annihilated a somewhat scratch side of Old Wykehamists, and only at the very end of term in what was no doubt a natural reaction did they lose their form and have to haul down their colours to their own Old Boys in a low-scoring match. With such a record it is not surprising that St. Paul's were too good for their school rivals. Leys ran them to a margin of 25 in a low scoring match, but Dulwich were beaten by over 100, and after Killyiek had played grandly for 185 not out in a total of 322 for two, only time saved Bedford from extinction.

At the beginning of the year the bowling prospects were thought uncertain, but in the event the attack was distinctly strong.

Garland-Wells, who bowled nearly a hundred more overs than the average 'stock' bowler, came out with a really fine record—fifty wickets for 15 runs each : right hand medium in pace he could nearly always be relied upon to keep a real length, whilst, when conditions suited him, his late swing was most effective. To support him Kershaw bowled at a good pace and had a convenient way of flicking out the early batsmen ; whilst Barmby and Johnston, two slow bowlers, left and right-handed respectively, generally did what was required of them when the protagonists needed a rest. Keen and accurate fielding helped this good attack, the captain setting the side an infectious example ; and Patterson, for the second year running, kept wicket most efficiently.

There was plenty of body to the batting, even if some of the later men in the order were inevitably short of match practice. Eyles, a rather shaky starter, was most attractive to watch when he got going : Olliff in any ordinary year would no doubt have been the particular star, for he has beautiful wrists, and though his back-play needs strengthening, he could play most punishing cricket with a wide range of strokes. But as things were he had to take quite a back seat to his captain. Killick's figures are not, like last year positively abnormal, but he has fulfilled all the hopes then formed for him and was, to my thinking, definitely the best school batsman of the year. Of his play at Lord's I have spoken elsewhere. Suffice it to add here that I really do not see how he can 'come unstuck' at Cambridge. His bat is straight, he judges the ball early in its flight, moves his feet correctly, is well balanced and always playing a definite stroke : he is equipped for slow and fast wickets alike, for attack and defence, and I do not think he is lacking in confidence. University cricket has been the grave of many reputations but if Killick joins the lost legion I shall hesitate to prophesy again. In the coming summer Patterson succeeds him in the captaincy, and Olliff and three others are also staying on.

From St. Paul's we pass on to Dulwich where the cricket now seems to be quietly but decidedly on the up-grade. Last summer the Dulwich bowling was not strong ; there was no bowler of real pace. Proctor was easily the best and did very well : I should like to see him bowl, for his 'character' stimulates curiosity—"a good right-hand medium bowler with great variety of deliveries (swingers, both breaks and googly, slow to fast medium), coupled with good control of length." My wonder is not that he got thirty-four wickets but that he don't get double as many : but he must have been rather a terror to keep wicket to. Musgrave's swingers were often dangerous at the start of an innings and Hughman's leg-breaks were very useful, but there was really no other change bowling and only the consistent excellence of the Dulwich fielding enabled the attack to do as well as it did.

For this virtue the team owed much to the precept and practice of their captain, Rimbault, who, himself a splendid fielder, inspired his men to emulation. The victory over Bedford by five runs was a fitting reward for his labours. Dulwich had made 186 and Bedford had got to within 40 of that score with half their wickets still in hand, but the Dulwich fielding was so brilliant that fours were simply not to be had. Two brilliant catches adjusted the balance, and then after a final counter-attack another acrobatic feat by square-leg settled the issue. Apart from his captaincy, Rimbault did very well as a batsman and if hardly so sound and consistent as last year, he was again a most attractive player, especially on the offside, as he showed in his innings of 87 in one of the trial games at Lord's. Hughman, the all-rounder of the side, batted very soundly all the season, and Dewey often hit well. All these three scored a century for the school, but there was rather a tail. Hughman captains Dulwich next summer, and four old choices are available.

Westminster are one of the very few teams to play as many as five school matches. Of these they won two last season against Sherborne and Radley and lost the remaining three to Wellington, Malvern and Charterhouse. In their eight club games they scored wins over the Eton Ramblers and their own Old Boys, but went down to Incogniti, Butterflies, M.C.C., and Free Foresters. On the face of it this is a somewhat modest record, and yet my Westminster correspondent, who is not inclined to call his geese swans, gives, in some respect, a cheering account of the side and particularly of its fielding which was far in advance of the usual standard, and of the good leadership and judgment of its captain, Shepley-Smith. The batting showed far more enterprise than has been the case in some recent years, but only too often batsmen would get themselves out by a careless or ill-judged stroke just when their form promised a good score.

Shepley-Smith did not get as many runs as was hoped, but he was the soundest batsman on the side, and his method should stand him in good stead hereafter. Apart from his services as captain, he had the satisfaction of playing his highest innings in a school match, his 53 against Sherborne settling the issue. Haynes proved a more successful batsman : his defence may be insecure, but he hit the ball well and with 90 against Malvern, 59 against Radley, and 28 and 26 out of small totals against Wellington and Charterhouse he was clearly the man for a big occasion. Gardiner also lacked defence despite a fine pair of wrists ; Cook took a long time to find any form and then ended brilliantly with 61 v. Radley and 122 v. O.W.'s.

The bowling was rich in quantity, (all but two of the side were possible changes), but rather lacked quality. Stratford, a slow spin-bowler, was most effective. The modest cost of his victims points to considerable accuracy, and I hear that he had any amount of resolution. Of the others perhaps the best was Foster, a young all-round cricketer of considerable promise. Of a fine fielding side, he was just about the smartest, though Haymes was an active cover and Mordaunt's throwing in from the deep exceptionally good. In their school games Westminster really played better than the bare results suggest, for they held Malvern on the first day and gave Wellington quite a fright by getting six of them out for 50 when 78 runs were wanted to win. The big disappointment was the Charterhouse match in which Westminster, showing no sort of form, were very heavily defeated. Cook will lead the eleven this year, and I hear good reports of the prospective recruits.

Charterhouse are to me a somewhat puzzling side, for their batsmen's form was so inconsistent that it is very difficult to place them at all. Against Westminster, for instance, they played like quite a good eleven and neither Oriel nor the Butterflies would, I fancy, write them down as at all weak, yet they collapsed for 59 against Wellington and showed poor batting against Harrow and Winchester. At the nets, I am told, many of them looked capable enough, but in the middle they lacked 'gumption,' and often got themselves out unnecessarily. Morgan, their captain, and much their best all-round cricketer, lost a good deal of his enterprise, but his defence was very sound; of the other batsmen, whose aggregates for the season were really astonishingly small, much the best was Pearce who, quite young but very promising, played excellently against Westminster and the Grasshoppers.

The Charterhouse bowling consisted mainly of Morgan, who was consistently successful and had very good days against Wellington and Winchester. Slower than he was, Morgan bowled an admirable length and his swing-in from the off always needed watching. Jackson was another steady bowler; Branston could bowl a fine ball, but was far from reliable. In their school matches Charterhouse were outplayed by Harrow, and lost to Wellington by a narrow margin owing to a sorry display of batting. The Winchester match was limited to three hours' play and ended in a draw; Charterhouse bowled quite well, but their batsmen threatened to throw away the advantage won. Vincent Square, as I have said, showed them at their best against Westminster and they won very easily. Franklin is this year's captain and three others of the last team remain.

Leys School had the exceptional number of sixteen fixtures and as they won eight of these and lost only four they were clearly a goodish combination. Had their batting been a little more reliable, they would have been definitely formidable, for their bowling was exceptional and very few of their opponents made many runs against them. Last year I wrote of Raper as a young man of promise, and that promise has now been well fulfilled. Tall and with a high action, he could swing the ball either way and keep a length: a record of fifty-four wickets for eleven runs apiece speaks for itself, and when I add that he was an effective and hard hitting batsman, averaging over 30, one begins to wonder why he did not appear in one of the trial games at Lord's. Brown, quite young, was another all-rounder of high promise who actually headed both the average tables; the third regular bowler was Rocyn-Jones, a left-hander, who improved steadily. Apart from the two young 'stars,' Smith, a capital first-wicket batsman, only needed a little more restraint, and Green, his partner, was an attractive player to watch.

Considering their resources I find Leys' record in school matches rather disappointing: they annihilated Oundle and Felsted, but lost to U.C.S., Bedford and St. Paul's. In this last game, however, they ran that fine side close, allowing them to make no more than 120. In their club fixtures they did excellent performances at the expense of Inogniti and Old Leysians. With both Raper and Brown available this summer Leys have an invaluable nucleus, and I hope the authorities at Lord's will keep their eye on the form of these two young players.

The report from Bedford expresses a certain disappointment that some of the old colours did not train on as well as had been hoped, but there is surely some satisfaction in a record of five wins against two losses out of ten games. Unfortunately the losses were both in school fixtures, Wellingborough beating them by 28 runs, and Dulwich in the thrilling tussle of which I have already spoken. St. Paul's outplayed them, though they could not quite force a win, but Bedford defeated both Leys and Merchant Taylors. The strength of the side lay in the bowling of Bovill, a fastish left-hander who swung the ball late and made real pace off the pitch. He was often most formidable with the new ball, and was probably unlucky not to find a place in some of the trial games at Lord's. At the other end Davison also did well, but of change bowling there was all too little. McVittie was the best batsman, with strokes and a very watchful defence: against Dulwich he played a really good innings; Stewart, too, was sound, and the captain, Kellett, if rather lacking in discretion, could play good forcing cricket. If the batting all through rather lacked quality, the later men had a cheerful way of coming to the rescue when things were going wrong. Altogether a fair average school side, with one really dangerous bowler.

Oundle had a young and inexperienced team; four of their early matches being scratched owing to the strike or the weather, they got a bad start and never subsequently ran into form. Their chief weakness was in bowling, but their batsmen too were unreliable and lacked the confidence and judgment that as a rule only experience can give. Franklin, who made a fine century against Northants. C. & G., came out with quite a good record and the two Johnsons scored fairly well, but there was a long tail. However, with the memory of Wykes, Newton and Mair still fresh in their minds, the men of Oundle will not be discouraged by one season's set-back. With a good fielding tradition and some considerable batting promise in the material remaining, I shall expect a better record this summer.

A line from St. Lawrence, Ramsgate, tells me that the school had a successful season, defeating all their school rivals. In Perfect they had a capital all-round cricketer who might become really good, and Harding, who is still quite young, may develop well as a left-hand slow bowler. I hear that the wickets at St. Lawrence are very fiery: as long as this is so, the school batting must remain hopelessly handicapped: young cricketers, especially, can only learn to bat on good practice wickets: surely a few cart-loads of marl are worth the expense!

St. John's, Leatherhead, if they did not quite fulfil the hopes of their supporters, won two and lost only one of their five school matches. In their captain, Whittaker, they had a capital cricketer, a sound batsman, good medium-paced bowler with a high delivery, and a leader whose enthusiasm always kept his side on their toes. Largely as a result of his example, the eleven fielded splendidly all through the year, earning the warmest praise from visiting teams, and when such fielding exists there can be nothing wrong with the spirit of a school's cricket. Yonge was another good man in both departments, O'Brien, a steady slow-bowler, whilst of the 'new hands' Haworth, who will lead the side this year, showed promise as a batsman.

From Scotland my information is again fragmentary, a fact that I regret all the more, as cricket is obviously gaining steadily in popularity across the border. May I, then, appeal to the authorities at the Scottish schools to overcome their natural modesty and give a fuller account of themselves to Wisden at the end of the coming summer? In the schools championship the Academy finished first and I fancy well deserved their position, if only because they could boast in Tod the best school cricketer that Scotland has turned out for some few years. I was sorry that he was not rewarded by more success in return for his long journey South to play for "The Rest" at Lord's: but his selection for that match was a well-deserved compliment and he can look back to a splendid record in his four school seasons. During those years he has made 2,646 runs with an average of 42 and taken 148 wickets for under 14 apiece! Campbell of Fettes, and Munro of Glenalmond were other good all-round players, and Milligan of Merchiston did well with the ball.

And now my task is over, but I cannot end without tendering to all and sundry of my correspondents thanks, habitual but none the less sincere, for the information without which this article could not be written. For the omissions of which I am sadly conscious I make apology, but plead with others to take the remedy that lies ready to their hands. With the memory of one of Mr. John Buchan's delightful essays fresh in my mind, I am not likely to forget that all too much history is written by "diligent hacks": my hope can be no more than to merit in some degree the epithet.

Played at VINCENT SQUARE, Tuesday, June 22.—Malvern won by six wickets. Good batting by M. F. L. Haymes and N. L. Foster gave Westminster an excellent first innings total, which, thanks mainly to V. C. G. Parry and C. R. Acheson-Gray, Malvern just passed, but the School went down badly at the second attempt before the bowling of W. H. Bradshaw. ## ETON V. WINCHESTER.

Played at WINCHESTER, Friday, Saturday, June 25, 26.—As in the previous year, the game was drawn, Eton again having much the best of the position. Winchester, indeed, narrowly escaped defeat, for with only one wicket remaining they needed 114 runs for victory when stumps were drawn. In disposing of Eton for 76, Winchester seemed to have gained an advantage, but they fell short of even this moderate total, having arrears of 13. Whittaker, taking four wickets for 7 runs, had a big share in their downfall. Eton batted steadily when they went in again. Cecil and Hill-Wood showed admirable form in a partnership of 140, Cecil hitting six 4's. Left with 337 to get, Winchester made a plucky fight, but apart from Kingsley and King, they batted with little success.

HARROW v. WINCHESTER.

Played at HARROW, Saturday, July 17.—Rain spoiled what seemed likely to prove a most interesting finish, Winchester, at the close of a drawn game, needing 104 for victory with six wickets in hand. C. Clover-Brown batted extremely well for Harrow, whose later batsmen found the bowling of P. N. Townsend (six wickets for 50 runs) too much for them.

ETON V. HARROW.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July 9, 10. — Two full days, with play beginning at eleven o'clock, proved insufficient for a definite result, Eton and Harrow for the fifth time in succession being drawn. Both Schools went up to Lord's with good credentials. Eton would have beaten Winchester had time permitted, and Harrow a week before had done some sensational hitting when defeating Harrow Wanderers. To some extent form worked out accurately, Harrow securing on the first innings a lead of 64, but any chance of their beating Eton for the first time since 1908 had disappeared before another wicket fell. Beyond question, most of the batsmen on both sides exercised undue caution. The average rate of scoring worked out at about a run a minute, under conditions entirely favourable to batting. De Zoete and Crawley stood out as notable exceptions from the general type of careful player. No doubt the state of the game warranted restraint among the batsmen at different stages, but de Zoete gave such ample proof of the value of aggression against successful bowlers, that it was remarkable more batsmen did not follow his example.

Eton had five old choices—Hope, Cazalet, Lomax, Hill-Wood and Whittaker; Harrow six—Ford, Crawley, Clover-Brown, Andreae, Carlisle, and Pennefather, and both sides benefited by having a good leaven of seasoned players. Cecil and Ward, a left hander, displayed excellent nerve when Eton lost two of their best batsmen for 32 runs. They faced good bowling of varied type, changed often enough to unsettle the batsmen, and occupied nearly an hour and a half in adding 76 runs. Cecil actually took two hours and a half over his 45, but he saw the score rise from 12 to 141, his untiring defence averting the danger of a serious collapse. De Zoete completely changed the character of the cricket. Patient before lunch, taking twenty minutes over 3 runs, he suddenly started to force the game. He drove with power, hitting ten 4's and scoring 70 runs in fifty minutes. A firm-footed batsman, de Zoete lifted the ball too often for safety and he enjoyed much good fortune in the way lofty drives cleared the fieldsmen, but at last a "skyer" fell into mid-off's hands. After Cecil left, 78 runs came in forty minutes, but at all other periods of the innings, the cricket proved slow. Capel-Cure, a left hander, and Lomax got their runs well.

Of the Harrow bowlers, G. L. Raphael, a brother of A. C. Raphael, who had bowled so finely a year before, used his height, and made the ball swerve at a fair pace. Rome had a curious run up to the wicket, while Robinson pitched his slows well into the air. Pennefather got on some break either way, and after working hard without success, he fully deserved to be the most effective bowler when Eton batted a second time. Andreae, slow right hand, might have been more used as he dismissed Ward cleverly very soon after being first tried.

Eton's innings lasted five hours and Harrow took almost exactly the same time to obtain the lead. When, thanks to Crawley's splendid hitting, Harrow's first wicket made 77 in an hour, Eton had cause for alarm, but Whittaker bowled Lindsay without addition, and when the third wicket fell to a catch at point at 113, Harrow's turn for anxiety arrived. Crawley then nursed the bowling, scoring 83 out of 118 made in an hour and a half before stumps were drawn. He hit his thirteenth 4 in the morning, but then Hill-Wood beat him with a faster ball than usual—a yorker on the leg stump. Fourth out at 127, Crawley, driving especially well, batted freely for two hours. In dismissing this dangerous opponent so early in the second day, Eton had occasion for much relief, as there was no one else who could score fast enough to become troublesome. Andreae and Carlisle added 113 in eighty-five minutes by thoroughly sound cricket for the seventh wicket, and Pennefather and Rome put on 77 in an hour, great enthusiasm being shown during this latter partnership, which secured the lead. Harrow were batting altogether five hours and three-quarters. As was the case twelve months previously, Whittaker did the best bowling in the match. He kept such a wonderfully accurate length, with the ball well pitched up, that, though extremely slow, his left hand deliveries seldom could be punished with any freedom. Hill-Wood, also left handed, bowled medium pace with a swinging overhead action, getting rid of the ball without checking his run. Forbes, de Zoete and Capel-Cure, all right hand, and Ward, left hand medium, seemed useful changes—nothing more.

Eton went in a second time at four o'clock and, though clouds affected the light, Cazalet and Hope cleared off the arrears by good batting. They made 70 in sixty-five minutes against five bowlers. Cazalet went on to complete his 100. Except for a chance at short-leg when 94, he played practically faultless cricket for two hours forty minutes. He hit five 4's, eight 3's, using skill in placing the ball rather than power in hitting. Keenness in the field was always a feature of the match.

Of the 97 matches played, Eton have won 39, Harrow 35, and 23 have been drawn. This is the generally published record, but Harrow men object very strongly to the game in 1805 being treated as a regular contest between the two schools, contending that it is no more correct to count that than the fixture in 1857 which has been rejected.

The one day matches between the two schools during the War are not reckoned as belonging to the regular series.

Twenty-four three-figure innings have now been played in matches between the two schools, as follows:—

183 D. C. Boles	(in 1904), Eton	112*A. W. T. Daniel	(in 1860), Harrow

CLIFTON v. TONBRIDGE.

Played at LORD'S, Monday, Tuesday, July 26, 27. — Persistent rain prevented cricket on Monday and, though Clifton gained a lead of 73 on the first innings, the game had to count as a draw, the rules for a one-day match not operating in regard to the result. On a rather slow pitch from which the ball got up nastily at times, Tegner—missed in the slips off the second ball of the match and enjoying some other escapes—played right through the Clifton innings and scored half the full total. Batting about three hours, the Clifton captain showed most of the left hander's characteristics. He made some admirable cuts, drives and leg hits, his chief strokes being fourteen 4's. H. L. Carr, forcing the game well, played in good style. Clifton were the superior side in the field and, apart from Miller and Holman, the Tonbridge batsmen gave comparatively little trouble, but the follow-on was just saved and then the match ended.

RUGBY v. MARLBOROUGH.

Played at LORD'S, Wednesday, Thursday, July 28, 29. — Thanks mainly to a splendid performance on the part of Leedham-Green, Rugby gained a victory by 112 runs. A left hander, Leedham-Green bowled his slow leg-breaks with such accuracy of pitch that he obtained fifteen wickets—nine in the second innings—for 135 runs. His remarkable work with the ball followed a notable achievement twelve months earlier, when in the match against Marlborough he took eleven wickets. Outside Leedham-Green's bowling the main factors in Rugby's success were the batting of Agnew and Monkhouse. The value of what the early Rugby batsmen accomplished was emphasised by the facts that in the first innings the last four wickets fell for 9 runs, and that the second innings, after the score had reached 154 for five, closed for an addition of 45 runs. Apart from Block, who unluckily played-on, the Marlborough batsmen failed badly on the first day when Bradshaw, with good length off-break bowling, gave Leedham-Green useful help. In the effort to win the match, Marlborough scored freely, but false strokes off Leedham-Green caused the regular dismissal of batsmen just when valuable partnerships seemed in prospect. Marlborough fielded well, but their work never quite equalled that of Rugby, who supported their bowlers splendidly, holding practically every catch offered, and saving many runs by alertness, sure picking up, and accurate returns to the wicket.

CHELTENHAM v. HAILEYBURY.

Played at LORD'S, Friday, Saturday, July, 30 31.—For the fourth time in five years, this Schools' match at Lord's ended in a draw. Rain restricted the playing hours to four and a quarter on the first day, and though a lot happened on Saturday, when Cheltenham tried hard to force a victory, little likelihood of a definite result then existed. Baker, scoring most of his runs on the leg side—in accordance with modern methods,—batted about two hours and a half for 68 runs, the conditions generally favouring the bowlers, who received good support from their field. Stewart kept an accurate length with an appreciable off-break as the pitch dried, and he batted so well, that Haileybury might have secured a useful lead, had he not been beautifully stumped. Three wonderful catches followed. Henderson held one at point; Wilcox took a hard return with his right hand, while Woollatt after running quite twenty yards, secured a big hit near the screen. As Martin did a second smart piece of stumping, Cheltenham owed their advantage largely to effective fielding. Alston, exceptionally tall, bowled too good a length to be hit at all freely, and Colbeck did well with his leg breaks. Then, when the Cheltenham batsmen took risks, Marshall—medium paced right hand—found ready victims apart from Kempster, who played a sound free game for the second time in the match. Improved conditions for run-getting compelled Edwards to delay his declaration. Wordsworth failing, the task of making 183 runs in a hundred minutes became additionally difficult and the game, after a lot of good cricket, had a quiet finish.

LORD'S SCHOOLS v. THE REST.

Played at LORD'S, Monday, Tuesday, August 2, 3.—Outplayed, Lord's Schools suffered defeat by ten wickets. Apart from Tegner, the left hander, who batted well, and in admirable style, they showed to little advantage against Hay, a left hander able to keep a length and flight the ball, and Taylor who bowled very steadily. For their lead of 136, The Rest had to thank Killick. Completing his 100 in two hours on the first afternoon, when he claimed 126 out of 273, Killick received little help on the second morning, the last four wickets falling for 27 runs. Taking out his bat for 137, made without a mistake, Killick was altogether at the wickets three hours and he hit seventeen 4's. Whittaker the slow left-hander and Bradshaw bowled by far the best. Killick alone mastered them, though Valentine, who showed particularly good form, May, and Taylor batted very creditably. Crawley, staying in two hours and hitting eight 4's, relieved Lord's Schools' second innings from insignificance; there was nothing better in the match than his driving. Again helped by very smart fielding in which Killick showed up prominently, The Rest bowlers never looked like being mastered. Facing a light task, Kingsley and Snow batted carefully, taking over an hour to obtain the 48 runs required to win.

THE ARMY v. PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Played at LORD'S, Wednesday, Thursday, August 4, 5.—The Army proved far too strong for the Schools, who, failing badly in batting, suffered defeat by an innings and 67 runs. Of the boys regarded as dependable run-getters, only Kingsley and Killick showed anything like their proper form, and bad judgment in running contributed to a most disappointing display on each day. Wilkinson and Williams, making 95 in fifty-five minutes, assured the Army of a useful advantage, but a collapse ensued until Stanforth and Pank hit up 83 in three-quarters of an hour for the eighth wicket. Though freely punished at times, Whittaker and McIntosh bowled up to their form shown in school matches, and the fielding all round deserved praise, even if some of the boys had done better in previous games. In fact, had their average ability with the bat been displayed, the Schools might have made a big fight instead of allowing the Army a very easy victory.
